FORREST FERGUSON SERIOUSLY HURT AS AUTO UPSETS AVOIDING CRASH

Former President of Bankrupt Ferguson-McKinney Co. Suffers Broken Bones in Accident Near Memphis

WOMAN WITH HIM ALSO INJURED

Miss Gerster Neal, Old Dyersburg, Tenn., Friend, Was on Way to Theater Party With Him.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 2.—Forrest Ferguson, 65 years old, formerly president of the now bankrupt Ferguson-McKinney Manufacturing Co., of St. Louis, is under treatment in the Methodist Hospital here for fractures of an arm, a leg and ribs, and body bruises, suffered yesterday afternoon when an automobile he was driving overturned near Covington, 15 miles from Memphis. His condition is serious.

With Ferguson at the time of the accident was Miss Gerster Neal, 38, of Dyersburg, Tenn., Ferguson's former home. She suffered a severe scalp wound and body bruises and is also a patient at the hospital. Both are reported better today.

Ferguson and Miss Neal, friends for a number of years, were on the way from Dyersburg to Memphis for a dinner and theater party when the accident occurred. As their machine, a heavy sedan, reached a turn in the road Ferguson was forced to swerve to avoid striking another machine traveling in the opposite direction. After leaving the highway, the Ferguson sedan overturned in a ditch.

Ferguson has been spending much time of late near Dyersburg on a 1300-acre farm which he and other members of his family own.

Jury Disagreed at Ferguson's Trial For Fraud in Failure.

Forrest Ferguson, business associate of the late Murray Carleton, is awaiting a second trial, in Federal Court here on a charge of sending a false financial statement through the mails. Alfred F. Baggot, secretary of the Ferguson-McKinney Co., is a co-defendant in the case.

The jury in the first trial, held last February, before Judge Davis, deliberated 52½ hours without reaching a verdict and was discharged. The date of the second trial has not been set, though it probably will be this fall.

The Government alleged at the first trial of the case that Ferguson and Baggot were parties to the mailing of the false financial statements of the company, which failed with a $1,500,000 loss. The two defendants attempted to place sole responsibility for the crash, and alleged criminal acts in connection with the failure, on Carleton, who had been treasurer and financial backer of the company.

MOVIE FLYER HOPES TO HOP OFF FROM HAWAII TODAY

Richard Grace, Failing in First Attempt, Will Start for San Francisco Or Los Angeles.

By the Associated Press.

MANA ISLAND OF KAUAI, Hawaii, July 2.—A hop-off for San Francisco or Los Angeles early tomorrow morning, was scheduled by Richard Grace, a movie stunt aviator, after he had failed today to force his heavily loaded plane into the air.

The plane, weighing more than 4000 pounds, careened along the rough runway and punctured the tire on one of its wheels. Before repairs could be made, the mounting sun had heated and thinned the atmosphere, so that Grace declared a postponement necessary for a take-off.

The aviator plans to fly alone. He will pilot his course with the aid of two magnetic compasses and a speed indicator.

Grace said he would start toward San Francisco, 2400 miles from this village, but if he had enough fuel he would veer to the south and land at Los Angeles, 2600 miles from Mana.

Hurt Chasing Purse Snatcher.

Mrs. Mary Link, 69 years old, a widow, of 1031 Allen avenue, suffered a fractured left arm and lacerations of the face when she fell when attempting to pursue a man who snatched her purse as she was walking on Lafayette avenue, between Seventh boulevard and Broadway, at 10 o'clock last night. The man escaped with the purse, which contained 60 cents.

PROCEEDS OF PROPERTY SALE TO BE DIVIDED 6480 WAYS

Large Number of Heirs to Share in Sum Received for Manhatten Real Estate.

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 2.—Several parcels of lower Manhattan real estate, to be sold at auction Wednesday, will no doubt bring a large price, but it won't look so large when it is cut 6480 ways before distribution under the decision in the partition suit that resulted in the sale.

Ruth Searing Forbes brought a partition suit in the Supreme Court against more than 50 members of old New York families to effect sale and distribution of the property, in which all own a share as heirs of the original owners. One piece of the property, on Grand street, was part of the Bayard east farm in the seventeenth century.

The Court ordered sale by auction and in order to distribute the proceeds equably among the heirs, the total must be first divided into 6480 parts

MEXICO DEPRIVES AMERICAN OIL COMPANY OF RIGHTS

Standard Oil Subsidiary Reports Action of Government in Republic to State Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 2. — The Mexican Government has declared the rights of the Trans-Continental Oil Co., a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, forfeited because the company has refused to comply with the disputed provisions of the Mexican oil laws.

The oil company reported the action to the State Department, it was learned tonight. State Department officials, it was said, would make inquiry through the American Embassy in Mexico City as to the Mexican Government's [illegible] for the action.

VILLAGE SLIDING INTO RIVER

Waters of Mississippi Slowing Destroying Columbus, Ky.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ky., July 2. — The entire village of Columbus, once proposed as the nation's capital, is slowly sliding into the Mississippi River. Continuous cave-ins along the river front have occurred since the April floods, which completely inundated the village, and yesterday a section of earth 40x60 feet crumbled into the river.

Residences near the river front are being torn down to save the material from the water. The inhabitants of the town are in no immediate danger, and it is estimated that several months may elapse before the water completes the destruction which it has begun.

Figures Indicate A Noisy Fourth.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Monday should be an unusually noisy Fourth of July if Commerce Department figures are a correct guide. During the first four months of the year, one million pounds more of firecrackers were imported than in the like period of last year. At the same time, exports of firecrackers jumped, being 3,036,173 pounds against $2,016,738 pounds in the same period in 1926.

JACK DEMPSEY'S BROTHER KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Former Champion Identifies Bodies After Fatal Shooting at Apartment in Schenectady, N. Y.

PUGILIST TO GO ON WITH SHARKEY BOUT

Training for Next Fight Will Be Suspended Until Former Title Holder Recovers From Shock of Tragedy.

By the Associated Press.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Saratoga Lake, N. Y., July 2.—Tragedy struck the camp of Jack Dempsey today and halted the former world title-holder's training for his comeback attempt with Jack Sharkey as his opponent July 21. Dempsey had just returned from two strenuous hours on the road this morning when word came to the camp that John Dempsey, his 38-year-old brother, had shot himself to death in Schenectady after killing his 21-year-old wife, Edna Carlow Dempsey, in their apartment there.

(The ex-champion's correct name is William Harrison Dempsey.)

The fighter raced by automobile with his business adviser, Leo P. Flynn, to Schenectady, where he identified the bodies and made arrangements for sending his brother's to Salt Lake City, Utah, and that of Mrs. Dempsey to Green Island, N. Y.

Tragedy Overcomes Dempsey.

Tears streamed down Jack's cheeks as he sat in the car outside the morgue.

"It is terrible," he said, "but that's life, isn't it?"

John, several years older than Jack, always had been the favorite of the husky younger man, friends said, and had been cared for almost entirely by the former title-holder during a recent protracted illness.

Three years ago, John, who up to a short time ago conducted a gymnasium for boxers in Los Angeles, underwent a serious abdominal operation, Jack said, and at intervals since had suffered from mental depression. It probably was during one of these that his older brother fired the fatal shots, the former champion thought.

Will Not Postpone Bout.

Flynn announced later for Dempsey that the bout with Sharkey would take place as planned despite the tragedy. Jack will not resume training, however, until he has recovered from the shock. Flynn believed Jack would be back to work next Monday.

John Dempsey married his wife in Saratoga three years ago. Her home was in Troy, N. Y. The couple moved to Los Angeles, where their 2-year-old son Bruce was born.

About three months ago, Mrs. Dempsey separated from her husband and went to Schenectady. On renting the apartment in which the shooting occurred, Mrs. Dempsey was reported to have told the landlady she was "trying to keep out of the way" of her husband, and that he had threatened her life three weeks ago. John Followed her there with the expected purpose of opening a gymnasium.

Meets Wife Outside Home.

John met his wife outside the home this morning. After a violent argument in the presence of the landlady, who said Dempsey apeared to have been drinking heavily, John entered the house and was followed shortly by Mrs. Dempsey.

Almost at once, the landlady said, she heard three shots. Dempsey died immediately from a bullet through the right temple. Mrs. Dempsey, wounded in the head and side, was alive when police arrived, but died before medical aid could be summoned. The official verdict of Coroner William C. Treader pronounced the deaths as "murder and suicide."

The blow that fell upon Dempsey today recalled the worries and

WILD WELCOME GIVEN BYRD ON HIS ARRIVAL IN PARIS

ARMY FLYER WITH LINDBERGH ESCORT KILLED IN CRASH

Lieut. Johnson's Plane Thrown Into Nose Dive When Nicked by Rear Machine at Ottawa Field.

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, July 2.—An aerial tragedy marred Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's arrival here today to attend the celebration of Canada's diamond jubilee of confederation. Lieut. J. Thad Johnson, American army flyer, met death when his plane, one of the 12 which escorted the trans-Atlantic hero from Selfridge Field, Detroit, Mich., crashed within view of the Hunt Club landing field, six miles from Ottawa.

Lindbergh and a number of the escorting planes already had landed when the accident occurred. A misunderstanding of Lieut. Johnson's maneuvers was given as the cause.

Plane Nicked From Rear.

According to the pilot of the plane behind him, he started downward as if to land, but suddenly rose again to resume his place in the formation. The plane in the rear nicked the tail of his machine, throwing him into a nose dive, a bare 100 feet from the ground.

Lieut. Johnson was quickly overboard, striving desperately to open his parachute, but the drop was too short. The parachute opened, but not sufficiently to break the fall, and the flyer was instantly killed. His plane crumpled in a cloud of dust, just over the brow of a hill and out of sight of the crowds on the field.

Col. Lindbergh had entered an automobiel and was being whisked away to where Canadian officials were waiting to welcome him. Mounted police surrounded his car, and Lindbergh first heard the news from a Sergeant riding at his side.

Lindbergh Aids in Inquiry.

Only a few words of greeting had been exchanged between the reception committee members and Col. Lindbergh when he broke in: "You will have to excuse me—I want to go and see about the boy who crashed."

He climbed into an open roadster and was taken across the field and over the brow of the hill where the scout plane lay a wreck. Lieut. Johnson's body had been placed in an ambulance, and mounted police and military units held back the crowds.

Maj. Lanphier, United States Army and Group Capt. Scott, Royal Canadian Air Force, joined Col. Lindbergh in asking questions of witnesses and arranging for a formal investigation.

Lindbergh Shows Sorrow.

Then Lindbergh went back to carry out his part of the program, but there was no "Lindy smile." He sat in the car with stern face, coatless and hatless, with goggles pushed back on his forehead, while the crowds, who had not learned of the tragedy, cheered wildly in welcome.

Until Lieut. Johnson's crash came, the day promised to be a brilliant air fete. Crowds and cars lined the great field five miles southwest of the city. For hours the people waited in the sun.

St. Louisan Makes Perfect Landing.

Then the planes were sighted, flying high in four groups of three. They swung down over the city and then stretched into line, the Spirit of St. Louis breaking away from the formation. Col. Lindbergh circled the field once and the crowds cheered as he swept down in his silver plane to a perfect landing.

Air force mechanics rushed out to guide the wings as he taxied to a corner of the field while the army pursuit squadron zoomed and rose over the field with the engines thundering.

Only a small portion of the crowd broke through the lines, and these were mostly held at a

Hero of Trans-Atlantic Flight

COMMANDER RICHARD EVELYN BYRD, U. S. N.

NOVILLE DESCRIBES FLIGHT IN CLEAR AIR, BETWEEN TWO BANKS OF DENSE FOG

By LIEUT. GEORGE C. NOVILLE,
Second in Command of the Monoplane America.

(Copyright, 1927.)

VER-SUR-MER, France, July 2.

GEORGE C. NOVILLE.

YOU will want to ask me right off: "What was it like?" Well, like nothing I have ever felt or have seen in the air, or that I ever dreamed of. Both Commander Byrd and I agree that this trans-Atlantic flight was the weirdest trip we have ever made in all our aviation experience, and if we live for the next thousand years we will never know another flight like it.

It was just a ghostly and unbelievable sort of thing—flying on, on and up there cutting the fog with always more fog or more rain ahead. If the Atlantic can be crossed under such conditions it can be crossed under any conditions. After this trip I cannot have the slightest doubt of that.

There was terrible weather from the beginning. Not bad weather, but terrible weather. If we had waited for days trying to pick particularly bad weather we could not have encountered anything worse. We have not reached Paris, it is true, but I do not believe our flight is in any way a failure. I know it has done a great deal more than can at the present time be estimated. It has demonstrated beyond all debate that it is possible to fly a heavy plane three or four thousand miles without stopping, despite all the obstacles—dense fog and blinding rains—can place in the way.

We haven't had much sleep yet. As a matter of fact, all of us are too keyed up to think much about sleeping yet, so if I wander a bit in telling you of the flight, you can say that that is the reason. But it seems to me that right now you will want to know what happened when we got over France rather than about the weather we encountered in crossing.

We were blind men in the air. That is the whole story.

We were up there in those thick, gagging mists. The rain was slashing against the cabin, blurring the windows and blotting out everything, and our fuel was fading away—four more hours of fuel, then three more—and we couldn't see a thing!

Just before we hit the water we were absolutely as blind as if we were born blind. You can well understand why when we realized we had missed Paris and that we had sent out S O S call. I believe that S O S was the first ever sent in the history of aviation, at least from an airplane.

We saw very little of the continent. Something had gone wrong with the compass, you see. Even though we had made a surprisingly accurate line along the French coast, we had set another course in our try for Paris.

Then the worst part of the whole trip began. Certainly none of us imagined beforehand that we could actually reach France and then be worse off than in mid-ocean. But as we ploughed hour after hour into the murky banks ahead, never finding an opening where we could descend and rarely seeing any lights at all, we all realized that if we didn't get a break soon it might be pretty bad.

Twice, as near as we could

PARIS, July 2.

IN the matter of selecting the weather on our trans-Atlantic flight, we made up our minds that we could only shove off after Lindbergh got back as we thought that was the courteous thing to do.

We waited for the weather until after his reception was over, so that it was reported a number of times that we were going to leave the following morning, but I never gave the word that we were going until 1 o'clock in the morning of June 29. And we went when we said we would.

It was not until then that Dr. Kimball, of the Weather Bureau, and his assistants, Barrett and Rossby, gave us their O. K. Up to that time the weather was reported dangerous.

It was not even then ideal, and they did not promise us much but we were determined that we would not wait for ideal weather. We only wanted an even break. Indeed, if we got a little adverse weather we could prove more.

Weather Forecasts Accurate.

These weather reports deserve the greatest credit for predicting the weather for three flights: Lindbergh's Chamberlin's and ours. In my opinion they did splendidly. This is the first time such weather prognostications have been made, and this beginning is destined to develop eventually into a very efficient and satisfactory meteorological service for the Atlantic.

The Weather Bureau co-operated with us in every way and the Radio Corporation of America did great work, sending reports to the Weather Bureau from trans-Atlantic steamers.

It was raining just before we took off and it was thick and drizzly from the time we left until about 8:30 a. m. For the first few hours we got as much latitude as we could for safety and gave more attention to the safety factor than to speed.

Watched for Nungesser.

We had fairly clear weather until we reached Newfoundland, though at times it was quite rough, especially going over Nova Scotia. We kept a sharp lookout all along the route for Nungesser and Coli. We had always been anxious to search for them and thought there was a slight chance that they might have landed in some rugged place in Newfoundland or Nova Scotia and cracked up their machine.

On the way to Newfoundland we had a splendid opportunity to get some excellent data on the altitude at which to fly in order to get the most help from the wind, in other words, to pick out the shortest air route. If the best advantage is taken of the winds the route can be shortened about 800 miles, and we were anxious that our flight should do something towards contributing to this improvement.

The most difficult thing about these long flights is suspending the great loads in the air. We soon got up to 3000

JOY SUCCEEDS NIGHT OF ANXIETY AS TO FATE OF TRANS-SEA FLYERS

Flowers Showered Upon Aviators as They Drive From Railway Station to Their Hotel.

PRESIDENT GREETS THEM AT PALACE

Pilot Acosta's Collar Bone Broken—Byrd Is Ordered by the Doctor to Take a Complete Rest.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 2.—After a meeting of wild joy with which Paris welcomed them following the night of anguish as to their fate, Commander Richard E. Byrd and his comrades of the trans-Atlantic plane "Americta," began taking stock this afternoon. It was found that Bert Acosta had suffered a broken collar bone, which was set at the American hospital. Commander Byrd, after a careful examination by Dr. Gros, head of the surgical staff, was ordered to take a complete rest. The doctor, however, allowed him to attend the reception by President Doumergue at the Elysee Palace in the afternoon. Lieut. George Noville's knee was injured. Lieut. Bernt Balchen was the only one of the party unhurt.

Landing Was Deliberate.

Commander Byrd looked rather worn when he mounted the steps of the Palace, but greeted the correspondents and photographers with his distinguished smile; then picked out one man who thoughtfully had taken off his hat and gave him a faultless naval salute.

President Doumergue broadened his usually open smile when the "America's" crew were presented by Charge Whitehouse.

"I followed with intense interest every phase of your flight," he said to Commander Byrd. "I watched the end of it with the greatest anguish. I had the latest news brought to me at dinner and I stayed up late in the hope of hearing that you had landed safely."

The President asked several questions concerning the details of the flight and wanted especially to know whether the landing was accidental or intentional.

"It was intentional," replied Commander Byrd. "I sought a place near the shore to save my ship. I still had gasoline for half an hour's flight."

It is probable that Acosta's collar bone was fractured when the America landed in the water at Ver-Sur-Mer, but he cannot vouch for it, as he professes to have been unaware of this until the surgeon discovered the injury this afternoon.

Crowd at Railway Station.

It is possible that some of the damage might have been done at the St. Lazare railway statin here today when a crowd of 10,000 persons risked crushing Byrd and his companions in their eagerness to get a sight of them and acclaim them. The aviators and their friends were pulled, pushed and hauled about and only with the greatest difficulty could they make their way to the waiting motor cars. In the crush much glass was broken, and a piece of it got into the eye of Mrs. Richard D. White, wife of the American Naval Attache.

The airmen were taken completely by surprise when they found the station on their arrival from Caen so crowded that some spectators were pushed off the platform. The aviators became separated on their way out of the station but were brought together again through a lucky meeting with Charles A. Levine, who crossed the Atlantic in the Columbia with Clarence D. Chamberlin. When they reached the open air they heard the roar of the thousands pressed into the small space in front of the station. The automobiles made their way painfully through the throng and finally arrived at the Continental Hotel, where the aviators took up their quarters in the apartment of Rodman Wanamaker, the backer of the expedition. At the hotel they

CREW OF "THE AMERICA" WRITE FOR THE POST-DISPATCH OF THEIR HARROWING EXPERIENCES AND NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH

BYRD PROPOSED CAPTIVE BALLOONS TO MARK PARIS

Anticipated Danger of Fog, Floyd Bennett Discloses, and Suggested Way to Overcome It.

DOESN'T KNOW WHY PLAN WAS DISCARDED

F. Trubee Davison Says More Powerful Lights Must Be Developed to Penetrate Mists.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Long before the take-off from Roosevelt Field, Commander Richard E. Byrd considered the possibility that dense fog might prevent a safe landing of his heavy monoplane at Le Bourget.

This was disclosed today by Floyd Bennett, who piloted Byrd's plane on its North Pole flight, as he waited patiently in his room at St. Vincent's Hospital for personal word from his friend. Bennett was injured in a minor crash of the "America" on a test flight.

"Several months ago, when the "America" was nearing completion at the Fokker factory," he said, "the commander and I considered the possibility of having balloons strung up over Le Bourget flying field to guide us to our landing.

"It was planned to have a whole series of balloons placed at different levels from 15,000 feet down. In this way the chances were fairly good that at least one would be outside the foggy area, and by flying at different altitudes it would be possible to pick up the exact location of the field.

"We also thought of having the French place flags in the balloons —a white flag to let us know if the fog bank was high enough to permit us to come down and land under it and a red flag if the fog hung too low to permit landing.

"Why this scheme was not carried out I do not know. On nine days out of ten I think it might work. From newspaper reports of the flight, however, it looks as if conditions were so bad that nothing would have been of much use."

The America's epic voyage has brought sharply to public notice aviation's necessity of developing means for fighting fog. The problem long has been all too familiar to pilots and others directly interested in flying. Some have advanced the idea of devising apparatus to dispel fog, but most have dismissed this as visionary.

Initial progress in overcoming fog—speeded greatly by development of regular mail and passenger air lines—has been along two lines: First, development of ground lights whose beams can to a certain extent pierce fog; second, use of radio as a means of directional guidance.

The United States and Great Britain have gone farthest in this work, but are not yet able to combat the worst fogs. Radio guidance may well keep a plane on its course for thousands of miles, but if the journey ends in such fog as Byrd encountered over France, only new lighting methods would permit landing. Assuming that radio could let a pilot know when he was directly over a field, landing would still be extremely hazardous if he could not see the ground.

14 PLANES IN RELIABILITY TOUR LAND AT PITTSBURG

One Gets Off Course, Goes Up Allegheny River and Is Three Hours Late.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, July 2.—All the 14 airplanes in the National Reliability tour were accounted for in their flight here from Baltimore when Louis G. Meister landed at Rodgers Field, more than three hours late today. He told airport officials his plane got off its course and went up the Allegheny River.

Eddie Stinson, piloting a Stinson-Detroiter monoplane, tonight had 3183 points. His closest rival was Harvey C. Mummert, piloting a Mercury, with 2628.8 points.

The flyers will remain in Pittsburg until tomorrow when they will take off for Cleveland. An informal dinner followed by a theater party was given in their honor tonight.

John P. Wood, piloting a Waco plane, the first to arrive, gave the crowd a thrill before he landed. Soaring out of the sky he came within five yards of the ground at headlong speed but swooped up suddenly and circled the field before landing. Lloyd Clevenger was second and John P. Riddle, third, with E. W. Cleveland, the latter a Pittsburg resident, fourth.

RICHARD E. BYRD.

AT 2:30 yesterday morning, in the pitch dark and rain pouring and the clouds so low there was no possibility of seeing anything, our trans-Atlantic flight ended in the sea, 200 yards from shore, near the village of Ver-Sur-Mer.

We landed voluntarily, choosing the sea as safer than unknown ground, and then swam and paddled that 200 yards to shore, while our plane, the America, filled and partially sank. But now our plane is safe on land, though badly damaged, and we are as nearly all right as four men could be who went through such a strain as we did through those 40 hours.

Of our flight, these are the salient facts that stand out in my mind now:

We flew more than 40 hours and through 19 consecutive hours we never saw land, sea nor ship.

Right near the start we feared we would have to dump half our gasoline and turn back, but, luckily, just at the critical moment, our ship lifted and Lieut. Noville, who was all set to empty one gasoline tank at least, held his hand.

Completely Lost.

During the last six hours of our flight our earth induction compass, for some unknown reason, was thrown out of position and before we knew it we had swung in a half circle out of our course, and to state it frankly we were completely lost.

Once before during the day we had become much alarmed for we found we had drifted further south than we expected, and it was only by asking with our radio what our position was that we were able to get a reply and shape our course. As it was we altered our course considerably from that originally set, and instead of steering for Ireland, as we planned, decided to shape our course to Finisterre.

That was entirely successful, and we arrived over the region of Brest with everything in good order. Then after so much of our voyage was completed we got into trouble. I do not make any effort to say where we flew exactly. We were there in the dark steering by a compass which had gone crazy.

Twice Near Paris.

We thought we were going over Paris at least twice in those five hours of wandering in the pitch blackness with the rain pouring.

We thought we were going right but we were not. At one point I think we were only a few miles from Le Bourget, but we could see nothing.

There was no way for us to know where we were going. Because of the lowness of the clouds and the darkness, we were hopelessly lost. We must have been near Paris, the city of light, but we saw no light. We saw nothing. We did not know whether we were over town or country over fields or mountains. We never once saw the lights of Le Bourget. We never once saw the Eiffel tower. We never once saw anything of Paris.

Once we were right near our goal, with enough gasoline to fly three hours, or nearly 300 miles and we could not make the 10 miles which separated us from the flying field for which we were bound.

It did not take long for us to see we had missed Paris and were just wandering around. Then we saw our compass hand had gone wrong.

We do not know yet what was wrong with it. We do not know whether if it had behaved we could have landed in that inky blackness.

There we were. We sent out one message about 1 o'clock that we were lost but could get no reply. No one of us four had any idea where we were or where we were going. Lieutenant Balchen was doing the piloting. He did as well as anyone could have done for we were in a great prison of darkness and we could not see our way out.

And then came the surprise of our lives. We saw sea beneath us. We did not know where we were. We know now we had done a half circle and come back doubling on our tracks back over the coast, not so far from where we had crossed it five hours before.

Then we knew that in one hour or perhaps half an hour, we could go no further because our gasoline supply would be exhausted. We might at any moment have had to make a forced landing.

In the pitch darkness we could make out nothing of the countryside. We could see it was high tide and that the shore was so covered with water that there was no beach to land on.

I then took the decision to land on the sea and get ashore as best we could. I told the others what I wanted to do. I told them it was less dangerous than coming down in an utterly unknown land, less dangerous for us as well as for those we might hit if we came down in a town. I was convinced it was the safest and wisest course to take. It was risky, but less risky than coming down anywhere else and the decision justified itself by its success.

The plane was partially wrecked and its fuselage damaged, but I think we will be able to mend her up again. The French air service and the marine authorities, who are taking care of the plane, have been very kind and very skillful.

The landing gear was stripped the moment the plane struck the water and when she made a second dip there was a bump which shook every man's teeth loose.

Norville, Bert Acosta and Balchen had been rendered practically deaf by the strain of the long flight, and as none of us could hear the others, each thought he alone was safe.

But our little rubber rafts behaved admirably. We got out of the plane everything we wanted and then we started for shore. And we landed safely.

That is the outline of the story I have to tell today. In another article I will give the details of the flight over the Atlantic. I might say we had rain, wind and fogs all the way across the ocean. We could not get out of the fog. We went up, but there we found fog, too. Most of the time we flew at 10,000 feet. During the ocean flying Acosta did most of the piloting, Blachen taking over the controls when we hit land. It was he who did the landing on the water, and it was admirably done.

There was no part of the flight in which we did not have difficulties.

Estimate of Distance.

The compass worked well until we hit France, but at that we got far off our course.

We figure we flew in all some 4200 miles.

One thing stands out about the flight and that is the behavior of our motors. They worked perfectly all the time and never once showed the slightest error or failure.

Our radio proved its value, for it showed it is practicable to keep more or less in touch with ships at sea and thus help keep on the course.

I think that perhaps our effort to keep away from freezing weather might have had to do with our getting further south than we should have. Once ice formed on the motors and we were, of course, worried about the effect the ice might have on our propellors.

The greatest surprise and greatest thrill of the whole trip was when we found ourselves over the water and knew we were not far from Deauville.

There is much to be told about our flight as a whole, but the memory of that five hours in the pitchy darkness, the agony of that experience, still holds my mind and I cannot think of much else.

For the sake of comparison, I can say that nothing in my North Pole flight, no hard experience, no strain came anywhere near equalling what we endured in that aimless flight over France, lost and almost helpless.

When we landed we had enough fuel to have gone only 30 more miles.

As for our future plans, they have not yet taken shape.

POPE DECORATES DE PINEDO

ROME, July 2.—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian aviator, who recently completed a four-continent flight embracing Africa, North, South America and Europe, was decorated by Pope Pius today with a gold medal in commemoration of his notable exploit.

His Holiness took occasion to pay tribute to the recent victories of American aviators, particularly the heroic flight of Commander Byrd and his companions, whose daring he said had aroused the greatest admiration everywhere.

feet which, in my opinion, is a remarkable demonstration, considering the heavy load aboard.

Of course, we could have taken considerably more gas if we had left the radio out, taken only two men, and not taken 300 or 400 pounds of emergency equipment, mail, food, medical supplies, etc. We deliberately sacrificed the cruising radius in an effort to provide for every emergency, just as commercial planes of the future must do.

Fighting the Fog.

Now that it is over I am glad we had such difficult weather conditions, because our flight proves what an airplane can survive, and I believe we learned something about what to do in such bad weather. For example, when flying for hours through or over one layer of clouds with another layer above the only possible way to account for the wind drift is to take radio bearings from ships. This could readily be so worked out that bearings could be procured for the whole flight.

In another article I shall go more fully into this matter of wind drift and position, for in those 19 hours when we saw neither water or land and seldom even the sky I realized more fully than ever how important to trans-Atlantic flying this question is. We had fog clouds practically the whole way, even before we reached Newfoundland and until we came down at Ver-Sur-Mer.

Rainbow About Plane's Shadow

For today I shall confine myself to describing as well as I can the trip itself and leave its lessons for another time. As I looked through the trap door when passing north of Halifax the shadow of the "America" showed clear on a cloud below us and there was around it a very beautiful rainbow that remained with the plane. I could not help but think it was a good omen. Little did we imagine the struggle that lay before us.

Soon after we got over Newfoundland I saw a big stream of oil floating aft on the deck. I thought it was an oil leak, and a bad one, which if true would place us in a very serious predicament. It called to my mind an oil leak we had on the Josephine Ford when we were one hour from the North Pole and when we thought there was not the slightest possibility of getting back.

Immediately I got hold of Noville, who was forward, and we found it was not a leak, but that he had spilled some oil in pouring it into the engines.

Then began those 19 hours from the time we met the fog over Newfoundland until we came out of it. In my log I find this note, which was made then: "I take my hat off to the boys. Their efficiency and calmness are marvelous."

44 Gallons of Gas An Hour.

Several hours after leaving Newfoundland I got a note from Noville giving the amount of gasoline left. I made some quick calculations and found that we had burned 44 gallons of gas an hour, that going on at anything like that rate of consumption and with the winds in any way against us it would be impossible to reach the other side. We had gone too far to turn back. Should our weather map be incorrect we would get on the northern side of the storm area or the southern side of the high-pressure area and the winds would probably be against us and we would certainly have to make a forced landing in the Atlantic.

I did not tell the boys this because there was no use worrying them, but for hour after hour I was worrying whether the winds were with us. I knew that the higher we flew the greater the winds we would have, if the weather map was correct. If not correct, the higher we flew the more we would probably be held back. We chanced everything on flying high and so attempted to keep over the fog clouds as much as possible.

Flying Blindfolded.

When the time came for the sun to set we had just managed to get above the highest tips of the great clouds. The sun went down in a blaze of glory. Then began a great struggle during the hours of that first night to keep out of the clouds from the time the banks stretched above us and we had to fly blindly with the instruments.

I couldn't help but admire the way Balchen and Acosta kept at their jobs. It was a great comfort at this time to get some radio messages. The radio worked splendidly all the way across and Noville deserves the greatest possible credit.

Although still in the clouds when the dawn broke the light was very welcome. All that day we had only very occasional glimpses of the sun and sometimes in the fog we could barely see the wing tips of the plane.

When we got above the clouds there were at times some terrible views. We would look hundreds of feet into fog valleys—dark, ominous depths.

At times the cloud peaks on the horizon looked exactly like a land of mountains. At other times they took on the appearance of a beautiful lake or a river which showed blue against the gray of the clouds around.

A Happy Mistake.

Once when we were flying at an altitude of about 10,000 feet water was dripping into our cabin from the extremely dense fog. We got a radio message from the steamer Ulgaland, which told us that our signals were coming so strong that we must be very near them and asked if we could see them. They said they, too, were covered with fog. They gave us a radio bearing and soon after that we got a message from the steamer Paris, which also said that our radio was so strong that we must be near them. They gave bearing that verified our calculation and told us the clouds were low and the wind from the west. This last information was very encouraging.

I asked Noville for another report on gas and to my great joy found that we had many hours' supply of gas left. I got together with him and found we must have made some mistake in the first estimate given me. We had enough gas to take us far beyond Paris.

When finally we saw water it was indeed a most pleasant sight. It was still cloudy, but we could get glimpses of the sun through the clouds. We checked the drift and speed very carefully from then on until we struck land. We did not sight any ships until we got quite near land, then we passed a large number of them.

Sighted Cape Finisterre.

We were naturally delighted when we sighted Cape Finisterre. Then we began receiving radio messages from all directions. It seemed as if the whole of Europe was trying to get in touch with us.

I set a course for Paris and checked very carefully on the cities and points of land we should see.

Soon it began to get dark and the weather so rainy and thick at times that we could not check on the lighted cities below us. I was not apprehensive about hitting our objective, because we had done pretty well with our compasses over 3000 miles and I saw no reason why we should not steer accurately the remaining 300 miles.

We saw some bright beacons ahead at about the time we should be at Paris, when I was so confident that we were there that I wrote a radio message for Noville to send reporting to Mr. Wanamaker that Paris was in sight. But when we reached the bright lights we found to our great astonishment that we had come to some amusement resort on the water.

Compass Took Them in Circle.

Our compass had taken us in a circle instead of in a straight line; but it was difficult to tell whether the circle was to the right or the left and impossible to know its diameter. So we found ourselves in a most disconcerting predicament, not knowing our position with certainty, our gas giving out before morning and unable to see land beneath us, as it was a very dark night and the weather was thick.

I judge that we had circled left, and I more or less guessed our position and set another course for Paris. This was a very critical time, indeed, because, if after flying several hours and missing Paris, we might have a forced landing on our return and not only smash the plane to pieces but run a big chance of injuring some one beneath us.

It is certain that our compass went bad when we aimed for Paris the first time, and Balchen afterwards checked with me that something seemed wrong with the compass during that time.

But when I set the second course I checked both compasses together and found they were O. K. I do not believe there was anything wrong with the compass—it was some local affection, probably from some magnetic material that had been moved in the ship.

Heard at Le Bourget.

We continued our course until we thought we could be at Paris, but the weather was so thick that I believe that if we had been very close to the beacon at Le Bourget we could not have seen it.

We have been told that our engines were heard there with a sound intensifier but I am not able to confirm that statement.

We reached the point where if we went on any further and missed Paris we would be likely to have a forced landing before our return to water. It would be utterly impossible to land on unknown land without smashing everything to pieces.

We therefore determined to head for water and land there the best way we could. That we would not be able to see water very clearly we knew, and I do not believe I ever heard of anybody landing on a pitch dark night on water without a light. But at any rate, it was our only hope.

Praises Comrades' Courage.

I want to pause here again and mention my shipmates. Here they were faced with a situation where the chances of survival were small, yet they continued to function efficiently.

At the same time that I admired them beyond words, I felt that the entire responsibility was mine—that it was I who had invited them to make this flight with me and that missing Paris was my fault.

I will not relate here the thoughts that went through my head at this time, but I will say that I thought much of the families of these fellows and I thought of their great delight when I invited them to make this trip with me.

The strain was prolonged and one had lots of time to think things over. To make matters worse, the weather still was squally and pasty. We began to make preparations for the end and put some of our scientific data in places where we thought there would be the least chance of their being injured by water.

I set our course to take us back to the amusement resort we had seen, because at least there was some light there. We

Acosta Writes of Hours of Fog; And Insistent, Futile Radio Calls for Landing Directions

By BERT ACOSTA,

Pilot of Commander Byrd's Plane, the America, on the Trans-Oceanic Flight.

(Copyright, 1927.)

VER-SUR-MER, France, July 2.

BERT ACOSTA.

SEVENTEEN hours of continuous fog over the Atlantic Ocean, then a brief spell of visibility followed by seven hours of wandering aimlessly over Normandy, and finally the descent on the sea 200 yards from the beach in this small French resort.

Such briefly is the story of our flight from Roosevelt Field to the mainland of Europe. It was a strenuous, harassing and at times hair-raising flight. We had the worst trip ever encountered by aviators, certainly the worst of my experience.

It is true that we did not reach the ultimate objective—Paris—but none the less the venture, in my estimation, proved a striking success, and Byrd, Noville and Balchen are of the same opinion. The world will judge the results, but it is fair to say the experience gained on the America's trip brings us measurably nearer to successful commercial and trans-Atlantic air service.

To all of us our last few hours in the air were heart-rending. Since we hopped off from Roosevelt Field, Wednesday, we have had to face some of the toughest weather that may be expected at this time of the year.

The Newfoundland Banks served up one of its typical summer fogs, but where we were unlucky was that we did not shake off the dense opaque mass for 17 hours.

No Glimpse of Sea.

We threshed our way through the murkiness for an interminable time, never catching a glimpse of the sea below us, sometimes with the tips of the wings beyond the range of our vision.

We climbed sometimes as high as 11,000 feet in an attempt to leap over the fog, but the banks were too high for us. We varied our altitude continually, but I do not believe we were ever lower than 1000 feet above the invisible sea.

Our wireless spoke some ships, but naturally we sighted none during this impressive drive through the fog, and even when there was rain and there was a brighter zone, the sea seemed deserted until just as we were approaching the English Channel.

But all along we made good time with a steady 100 miles an hour and as we neared the French coast our spirits were the highest for we were confident we would make Paris on scheduled time. Our three engines worked with marvelous regularity, never giving us a moment's nervousness and after weathering the Atlantic in one of its worst moods, the final stages of the flight seemed like child's play.

We were soon to be disillusioned. The heavy weather forced us to take a southerly course toward the channel and we crossed the French coast near Cape Finisterre, about 8 o'clock. From then on our troubles increased.

We had expected to battle our way from the American continent to the mid-Atlantic when the monoplane was most heavily freighted with fuel, and the notorious conditions in the neighborhood of Newfoundland had to be faced, but to encounter such dirty weather within sight of our goal, was a cruel blow.

We could have reached Paris all right had not our compass gone out of action. I believe it became magnetized. At any event, we found ourselves going around in circles for hours in the midst of fog, heavy winds and rain.

Noville called insistently for landing directions, but we gained no aid from the radio in this connection. We roamed aloft, completely blinded by the rain and mist, fighting head winds, and lacking a sense of direction, searching vainly for a haven.

I do not know how near we got to Paris, but finally as the gas was running low Byrd decided to try descending on the sea. Any attempt to come down in the mist on broken ground might well have brought a disastrous end to the flight.

Finally, at a time I estimate to have been about 2 o'clock, Balchen and myself brought the plane down here, 200 yards from the shore in about five feet of water. It was a bumpy finish to the flight, and our landing wheels were broken.

The water immediately rushed in, but we were able to pump up our rubber boat and row ashore, taking with us our American flag, all the mails we carried, and our charts. Later we dragged the plane out into the sands and salvaged everything it was necessary to remove.

It was nearly three hours before anyone here reached us. Then we walked to the lighthouse on the hill, 300 yards away. It was the lights here that attracted us to this landing place, and here we have been very hospitably treated. We have especially appreciated the chance of getting several hours' of undisturbed sleep. The noise of the three engines which had been roaring in our ears for 42 hours temporarily deafened all of us, but we have now recovered and none of us suffered more than a few slight bruises.

Our terrible fight against the weather exhausted all of us and our comfort was not increased by the fact that we consumed all our food in the first 12 hours and had had nothing to drink since noon Thursday. However, our intense interest in every phase of the flight kept us keyed up and if physical endurance alone had counted we could have gone much farther than Paris.

In fact if we had been given reasonable weather we could have traveled 4200 miles.

Success With Radio.

Noville was wonderfully successful with the radio, never once losing touch with the outside world which was obscured by the maddening fog, rain and mist. Only when we were somewhere between Paris and the coast in the last few moments of the flight, did the apparatus go out of action. This was due to one of the plugs being knocked to the floor of the monoplane. It was impossible to effect repairs at that time.

I consider that the flight has yielded a lot of valuable scientific data. If it has proved anything it has proved that the Atlantic can be flown in the most adverse conditions imaginable. We felt we were scientifically cradling the world's future trans-Atlantic commercial service, and each of us appreciated the value of the contribution we were attempting to make to the solution of the problem of long distance flying over ocean wastes where winds are tricky and fog and sleet come down to combat the efforts of science.

came out of the fog and saw it several times from above. We circled slowly around and attempted to find some landing place near, but there was none.

Guided by Lighthouse.

The only other thing we could see was some revolving light some distance away. We made for it, hoping that the flashes of this light would enable us to see the water sufficiently to judge our distance above it when we came down. But when we got there we found that the beams of light traveled so rapidly over the water that they were of no use to us.

We had brought with us for navigation purposes some bombs which would ignite on striking water and give light for a few minutes. Our gas was getting low and we decided to try a landing. Balchen was at the wheel.

Plane Filled With Water.

We came down as slowly as possible without losing flying speed and falling into the water. The wheels touched first and were shorn off the fuselage. A second or two afterward there was a smash and the whole plane instantly filled with water.

Noville says that he saw me shot out of the window, out of which I was looking to try to judge the distance above the water. I found myself swimming around and swam back to the window and heard Noville calling for me.

I yelled to him but was not sure he heard me. But I could dimly see him getting out of the window on the other side. He afterward told me that the hours of roaring engines had deafened him, so that when I called him he could barely hear my voice.

Rounding Up the Crew.

Seeing that he was safe I swam forward to the cockpit. Reaching in for Balchen I found him extricating himself in a dazed condition. He also was deaf, which I did not realize at the time.

I yelled at the top of my voice for costa but got no answer. I thought he was pinned somewhere under the water. We looked in the cabin, but could not see him and thought that he might have been thrown clear and stunned. We continued to yell for him and looked around, but could not find him.

It was very dark. The plane was floating with a wing under the water, which meant that the whole of the fuselage was under water also. Presently Acosta appeared, and, believe me, I was the happiest man in the world.

Our emergency compartment with equipment for use in case of a forced landing at sea was placed where we thought there would be the least chance of its getting under water. Our calculations were right. The top of the compartment was clear.

Rubber Boat Pumped Up.

Noville ripped it open and was soon getting out our rubber boat while we were engaged forward. With some difficulty, we climbed on top of the wings and started pumping air into the boat. As every one was stiff and bruised, this was not an easy thing to do.

The great tank, which was now empty of gas, was holding the plane up, and that both pleased and helped us. We landed when the tide was high and I believe we were in not more than 10 or 15 feet of water.

With grunts and groans we embarked in our rubber boat and rowed ashore. We carried the boat up the beach and headed for the nearest light which seemed to be about a mile away.

Light-Keeper Aids Them.

When we reached the little village, we found it was not easy to rouse the inhabitants. The houses had fences around them and the gates were locked. We jangled the doorbells, but to no avail.

Finally we went to the lighthouse and found the lighthousekeeper and his wife awake. I think they first thought we were questionable characters—we certainly looked it, wet and bedraggled.

But when they found we had landed from America, there was great excitement and from then on we received the kindest, most courteous and hospitable attention possible, from the people of the village, which happened to be Ver-Sur-Mer.

As long as I live, I shall never forget them, and as I thanked my host on leaving he said that, not only had he done this for me, but had done it out of affection for America.

MARRIAGE LICENSES DECREASE

3908 Issued in First Half of Year —Drop of 295.

The availability and desirability of jobs are the barometer of marriages, Marriage License Clerk Ruedi remarked yesterday in announcing that only 3908 licenses had been issued this year, as compared to 4203 in the first six months last year.

Business conditions, he considered, explained the decrease of 295. The largest decrease was in June, when 1242—105 less than in June, 1926—obtained licenses.

REPRISAL THREAT MADE TO GET NEW U. R. FRANCHISE

Reorganizers Set Time Limit for Acceptance of $60,000,000 Valuation at 7 Per Cent.

THEY SEND LETTER TO MAYOR MILLER

Threaten to Ask State Commission to Allow Higher Valuation on 8 Per Cent Basis.

If by July 15, the city and car riders have not shown a disposition to grant the 30-year franchise which he has demanded, J. K. Newman, of New Orleans and New York, professional reorganizer of bankrupt street railways, will proceed to reprisals which he threatened in an interview in the Post-Dispatch on April 1.

At that time he declared that unless the car riders granted the St. Louis Public Service Co.—the company he has organized to bring the United Railways out of receivership—a 30-year franchise with a guaranteed return above all expenses equivalent to 7 per cent on a valuation for the property at $60,000,000, he would appeal to the Missouri Public Service Commission or the courts, if necessary, and there get as high a valuation and as high a return as he could. He added that he had reason to believe that he could get as much as 8 per cent on $75,000,000.

Mayor Miller now has made known that he has received a letter signed by Newman, F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank, and three other members of the Reorganization Committee declaring that after July 15, they would cease to negotiate with the city for a new franchise, based upon "service-at-cost" and a valuation of $60,000,000.

Effect of Franchise.

As the Post-Dispatch pointed out last Monday, the 8-cent fare granted by the Public Service Commission to become effective next Tuesday, has established a high earning power for the common stock of the new railways company through the control of which Newman, Watts and their associates stand to make a profit of many millions of dollars.

The urgency for a franchise from the reorganizers' standpoint is that it would make the company securities immediately marketable, thus enabling Newman and Watts to cash in, if they desired, and get their profit quickly, as quickly as did Charles A. Munroe in Laclede Gas Light Co.

Mayor Miller said today that he could not conclude any negotiations with the reorganizers by July 15. In the first place, any agreement was subject to ratification by the Board of Aldermen and the board is in vacation until September. Furthermore, he said, he has not abandoned his position that the earning of the company upon valuation should be 6 not 7 per cent.

Text of Newman Letter.

Following is the text of the letter received by Mayor Miller from Watts, Newman and three other members of the reorganization committee:

"During the period commencing approximately 18 months ago your administration has been engaged in the task of drafting a franchise, known as the 'service-at-cost' franchise, with the view of having it accepted by the St. Louis Public Service Co. (organized by this committee to acquire and operate the properties now operated by the receiver of United Railways Co. of St. Louis). The undersigned committee stated in the press and also through its representatives that it would be willing to accept a franchise in such manner as to bind the said new company in the event of an agreement upon mutually satisfactory terms.

"During the month of June, 1926, you circulated for general discussion a tentive draft of a franchise prepared by the city law department and C. E. Smith, consulting engineer of the city. At that time this committee felt that with a few minor changes such franchise would be acceptable to it. Among the provisions left blank in this franchise draft were the initial 'property value' and the rate of return for the readjustment period of five years. In an earnest effort to settle the transportation problem, but only on the basis of an early consummation, the committee stated with respect to these essential points, that it would, if the city wished to enter into such a franchise agreement promptly agree (1) upon a 7 per cent rate of return for the said readjustment period, although such rate of return is the minimum set by the Public Service Commission of this State, and (2, upon an 'initial value' equivalent to the sum of the value ascertained by the Public Service Commission for rate making purposes as of Jan. 1, 1919, plus expenditures since that date for additions and betterments to the property, which sum is at least $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 less than the value which would be determined were the valuation pressed to a conclusion.

"A long period of time has elapsed since the committee stated its position relative to your tentative proposal as set out in said franchise and not only has no apparent progress been made since that time but it does not apear at the present time that there is any immediate prospect of the administration's taking this matter up actively with a view of consummating the passage of any such ordinance. Not only is it impractical for this committee to consummate its arrangements to purchase the property while such unaccepted offers are outstanding, but we are advised that it is legally imposible to bind the new company by any offer made by the committee and unaccepted prior to the time when the property is acquired by the new company.

"Accordingly, we feel it necessary to notify you that any and all offers made by or on behalf of this company must be considered to terminate not later than July 15, 1927. The adjourned date of sale has been set for Aug. 1, 1927, and it is necessary that all outstanding offers be terminated a reasonable period before that time in order that the financial requirements for the actual purchase of the property may be arranged.

ST. LOUISANS BEGIN EXODUS FOR FOURTH

Thousands Take Advantage of Two-Day Vacation; Sane Celebrations Scheduled.

There has been a general exodus from St. Louis of holiday makers who will celebrate the Fourth of July by visiting the hills, fields and streams of the surrounding country or motoring to other cities.

Independence Day, by coming on Monday has given a two or two and one-half day vacation to thousands.

Pastors of some churches will deliver patriotic sermons today.

Safety-first warnings have been issued, the most important of which is to get immediate medical attention in case of powder burn from fireworks or firearms. Swimmers and those going boating also have been warned to be careful.

56 Treated for Injuries.

Fifty-six injuries due to Fourth of July fireworks celebrations have been treated at City Hospital since June 26, according to the record there last night. Two serious accidents were reported at Central Police Station last night. Solomon James, 15 years old, 3311½ Laclede avenue, suffered a wound in the right leg from the discharge of a blank cartridge, and Frank Richardson, 14, suffered a like injury in the left hand. Other injuries were powder burns. One boy, Jake Gerstein, 14, suffered an injury to the right eye by a torpedo.

WOMAN, 65, SHOT AND BLINDED IN ATTACK AT HOME

Miss Katherine Greene, Neighbor of William Davis, Mentioned in Hicks Murder Case, Wounded.

POLICE USED FARM TO WATCH SUSPECT

Assailant Tiptoes to Her Bedroom and Fires While She Is Sleeping — Her Condition Grave.

Miss Katherine Greene, 65 years old, whose home in St. Louis County was used as a base of surveillance during the Hicks murder investigation, was blinded and perhaps fatally wounded early yesterday when someone tiptoed to her second floor bedroom and shot her while she slept.

Miss Greene's small farm, at Carson road and North avenue, directly faces the home of William Davis, named by a Coroner's jury as an accomplice in the murder of Attorney Clifford M. Hicks, April 30. During the ten days or more when Davis' place was under scrutiny, watchers were posted back of the heavy foliage fronting Miss Greene's three-story frame house.

Police Watched From Farm.

The elderly woman, who painted landscapes when she was not engaged in farming, told neighbors at the time that she did not like to have the police on her farm because of the desperate nature of the Hicks case, and that their presence there made her nervous. The neighbors reassured her, telling her that no one could mistake her motives.

She was questioned by the police, as were all other landholders in the vicinity, but she told both police and reporters that she knew nothing that could have any bearing on the case.

Miss Greene's adopted daughter, Marie, a Belgian girl, 18 years old, rose at 5:45 a. m. yesterday to do the milking, and was in the barn when the shooting occurred. She did not hear the report, but was called to the house by the screams of the wounded woman.

Woman's Condition Grave.

The bullet entered Miss Greene's right temple, passed through the orbit of the right eye and the base of the nose, and out the lid of the left eye. At Mullanphy Hospital, physicians pronounced her condition grave, and said her sight was destroyed irretrievably.

Miss Greene came to St. Louis from Canada abut 25 years ago. She is the niece of Thomas H. Blundell, vice-president of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney.

For several years she acted as housekeeper for the Rev. Francis Brand, of St. Aloysius Catholic Church. Later, with the money left her by relatives in Canada, she bought the small county farm.

A search of the premises showed that shrubbery underneath the elderly woman's window had been trampled. It is believed that someone, familiar with the habits of the Greene household, waited back of the shrubbery until the adopted daughter left by the back door to go to her milking. The person then slipped in the back door, authorities believe.

Miss Greene has reared three other children, one of whom is now Mrs. Mary Azar, the wife of a farmer living near Florissant. In a will made two years ago, according to a neighbor who helped her draw the will, Miss Greene made Mrs. Azar her chief heir.

A bequest of $5000 is made in the will to Marie, the Belgian girl.

WOMAN STRIPPED OF CLOTHES BY ESCORTS ON AUTO RIDE

Mrs. George Stergin Arrested After Running Through Cafe Garden to Escape Men.

A woman wearing only stockings and shoes was arrested by police in a lot at Hereford street and Kingshighway early yesterday after she had run through the summer garden of the Sala Cafe, 1393 South Kingshighway.

Borrowing a table cloth from the cafe, the policemen took the woman to City Hospital and later to the Mounted District Station. She said she is Mrs. George Stergin of Chicago, stopping at the St. Regis Hotel with her husband. She declared she accepted an invitation to go automobile riding with four men, who stripped her of her clothing and put her out of the car when she repulsed their advances. Her dress and underclothing, badly torn, were found near the lot in which she was discovered.

THREE BIRGER MEN TESTIFY AT GANG MURDER TRIAL

Appear as Chief Witnesses Against Former Friends, Millich and Gowan, Accused of Killing.

JURY TO GO HOME FOR FOURTH OF JULY

Procedure Agreed to After Prosecution Rests and Defense Attorneys Start to Submit Evidence.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., July 2.—The climax of Williamson County's first gang murder trial was reached today when three talkative young followers of Charley Birger, gang leader, followed one another to the witness stand to describe the killing of Ward Jones in a gang fight last October.

It is on the testimony of these three gangsters that the State depends chiefly for conviction of Rado Millich, convict, and Eural Gowan, charged with murdering Jones. The three youths who dealt a damaging blow to their former associates are Harry Thomasson, Clarence Rone and Ray Hyland.

Following the testimony of Thomasson the last of the State's star witnesses, State's Attorney Boswell, prosecutor, rested at 4 p. m., and presentation of defense testimony was begun.

After two witnesses had testified for the defense the trial halted while both sides debated what course should be taken in completion of the trial, due to the Fourth of July. It was finally agreed that members of the jury would be permitted to go to their homes over the holiday, returning to duty Tuesday.

Helps Self-Dfense Plea.

Millich's plea of self defense was strengthened somewhat by the testimony of the three principal State witnesses today. Another youthful Birger gangster, Alton B. Parker Brown, testifying Friday for the State, also helped Millich's defense to some extent.

Brown, Rone and Thomasson, all of whom had their first taste of gangdom under the banner of Birger, are now serving prison terms on robbery charges.

It was Thomasson, the 19-year-old Birger henchman, who confessed he and his brother, Elmo killed Mayor Joe Adams of West City at the command of their chief, who struck the hardest blow for the State against the other 19-year-old youth, Gowan. Thomasson was as outspoken in his story of the slaying of Jones as he was in his confession of the murder of Mayor Adams, a confession that put Birger in jail at Benton under a charge of murder.

Thomasson said he was at "Shady Rest," the armored Birger rendezvous between Marion and Harrisburg, Oct. 24, last, the day Jones was killed.

Heard Shots, Saw Body.

"I heard shots as I was standing near the barbecue stand," Thomassen related. "I went on to the cabin and saw Jones lying face down and Millich standing near him with a high-powered rifle and Gowan standing over him with Ward's machine gun in his hands.

"Besides myself Ernest Blue, one of Birger's body guards, 'Honest John,' a West Frankfort taxi driver, Davy Slankard, another of Birger's men, and Bert Owens, also a body guard of Birger's, were there. After the shooting, I walked over to the cabin. Millich and Gowan were dragging the body behind the cabin when Blue and I left. When we got near the barbecue stand we heard two more shots."

Rone and Gowan told him, a few days after the death of Jones: "We killed 'Casey,'" the name by which Jones was best known to his associates.

"I didn't believe it," continued Rone, another 19-year-old employe of Birger, who won his release as a defendant in the Jones' murder case by turning State's witness.

"But Gowan took me down and showed me where they, Rado and himself, shot him and where he fell. He told me how they took the body away and how he, Gowan, was driving the car."

Hyland, known to his companions as "Izzy," was a witness for both the State and the defense. As a State's witness this morning, he related that Gowan and Millich burst into Birger's home at Harrisburg an hour or two after Jones had been killed.

Gowan exclaimed, Hyland said, "We killed him," but Millich silenced him and finished the story by relating he had killed Jones after "Ward had threatened his life and drawn a gun on him." As a defense witness, and the last witness of the day, Hyland said he had driven Jones to "Shady Rest" the day of the slaying, and that Jones, with a pistol between his legs, kept insisting "he was going to kill somebody" and acted as if he were "doped."

Says Jones Threatened Millich.

The other defense witness was Harvey Dungy, a sallow young man with long black locks, who testified against the Shelton brothers at the Quincy (Ill.) mail robbery trial, only to repudiate his testimony later and pave the way for the release of the Sheltons from Leavenworth prison. He has been in jail with other members of the Birger gang at Benton.

Dungy said he, too, had been at "Shady Rest" the day of the Jones' murder. Jones, he said, came in threatening to kill Millich.

Millich and Gowan, Cook indicated, will be called upon to testify in their own behalf Tuesday. The case probably will go to the jury Tuesday afternoon.

MAN, 53, STRUCK BY AUTO, DIES LATER IN HOSPITAL

Joseph Languwich Was Run Down When Crossing Street; Two Other Persons Injured.

Struck by an automobile while attempting to cross Page boulevard at Whittier street Friday evening, Joseph Languwich, 53 years old, of 3936A Evans avenue, died of a skull fracture at Deaconess Hospital yesterday. The machine, which was westbound, was driven by Dr. William Pauly of 2631 Paulian place. An inquest will be held Tuesday.

Miss Christine Sindelar, 26, of 2618 California avenue, a telephone operator, suffered a skull fracture, and internal injuries when she was knocked down by a truck of the Star Wrecking and Hauling Co. at Gravois avenue and Lynch street yesterday morning.

Margaret Curran, 5 years old, of 1406 North Park avenue, was struck by an auto said to have been driven by a woman, last night at Blair and Bremen avenues, and left lying in the street until another motorist carried her to City Hospital. She suffered a fractured skull.

Mrs. Hattie Armour, 46 years old, of 1837 Lafayette avenue, was taken to City Hospital, together with her daughter, Margery, 10, both seriously injured, following an accident in which two cars collided at Hickory and Eighteenth streets last night.

The truck was driven by Alvin Bryant, a Negro, of 2223 Franklin avenue. The accident occurred when a steering knuckle broke.

difficulties that have dogged his various training periods in the past. On at least three other occasions when preparing for important battles, Dempsey has been harried and harassed by mental troubles.

At Great Falls, Mont., while he was preparing to defend the championship defense against Tommy Gibbons July 2, 1923, Jack was forced to train amid the uncertainty that the fight would take place, because of difficulty encountered in raising sufficient money to pay the combatants.

Later in the same year, Luis Angel Firpo's difficulties with immigration authorities forced Jack to train again amid worry that his title match with the South American would not take place. At Atlantic City last fall before Dempsey lost the title to Gene Tunney, his activities constantly were hampered by legal troubles growing out of suits brought by his former manager, Jack Kearns.

Asked Burglars to Steal Wine --- Neighbors Respond

Owner of Flats on South Sixteenth Street Uses Unique Method to Clear Cellar of Liquor Left by Tenant.

Most persons seek to avoid visits of burglars, but Dwight L. Hampson Jr., owner of the flats at 25 South Sixteenth street, let it be known that he wanted some burglars to go into his cellar and take what they wanted.

He set 3 p. m. yesterday as the hour and day of entry, and passed the word up and down Sixteenth street that at that time persons in a mood for burglary could pass into his cellar and would be welcome to anything they wanted to carry away. He added that the "burglars" might do well to equip themselves with jugs, demijohns or kegs for the "stuff" he wanted to be rid of was liquor.

News of Hampson's offer traveled through the nearby Negro district. The residents were at first incredulous, but one of them saying that if Hampson wanted to be visited by burglars at 3 p. m., might just as well be visited "right now"—took a dipper and a pitcher and ventured into the cellar. He emerged five minutes later, with shining eyes, carrying a pitcher filled to the brim with wine.

Other persons—men and women—some young, others old, carrying pitchers, crocks, jugs, jars or cooking utensils, followed. All came out with utensils filled to overflowing.

Shortly before 3 p. m. only 12 gallons of wine remained in the basement.

About this time five trucks arrived and parked in front of the flats. Their drivers hurried into the cellar. One, with more initiative than the others, carried the barrel with what wine remained in it, to his truck and drove away.

Hampson, when all the wine was gone, said:

"I had a tenant in one of my three-room flats. He moved and left some wine behind, fearing the agents would get him if he transported it. I felt possession of it was dangerous, so I invited people to steal it. They did. I'm satisfied."

distance from the "Spirit of St. Louis" by Royal Canadian Mounted police who kept their horses moving around the plane.

J. A. Wilson, director of civil flying, greeted the trans-Atlantic aviator through the window of the plane and the colonel, in white shirt with no coat or hat, sat for a moment framed by the window, while the battery of camermen swung into action. He struggled with a bulky suitcase and finally stepped out.

Meanwhile the army scout planes led by Maj. Lanphier were landing one by one. Five were already lined up side by side when Lieut. Johnson crashed south of the field.

The trans-Atlantic flyer was taken to Parliament Hill for a reception and then to the Government house for luncheon with Governor-General and Lady Willingdon.

New Envoy Presents Flyer.

Col. Lindbergh's visit was filled with calls at various sports fields where the people celebrated the jubilee of confederation.

In introducing Col. Lindbergh in the course of his welcome on Parliament Hill, William Phillips, the American Minister, said:

"No greater honor, nor greater privilege can fall to the first American Minister to Canada than to present to you our gallant young Ambassador without portfolio, our price of modesty. He comes to you with a message of greeting from the American people, who are all thinking of you on this occasion. You may not know that he has Canadian blood in his veins and that his ancestor was the founder of Hamilton."

Premier MacKenzie King, greeting the American aviator, said:

"On behalf of the Government of Canada, I extend to you the heartiest welcome which it is possible for any country to give to the representative of another nation. We feel more than highly honored that at this time of our national rejoicing you should come to us with a message of international good will.

"We honor you for what you have achieved and what you are. We believe you have to your credit the greatest individual achievement in the history of the world. We believe that you are the embodiment of the 'happy warrior' of whom Wordsworth has written, and we believe you are the 'gentleman unafraid,' of whom our poet Kipling has also spoken.

"We cannot begin to express to you the feelings of pride we have when we recall the fact that one of your ancestors was a pioneer in this dominion, and we feel that you are the embodiment of that pioneering spirit in its highest and finest form."

Urges Canadian Air Lines.

In reply Col. Lindbergh said:

"I want to express appreciation of the welcome I have received here both for myself and my country. I feel very highly honored to have been invited to visit Canada, and it brings to mind very clearly the reception which I had in London a few weeks ago.

"In flying here from Detroit, which was the last stop, I noticed the necessity of air transportation in Canada, and I believe that in a very short time there will be air lines from the United States to Canada and from Canada to the United States. It is transportation that has bound the world closer together, and in the future it will be transportation, far more rapid than in the past, which will bring nations and countries closer together, as Canada and the United States should be. I thank you."

The Canadian Government took charge of Lieut. Johnson's body. Premier Mackenzie King, deeply touched by the accident, immediately dispatched a message to President Coolidge expressing sympathy of the Canadian Government and people to the Government and people of the United States.

The Government also took steps to get in touch with the flyer's widow, Mrs. Edith Johnson, at Selfridge Field. A guard of honor composed of members of the Royal Canadian Air Force probably will be placed over the body until it is sent back to the United States.

Lieut. Johnson will be given military honors by the Canadian Government tomorrow, after which the body will be sent to Detroit by special train.

Col. Lindbergh said tonight that he would not leave here before Monday morning.

Johnson Quit Pastorate to Join Army; Was Experienced Flyer.

By the Associated Press.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., July 2.—Lieut. J. Thad. Johnson, killed when his plane croashed today at Ottawa, was commanding officer of the Twenty-seventh Squadron, Selfridge Field flyers. He was one of the oldest officers in point of service at the local flying field, having been here for five years.

Johnson was born in Johnson City, Tex., July 19, 1893, and was a graduate of the theological school at Trinity University, Waxahachie, Tex. He leaves a widow, who was at the field when Lieut. Johnson and 11 other flyers of the First Pursuit Group took off this morning as escort to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Before his enlistment soon after the United States entered the World War, Johnson was a Presbyterian clergyman at Dallas, Tex. He was commissioned a First Lieutenant of Infantry on May 7, 1917, and the following August transferred to the Signal Corps, going to Rockwell Field, Cal., to begin training as a military aviator. He received his advanced training in France and saw active service at the front through all the major campaigns involving American troops.

In 1919 he partcipated in the transcontinental race and then went to the Hawaiian Islands for a tour of service.

In April, 1925, Lieut. Johnson figured in a parachute jump without precedent in the army air service records. While flying from Selfridge Field to Washington, he encountered a heavy storm above the Blue Ridge Mountains. His engine failed at a time when he knew he was above the mountains, but could not see the ground. He abandoned his plane 10,000 feet up in the air and fell blindly into the mountains, landing safely in an apple tree in a valley.

'GOING VALUE' THEORY OF UTILITIES DENIED

Service Commission Refuses Valuation Claimed by Concern Operating at a Loss.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 2.—The claim of public utility companies and their engineers that "going value" must be allowed in fixing valuations for rate-making purposes, whether or not the utility is operating at a profit, suffered a set back in a valuation order issued yesterday by the Missouri Public Service Commission in which a "going value" allowance was denied for a street railway being operated at a loss.

This decision, involving a small company at Sedalia, indicated a new trend by the commission in passing on claims presented by utilities for large allowances for "going value" and other non-physical elements in seeking to increase their rate-making valuations.

The question of whether or not a company operating at a loss has a large "going value" has been raised in hearings in the increased fare and valuation case of the United Railways Co. of St. Louis, now pending before the commission. The company contended it was earning $116,000 a month less than the amount it was entitled to earn, and that its revenues had been falling off.

The Sedalia valuation order, placed a fair valuation of $1,765,000 on the gas, electric and street railways departments of the City Light & Traction Co. of Sedalia, as of Dec. 31, 1925.

In fixing the fair valuation of the street railway department at $300,000, the Commission refused to make a "going value" allowance on the ground the railway had been operating at a loss. An audit showed the street railway deficit in 1925 was $18,111 and the total operating revenues $72,348. The Commission allowed "going value" of $95,000 in the $1,045,000 fair valuation of the electric department and $20,000 in the $420,000 valuation of the gas department.

The order stated that the Commission, in fixing going value, had been controlled by circumstances surrounding each department. Slow growth of the city in recent years and no immediate prospects of a substantial increase did not indicate opportunities for greater extension of service, except in the electric department, it was stated. Development in the electric department was the basis of the larger "going value" given it.

CHINESE TO SEND TROOPS TO RESCUE OF U. S. CAPTAIN

Hankow Authorities Will Attempt to Gain Liberty for Commander of Vessel, Held for $20,000 Ransom

JAPANESE RETURN TO YANGTSE POINTS

Both Tokio and British Governments Are Displaying Signs of Trying to Regain Former Positions.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Chinese authorities at Hankow have agreed to send troops to obtain the liberty of Capt. Fisher, American commander of the steamer Chi Chuen, who is being held for $20,000 ransom by bandits on the upper Yangtse River, the State Department was advised today by Consul General Lockhart.

Lockhart said two Chinese agents aboard the ship also had been seized and that salvage work on the vessel had been discontinued because most of the crew had deserted.

The steamer Chi Nan, which had gone to the assistance of Capt. Fisher's ship when the bandits boarded her, was fired on at three places en route, Lockhart said.

Japanese Beginning to Return to Yangtse Stations.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, July 2.—The Japanese gradually are returning to the Yangtse stations whence they departed during the general foreign evacuation, and are showing evidence that Japan is determined to regain as soon as possible her former strategic trade position in mid-China.

The Japanese consul at Changsha, who evacuated the city at the same time as the United States consul last April, is now returning there with his staff and is notifying former Japanese residents that they may return. The Japanese consul at Soochow, near Shanghai, formerly a large Japanese community, has returned to his post and is arranging the return of Japanese residents.

The Nationalist thrust northward in Shangtung has been halted momentarily because of the stiffening of the Shantungese resistance in the region of Lincheng, but the southerners are making some progress in the seacoast regions.

Concentration Forces.

Meanwhile General Sun Chuan-Fang, at one time Northern defender of Shanghai, is playing a more important role in Shangtung, apparently with the hope of rehabilitating his military reputation which suffered severely when he lost the great port to the Southerners.

His troops have retreated across country from Kiangsu, have reached the Shantung Railway, are being entrained and rapidly moved by way of Tsinanfu to the Tsinpu Railway, where 20,000 men already are concentrated. These shortly will be reinforced by other Sun Chuan-Fang troops. It is planned that this army will move up gradually and take over the front line against the Southerners.

Japanese reports strongly intimate that Sun Chuan-Fang and his immediate followers are planning to carve out a new barony in the Province of Shantung Possibly as a buffer between the North and South.

On the Eastern front, 30,000 Nationalists are pushing from Haichow into Southern Shantung, the vanguard making considerable progress in the direction of Weihsien, Chihli, on the Shantung Railway. However, Tsingtao and the entire railway are still in Northern hands, despite recent Shanghai rports to the contrary. The Northerners are preparing a stubborn defense of this region.

No movement of Japanese troops from Tsingtao or Tsinan has been reported although the near panic among the Japanese residents along the railway continues. The Honan front, where Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang is concentrated, is quiet.

U. S. OFFERS TO BRING BYRD BACK ON SHIP HE CHOOSES

Return on War Vessel as Granted Lindbergh, However, Appears Unlikely.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Commander Byrd will be offered transportation home for himself, his companions and his plane on a Shipping Board vessel on any ship he chooses. The possibility has not completely disappeared that he may be offered a return on a man o' war as was Lindbergh.

The question of Byrd's return is not of immediate urgency, it was said today at the Navy Department, and final determination would be made later when Byrd's own plans were better known.

Rubber Boat That Saved Byrd and His Mates

—International Photo.

AFTER an all-night battle with the driving rain and dense fog, the America, unable to land in France because of the fog, fell into the English Channel near Ver-sur-Mer, 135 miles from Paris. The flyers were saved by paddling their way to shore in the rubber canoe which they stowed away for just such an emergency. The above photo, made when Byrd was testing the lifeboat shows Byrd, Bennett and Noville in the lifeboat at the Battery, New York. Bennett was unable to make the flight due to an injury.

Flowers Rain on Byrd As Party Enters Paris

found another throng somewhat smaller but equally demonstrative.

Upon his arrival at the hotel, Byrd was hugged and kissed in the name of the Byrds of Virgina by Mrs. John Marshall of Orange, Va. She represented her best friend, Mrs. Mary Byrd Consilio of Baltimore, the Commandor's cousin.

"Isn't he handsome!" Mrs. Marshall exclaimed when the aviator, still blushing from her greeting, was claimed by others. "All the Byrds are that—all are as brave as they are beautiful."

Showered With Flowers.

All along the route from the station the heroes of the third American airplane crossing of the Atlantic received an ovation. It took the form of a shower of flowers in the Rue D'Amsterdam, while thousands sent up cries: "Long live Byrd; long live America!"

Perhaps the most embarrassing moment for Commander Byrd was when a gorgeously attired woman elbowed her way to him, much to the injury of her expensive costume and handed him a magnificent bunch of roses. The commander hesitated as if afraid he could not make the lady understand what he would like to say, whereupon she remarked in excellent English: "Never mind, I know what you think."

The airmen passed through the center of the millinery and dressmaking district on their way to the hotel. The windows of all the shops were crowded with young shop girls who screamed at the top of their voices in an endeavor to make the Americans hear and respond to their variety of compliments.

"The man who discovered the North Pole by airplane," found a much warmer atmosphere in Paris, but his exhausted condition made it almost impossible for him to show his appreciation.

Seven Unofficial Ambassadors.

Every member of the crew made an excellent impression, as did Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Levine, before them. "They made seven good unofficial ambassadors the United States has sent us," was one remark heard along the route from the station to the hotel.

"Let the poor men get some rest," was a frequent piece of advice from those who noted that Byrd was pale, that Noville limped slightly and that Acosta, winsed when his shoulder was touched. Balchen was the only member of the crew who seemed to have suffered scarcely at all from their experience and he is the youngest member of the party.

Norwegians Greet Balchen.

Representatives of the Norwegian legation were at the railway station to greet Balchen as well as a considerable number of leading members of the Norwegian colony, some of whom remembered the boy's prowess as lightweight and middleweight boxing champion of Norway before he turned airman. Balchen was a flying officer in the Norwegian army, but he has taken out his first papers for naturalization as a citizen of the United States.

"I have seen a lot more of the United States than many Americans have," he remarked laughing, "and I feel I am entitled to become an American citizen. I have flown more than 6500 miles in a tour of the United States within a year and I have also flown 8000 miles in Canada. I carried supplies there to a station in Hudson's Bay country."

It was Balchen who was steerin the "America" when Commander Byrd gave the order to descend and brought the airship down near the beach at Ver-Sur-Mer.

"It must have been an awful experience when you nosed the America down into uncertainty," some one said. "That was nothing," he replied.

Balchen is delighted with his selection as a member of Byrd's proposed South Pole flight. He was engaged in preparations for Capt. Amundsen's flight and went to the United States in order to gain greater opportunity to engage in daring aerial explorations.

Scientific Data Saved.

All of Byrd's scientific data and records of the flight were rescued from the hull of the wrecked plane. That was what lay nearest Byrd's heart, for he has consistently emphasized the fact that the expedition was one organized for scientific research, destined by observations carefully noted down during its progress to make the way safer for future trans-Atlantic aerial travelers.

Those interested in the scientific and technical sides of the flight are pressing invitations on the commander and his men to attend luncheons, dinners and receptions. The chief of the expedition will probably refuse most if not all such invitations for several days.

"America" to Be Reconditioned.

While the America's crew were being looked over for possible injuries, the ship itself was being packed under the auspices of Commandant Hamburger, head of French aviation at Cherbourg, to be shipped to Cherbourg, where, as explained by H. A. Gibbons, it will be put into shape to take the air.

Thus far Commander Byrd has disclosed no plans for flights in Europe. Clarence Chamberlin and Charles Levine joined the America's crew at luncheon given by Sheldon Whitehouse, the American charge d' affaires, at the Inter-Allied Club. It was a considerately arranged function with no speechmaking. Commander Byrd was not even called on to talk about his flight, a circumstance which he seemed to appreciate.

Whitehouse read a congratulatory message from President Coolidge which was highly pleasing, after which there were only informal conversation with the aviators.

The applause from those who had assembled outside the club was of the kid-glove sort and discreet, as coming from people who understood and respected the airmen's need for quiet and rest. The women clapped their hands as Byrd and his companions went in and as they came out.

After dinner with H. A. Gibbons this evening and a few hours' rest the members of the crew felt so much better that it was thought this program could be carried out, in spite of the doctor's orders.

It is not likely that Commander Byrd will be in a condition for some time to concentrate on his records and give his conclusions regarding the scientific results of the America's trip. Responsibility for the lives of the other members of the party weighed heavily on Byrd, and, as Commander, the strain on him was great.

Though Byrd's chest was not seriously affected by the concussion he suffered, his voice is still weak, and he has been advised to abstain from mental work and enjoy as complete rest as possible. On leaving the American hospital today both he and Acosta signed the register in the reception room. Theirs were the first signatures since that of Lindbergh, June 3, which was the only one on the page. Byrd signed on the opposite page.

The program as at present arranged for the Byrd expedition for next week includes the laying of a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier; a luncheon with the veteran aviator Louis Bleriot; a reception by the Aero Club; a Fourth of July dinner of the American Chamber of Commerce; a luncheon with the Minister of Marine Tuesday; luncheon with the Anglo-American Press Association Wednesday, and a ball by the International League of Aviators.

Press Comment.

French press comment on the latest trans-Atlantic flight shows no tendency to compare the feats of Lindbergh, Byrd and Chamberlin.

Lindbergh remains for the French the boy who dared the elements first; Chamberlin and Levine, the men who followed and went farther; Byrd and his companions, the men who showed that the Atlantic may be crossed even when the elements are most unfavorable.

DOROTHY MACKAYE SENTENCED TO ONE TO 3 YEARS IN PRISON

Actress Accused of Conspiring With Doctor to Hide Facts of Husband's Death.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, July 2. — Dorothy Mackaye, actress, today was sentenced to from one to three years in prison after conviction last Wednesday on a conspiracy charge brought after the death of her actor husband, Ray Raymond.

The pronouncement of sentence seemed to stun the actress.

No sound escaped her lips, however, as she heard the words that will send her to San Quentin where her often-avowed lover and alleged fellow in crime, Paul Kelly, today began serving a sentence for Raymond's death.

Miss Mackaye, who was accused of conspiring with Dr. W. J. Sullivan of Hollywood to conceal facts concerning her husband's death two days after a fist fight with Kelly, quickly regained her composure.

Jerry Geisler, attorney for Miss Mackaye, gave notice of appeal.

MILLIONAIRES GOT 50 PER CENT CUT IN INCOME TAXES

Treasury Analysis of 1925 Act Shows How Higher Brackets Were Gainers in Decreased Levy.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—The inner workings of the Mellon tax law of 1925 and a forecast of the Mellon tax bill of 1928 can be clearly discerned in the interesting volume of 400 odd pages, entitled "Statistics of Income for 1925," which the Treasury Department issued this week.

The most striking disclosure of the book is that seven multi-millionaires with net incomes of more than $5,000,000 paid an average of $1,465,569.71 in Federal income taxes last year, or 16.71 per cent of their net incomes, which, incidently amounted to $61,382,863. The average tax per return for the year before for this group was $3,686,735, or 39.56 per cent of the net income. The reduction was much more than half.

Similar reductions, as shown by the accompanying table, were given to other multi-millionaires who had net incomes over $100,000. Those in the $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 bracket had their taxes reduced from 32.11 per cent to 15.86 per cent; those in the $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 class received a cut from 29.44 per cent to 14.65 per cent.

The $100,000 to $150,000 group taxes were cut from 16.73 per cent to 12.57 per cent.

Where Next Cut Begins.

At this point the drastic slashing stopped in the 1925 tax law, and it is probably here that the 1928 clashing will begin. Under the 1925 law, the taxpayer with the $90,000 to $100,000 net income received a reduction of slightly more than 4 per cent—from 16.73 per cent to 12.57 per cent. The $30,000 to $40,000 taxpayer received a reduction from 6.85 per cent to 5.89 per cent; the $25,000 to $30,000 taxpayer from 5.22 per cent to 4.52 per cent, and the $10,000 to $11,000 taxpayer from 1.51 per cent to 1.01 per cent.

The average amount per return shows more clearly how the highest bracket classes had their taxes cut more than half while the middle brackets obtained only one-eighth to one-third relief.

In the $5,000,000 and over class, the average tax was reduced from $3,686,735 to $1,465,596; the $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 class from $1,424,722 to $694,465, and the $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 class from $684,342 to $348,572.

In the $90,000 to $100,000 class the reduction was only from $15,895 to $11,891; in the $60,000 to $70,000 class from $7705 to $6407, and in the $10,000 to $11,000 class from $158 to $105.

Senator David R. Reed (Rep.) of Pennsylvania, who was prominent in the 1925 tax fight, has already announced that the "middle bracket taxpayers" have been discriminated against and must be given relief at the coming session. The foregoing figures will undoubtedly be cited repeatedly to show that the professional man and the smaller manufacturers must be given some relief.

Little for Small Fellow.

The Pennsylvania Senator has said lately that taxpayers with less than $10,000 net income cannot expect much reduction from the coming Congress. The highest bracket group got theirs two years ago and those in the middle group have something coming to them, Reed declared at the White House last month.

The $600,000,000 surplus for the fiscal year just ended will undoubtedly be the talking point for those in the middle group, with a reduction in the corporation tax for the highest bracket class, and abolition of some of the "nuisance" taxes for the great bulk of taxpayers.

POSTPONES FLIGHT FROM HAWAII TO MAINLAND

Richard Grace Hopes to Take Off Today—Two Efforts to Start Fail.

By the Associated Press.

MANA, Island of Kauai, Hawaii, July 2.—Richard Grace, aviator from the Hollywood movies, postponed until tomorrow his flight to the California mainland after two unsuccessful attempts to get his monoplane into the air.

Grace changed a tire on one of the take-off wheels of his plane that had been punctuerd in his first attempt to rise from the rough runway of the Barking Sands Field. The change took considerable time, and when it had been accomplished the heat of advancing day had so thinned the atmosphere as to make necessary postponement of the take-off until daylight tomorrow. The postponement was announced at 8:55 a. m.

GENEVA, Switzerland, July Great uneasiness exists in American and Japanese circles conc ing the prospects of success of Tripartite Naval Conference. is due to further informat which appears to be confirm relative to Great Britain's dem for increased cruiser strength.

Great Britain, it seems, w the right to maintain a fleet of 10,000-ton cruisers, and no f than 60 cruisers of 7500- each. This would make the tonnage 600,000, or 300,000 than the maximum contained the American proposal.

BRITISH CRUISER PLAN THREATENS ARMS CONFERENCE

Japanese and Americans Greatly Concerned Over England's Scheme for 75 Ships of That Class.

WOULD DOUBLE U. S. TONNAGE PROPOSAL

America and Japan Dissatisfied With British Project of Dividing Submarines Into Two Categories.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Switzerland, July 2.—Great uneasiness exists in American and Japanese circles concerning the prospects of success of the Tripartite Naval Conference. This is due to further information, which appears to be confirmed, relative to Great Britain's demand for increased cruiser strength.

Great Britain, it seems, wants the right to maintain a fleet of 15 10,000-ton cruisers, and no fewer than 60 cruisers of 7500-tons each. This would make the total tonnage 600,000, or 300,000 more than the maximum contained in the American proposal.

These British figures, which are regarded as stupendous by the Americans and Japanese, have so discouraged them apparently that unless the figures are shaved down very considerably, little good, in their opinion, would be achieved by signing a so-called limitation treaty.

Premium on Building.

Among Americans and Japanese there is no attempt to conceal the conviction that the adoption of the reported British project would put a premium on a new and more feverish armament race in this type of war craft.

According to one estimate, the adoption of the British plan would involve increased naval expenditures of almost $100,000,000 yearly by the American Government if the American cruiser strength were to be brought up to that parity which the British delegation publicly has proclaimed the United States has the right to maintain.

Protection of the interests of Great Britain's dominions is ascribed as one of the main reasons for Britain's demand for such high cruiser strength, and it was reported on good authority today that some of the delegations are getting into touch with the dominion representatives here in order to determine, how far they, individually or collectively, are backing Britain's reported project.

Public Discussion Suggested.

So far does the British demand imperil the conference, in the view of some of the delegates, that unless the figures are reduced, it is possible that a public session may be requested so as to obtain publicly the views of both the dominion delegates and the delegates of the mother country.

W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the Admiralty, who is chief of the British Delegation, represents India as well, and Admiral Jellicoe, who is said to be the keenest among the Britishers for a big cruiser fleet, is officially here as the representative of New Zealand. But it is reported that Ireland and South Africa are not enthusiastic over the British plan.

Japan Worried.

In the meantime the Japanese, who thought they had come from afar to participate in a limitation conference which would permit them to carry out certain National economies, are beginning to have an uncomfortable feeling that they are being "let in," for a situation which will demand a vastly increased outlay, because, like the United States, Japan would naturally feel obliged to follow Great Britain in any soaring skyward of cruisers, tonnage and numbers.

"We are just sitting very quiet and waiting," said the Japanese spokesman tonight, refecting this Japanese discomfort.

The impression grows that the Japanese will be content if they can get a proportion in auxiliary warship strength slightly above the percentage established at Washington for capital ships.

Submarine Difficulties.

Difficulties also have arisen regarding the submarine problem.

Both the United States and Japan are reported to be insisting upon more elasticity in the sizes of undersea craft than would be permitted under the British project of dividing them into two categories of 600 and 1600 tons maximum respectively.

Urgent dispatches were sent today to Washington, London and Tokio asking advice on the various counter-proposals submitted at today's meeting of technical ex-

Noville Writes of Flight Between Two Fog Banks

judge while circling around through those eternal fog banks or driving sheets of rain, we were somewhere near Paris. The first time, I remember, it was about 10 o'clock when we estimated that if we could only cut down through we might find ourselves close to our destination. Then about midnight we thought we were in about the same position, but both times we could not even see a flicker of light below. To go down lower meant courting a crash. There was nothing to do except circle again like men stumbling ahead in the pitch black night, because we couldn't do otherwise.

This for thre or four hours, and by 3 in the morning there wasn't much fuel left.

We had been up in the air for more than 41 hours and it was just before 3:30 a. m. when Commander Byrd turned the nose of the America toward—we didn't know what! Then, with rare judgment, we splashed our practically fuelless ship into the very eastern edge of the channel.

And that brings me to what is perhaps the greatest thing that happened on all our voyage. Commander Byrd is one of the most marvelous men in the world. There we were, four men, stone blind, several thousand feet in the air. We couldn't see a single thing below us or in front of us. Our fuel supply was practically gone and we knew we were going to crash. We all knew what that meant—or what we had every reason to believe it would mean.

Commander Byrd took one last look to read the fuel tanks. Then he stepped casually over to where I stood. The roar of the motors naturally made it impossible for him to speak. So he took a pencil and scrawled a note on paper.

All that the commander said was this: "We are going to land." Acosta, Balchen and I all knew what that meant. It was the second crash for us in three months. As it seemed that we were about to strike whatever lay below, I looked over the side. There was nothing to see and I held down my flashlight hoping it would light up what was there. We were all of us hoping desperately that it would be water, but I could see absolutely nothing.

Just then we struck! With 9000 pounds, you have a terrific weight. It isn't easy to land that weight at 50 miles an hour, even on a good aviation field. We knew that to land in unknown territory, a place you could not see even in the slightest degree, we were certain to crash.

Byrd's Steering Saved Lives.

But Commander Byrd, by sensing the locality of the channel and steering us toward it to land on the water, saved all of our lives. As the America hit the water the weight of her motors pulled her under the surface. But our buoyancy tanks took us up again. The cabin was flooded and we were drenched, but we came up.

We jumped clear of the plane into the sea. Luckily we were quite near shore. The first thing Commander Byrd thought of was the United States mail bag and the piece of the original flag made by Betsy Ross which was being sent by Rodman Wanamaker as a gift to the President of France. He brought them with him.

Once ashore we congratulated ourselves on such a fortunate escape. We were soaked to the skin and began to wonder where we might find a house or town. We started along the barren beach and first we saw a small French boy on a bicycle. He took one look at us, then peddled away as if his life depended on it.

We continued down the shore and discovered a village which we afterward learned was Ver-sur-Mer. We were hatless, soaked, and bedraggled — but mighty glad to be alive.

Help From Lighthouse Keeper.

After that the first man we saw was a lighthouse keeper. It happens that my father is French and came from Luneville, although he had been a New Yorker for many years. Therefore I speak the language with difficulty, but managed to make keeper understand what had happened and who we were.

That kindhearted old gentleman lost no time in taking us in. Later his family showed anxiety to do everything they could for us. They dried our clothes and fed us and made us feel that they wanted us to stay.

As for the earlier part of our trip, we could not have picked worse weather if we tried. We got into it in Newfoundland. There was no discussion of turning back.

"Let's go!" everybody said, "We've started." And so we did.

Our best spot was Nova Scotia, which was only fairly clear. Then we reached Newfoundland and hardly saw it at all. It was absolutely covered with fog. We couldn't see anything. Either an impenetrable fog or a slashing rain and sometimes both.

One of the strangest phenomenon any of us ever have known in flying was a stretch of several hours when we flew over the Atlantic in a strata of perfectly clear air. There was a great fog bank above us and another one below, obscuring the ocean. It was like being locked in a chamber. We approached the French coast at Brest under these happy auspices. Incidentally, that was wonderful navigation on the part of Commander Byrd.

For nineteen hours the commander could take no observation, yet we hit the coast about as we intended. We hadn't the slightest idea, though, what we were coming to. We had been in communication with a boy wireless operator at Ushant station, chatting with him in international code. He gave us the line on the weather and told us that Brest was absolutely astounded that we had been able to cross the Atlantic and were already nearing the European continent.

We hoped we had left the awful weather behind us. While referring to that I want to mention what I call one of the marvelous features of the whole flight. It is that we were able to strike the French coast 20 miles south of Brest in a direct line for Paris.

The fog and drizzling rain were closing around us tighter than ever. We believe we passed over Deauville, because one of the few things we saw was a big amusement park. But we soon were bound to blindness by the fog and heavier rain.

Antennae Pulled.

It was evident that our first attempt to reach Paris had failed. I am informed that the weather was so thick that those waiting at Le Bourget could not see the billion candlepower beacon at Mount Valerian, only a few miles away.

We were also informed that the weather was so soupy in France that ours was the only plane in the air. When you come to think of it, it is remarkable that we were able to keep any one in touch with us by radio almost all the way. Not until 1:15 in the morning when we were looking for a landing without being able to see anything below us but pitch blackness and moisture, did we cut off communication with the ground. This was necessary because we pulled in our antennae, since flying low was dangerous, as it might catch on something beneath us.

I am told that it was the opinion of many that when our wireless messages ceased we had come down at that very moment, for then we had been in the air for almost 39 hours and had had constant radio contact. After that we had cruised and cruised, always in the hope of finding somewhere a gap in the fog through which we could slide down to a landing.

As for our ship, the America, it is simply a marvelous plane. We have all the respect in the world for the man who built it—Tony Fokker.

Motors Never Missed.

Now regarding the Wright whirlwind motor. In my opinion it is the finest thing in the world of its kind. Col. Lindbergh first flew the Atlantic with one of these motors, a feat of such remarkable daring, almost superhuman endurance, and navigation sense, as every airman has a right to rejoice in.

But I believe of more interest from the mechanical side is the fact that the America, carrying those three motors, came through for over 41 hours under terrific and almost unprecedented conditions—and they didn't miss a single sputter, not one of them.

Of course, attention should be called to the fact that we have amassed a great deal of scientific data which we hope will be of genuine service in the advancement of aviation.

I suppose it is the proper thing to mention what we ate while flying the Atlantic. Although there were four very healthy fellows aboard the America, including myself, we discarded almost all foodstuffs. When I stop to think of it, it was humorous. The commander even jettisoned his tea.

While we were still over the Atlantic we split a small roast chicken between us—the last one aboard. We had four to begin with, but ate three almost immediately. We also had some sandwiches when we started out they fell to the floor of the plane and then dropped out of a convenient hole before any one could cheat the porpoises waiting down somewhere under the fog.

We finished our coffee the first day and when we made a landing, with the exception of a rather small morsel of chicken left from the afternoon, we hadn't had any real food for a day and a night.

I intended to mention before that we were heartbroken that our ship was so badly smashed up when we landed in the channel. The only things worth anything for immediate use after salvaging would be the side motors and wheels.

And through it all I cannot say too much for my three shipmates. They were all wonderful and we owe to the splendid judgment of Commander Byrd that we are alive today.

BYRD SAYS HE WILL FLY OVER SOUTH POLE; TIME FOR DEPARTURE NOT DECIDED

PARIS, July 2.

"I EXPECT to fly over the South Pole and Noville and Balchen will be with me," Commander Richard E. Byrd said this afternoon.

"My plans are not yet complete, and I cannot announce when we will start."

He said that the take off would be from the great ice pack, south of New Zealand, the most solid great bit of ice from which to start," and that the planes used probably would be one with three engines and one with one engine.

Commander Byrd said that a South Pole flight, while longer than one over the North Pole, would not necessarily be more difficult, but the requirements would be different from those of a transAtlantic flight.

"The object of the flight will not be chiefly to fly over the South Pole," Commander Byrd continued. "There is an unexplored area of 2,000,000 square miles in that area and it will be of a great scientific interest to have knowledge of it through exploration from the air."

The commander said the expedition, after flying over the pole, probably would land at some point between South Africa and South America. He added that the flight would be more than 2000 miles.

ITALIAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF WORLD INDUSTRIAL BODY

International Chamber of Commerce Ends Its Plenary Sessions at Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, July 2.—The great task of the representatives of trade and industry is in aiding Europe to recover from its present deplorable conditions Sir Alan Anderson, British delegate, today told the International Chamber of Commerce in an address announcing the election of Signor Alberto Pirelli of Italy, as president of the International chamber.

The chamber, conluding its plenary sessions today, adopted a number of resolutions designed to create greater freedom and elasticity in international trade. Special interest was attached to a resolution in favor of the unification of bills of lading, including measures for protecting consignors and consignees.

Speaking of conditions in Europe, Sir Alan said that Europe still has some 5,000,000 unemployed and 20,000,000 dependent upon them, making 25,000,000 of people who are in a destitute condition.

"What a help it would be for Europe if these people could work, he said. "The only solution is less hindrance in the exchange of goods, less tariff and less taxation."

The American delegation today placed a wreath at the statute of John Ericsson, the Swedish inventor.

In recognition of the excellent way in which the congress was conducted by the Swedish representatives, the American delegation has given three scholarships for Swedish students to study in the United States.

GUEST PREDICTS COOLIDGE WILL BE 1928 CANDIDATE

Whole Atmosphere at Summer White House Indicates He Will Run, Says Congressman Timberlake.

By the Associated Press.

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 2.—Representative Timberlake, (Rep.) of Colorado, has drawn from his visit at the Summer White House that President Coolidge will be a candidate in 1928.

"Of course, he didn't tell me he was going to be a candidate," the Coloradoan said, "because I did most of the talking but the whole atmosphere indicated that he will be."

Timberlake gave out several interviews before he came from Washington predicting Mr. Coolidge's renomination and re-election in spite of his veto of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill and he showed clippings of these to the President after a State Game Lodge dinner last night.

"He wasn't angry," Timberlake reported. "On the contrary he seemed pleased and thanked me for them."

The dinner guest declared the President was "as dead set against the McNary-Haugen bill as ever," and particularly so because of bumper crops prospect for this year.

Receives Birthday Greeting Card.

A huge and gaily decorated greeting card from the Governors of all the States, wishing President Coolidge well on his fifty-fifth birthday, Monday, arrived today at the Summer White House.

The card, measuring about four by six feet, came by express. It showed a map of the United States and in each space marking a State was a colored picture of what the State is famous for. In the space devoted to South Dakota, was a picture of the State Game Lodge, surrounded by towering pines.

A birthday candle, slipped out of each State and bore the autograph of its Governor. A verse of greeting was written below.

To Witness Round-Up Tuesday.

The greatest thrills the "Wild West" has to offer will be President Coolidge's next Tuesday when he attends the annual re-staging of the Belle Fourche round-up.

President and Mrs. Coolidge and their party will make the trip from Rapid City in a special train. The plans call for the president's attendance for several hours during which he will view the spectacle from a private stand erected in front of the regular grand stand which seats upwards of 25,000.

The Belle Fourche round-up is the natural outgrowth of the early life of the ranges.

LINDBERGH'S VISIT COST FRANCE BIG SUM OF MONEY

Aside From Expense of Entertainment, Much Damage Was Done to Tapestried Furniture.

PARIS, July 2.—Col. Lindbergh's visit cost France a lot of money.

The lights alone, to show the way to Paris, cost a nice sum. The biggest searchlight in the world, on Mont Valerien, west of Paris, sent its rays 200 miles all that Saturday evening. All the airfield lights of Northern France were kept burning long after Lindbergh landed.

The furniture bill, if it could be calculated, also would be high. At the City Hall and at the Chamber and Senate receptions the crowds clambered wildly onto rare old tapestried chairs and divans, fragile consoles and desks and left torn fabrics and broken and marred woodwork.

Besides this, the expense of public displays, "wine of honor" ceremonies, medals, flowers and flags was considerable.

VETERANS PROTEST GUITRY

Oppose French Writer's Participation in War Benefit.

By the Associated Press

PARIS, July 2.—Sacha Guitry, theatrical social pet, famous as writer and player of society comedy, has bumped up against war veterans. Guitry, his critics remark, didn't go to war. They protest publicly against his selection as auctioneer of Marshal Joffre's great "Order of the Day" on the battle of the Marne for the benefit of the "Broken Mugs."

Comoedia, leading theatrical newspaper, announced editorially its opposition to Guitry figuring at a veterans' benefit. It published defenses from his friends, showing he did his military service before the war and that medical boards twice rejected him during the war. Guitry's name was taken off the benefit announcement, but it took days for the storm to die down.

Poland Drops Visas Red Tape.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, July 2.—Polish visas have been abolished for all persons traveling through the Polish corridor on the two principal trains of the Dirschau-Danzig-Marienburg route, connecting with the regular Berlin-Warsaw service. This passport alleviation was agreed upon at a joint conference at Danzig between the German and Polish authorities with the view of further facilitating traffic between Germany and Poland. It was mutually decided, however, that the regulation requiring passengers to present their passports on entry into Danzig territory remain in force.

AMERICAN SCULPTORS' WORK ON DISPLAY AT ART MUSEUM

Variety of Pieces Chosen by New York Man Will Be Shown Throughout July.

An exhibition of 150 pieces of American sculpture will be displayed through July in gallery 32 at the City Art Museum. This is the most comprehensive exhibition of contemporary American sculpture which has been held in the Museum.

The decorative works include pieces suitable for fountains and sun dials, a large group of small bird and animal pieces, and many portrayals of child life.

Monumental bronze figures are Adolph Weinman's two companion pieces, "Rising Sun" and "Descending Night," Daniel Chester French's "Seated Lincoln," Albin Polasek's "Faun," Janet Scudder's "Young Diana," a fountain piece, and another "Diana of the Tower" by the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens. Paul Manship is represented by "Indian Runner."

Portrait sculptures include a head of George Luks by Margaret Sargent, and the bust of George S. Johnson by Charles Keck.

Two wood carvings, "Child With Kiddy-Car" and "Child and Horse" by William Zarach, illustrate the tendency of modernism in woodcarving. Lachaise's "Seal" and "Dolphins" in bronze are also in modernistic style. The "Marble Head" and the "Spirit of Aviation" by Laurence T. Stevens, and the "Greek Dance" by C. Paul Jennewein, are examples of the use of polychrome in sculpture.

St. Louisans represented are Victor S. Holm, Joseph A. Horchert, Sheila Burlingame, Charles K. Gleeson, Caroline Risque Janis and Walker Hancock. The exhibition was selected and assembled by W. Frank Purdy of New York. The local group was passed upon by a jury composed of Holm, E. H. Wuerpel, director of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, and Mrs. Janis.

PUBLIC FUNDS FOR LOTTERIES

British Museum and Westminster Bridge Financed in That Way.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, July 2.—The British Museum and Westminster Bridge are among the English structures which owe their existence to lotteries.

The British Museum was built through a £300,000 lottery (approximately $1,500,000) of £3 tickets. Of the total amount raised, £200,000 was distributed in prizes ranging from £10 to £10,000, and the balance went into the building. The Archbishop of Canterbury was one of the managers of the lottery and was paid £100 for his trouble. Westminster Bridge was built through a £700,000 lottery in 1736 and later in the same century a £224,000 lottery helped the famous brothers Adam finish their noted Adelphi Terrace on the banks of the Thames between the Savoy Hotel and Charing Cross, now the home of London's literati.

STOCKS ARE MORE QUIET AT MID YEAR

Drop to Lower Level in Call Funds Seen as Possibility for Next Week — Review of Industrial Situation.

P. Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"As the second half of 1927 begins the stock market is more quiet with a holiday ahead than at any time in recent weeks. So pronounced was the fall in values last week and so much more successful were the dealers in distributing issues on their shelves that some market prophets until late Thursday night expected a handsome drop in broken loans. The decision of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington to publish loans to brokers and dealers by reporting member banks in New York regularly on Thursday hereafter gave the financial districts even more of a surprise, perhaps, than the discovery that loans actually rose. Publication of these loans on Thursdays the day following that of which they reflect the condition will make it possible to relate market and loan trends more promptly in the future. Heretofore the totals were not published until late on Monday, when they were five days old.

Rise in Loan Explanation.

"The small rise in broker's loans this week despite liquidation in the stock market and the better distribution of bonds came as a result of seasonal influences. The mid-year and end of the year periods nearly always bring an upturn in loans as different institutions dress their windows to make their published statements look well. That is why an increase this week, following a drop last week did not disturb the market. Those who understand such matters know that the rise was seasonal and did not necessarily indicate a revival of the long sharp advance of recent months which had struck fear in the hearts of those on the bull side of the market.

Money Rate Seasonal.

Once it was reminded that the rise to five per cent in the renewal rate for call money represented only the seasonal tightening in rates ordinarily expected at this time of year, Wall Street this week accepted stiffer money with equanimity.

Three influences at work at tighter money at this period are the banks need for funds to strengthen their mid-year statement, the enormous dividend and interest payments scheduled for July holiday when the people always draw heavily upon currency.

Release of $550,000,000.

"If history offers any lesson, call money will fall to a more normal position again next week when these influences for dearer rates have been exhausted. In past years flurries in the money market late in June or early in July have been followed by a decline. The fact remains that normal for July is higher than normal for June, however, and within the current month the movement of the agricultural crops could very easily induce the gradual rise common to the late months of the year. No spirited advance has been stimulated in the bond market by the prospect for a release of roughly $550,000,000 in dividend and interest payment during July. How much of this will be reinvested and what proportion will go into bonds nobody knows. That a substantial portion of the sum will find its way eventually back into the bond market is a reasonable supposition but doubtless thousands of investors already have anticipated their needs in this respect.

Industrial Situation.

"Those who forecast a marked recession in business by mid-1927 now must acknowledge that industry has been maintained in a more active state than had been anticipated. Reports from the steel industry reveal a downturn but such a decline for the summer months as now is in prospect represents only the seasonal drop. It is possible to detect a gradual decline in building activity over the last year, but the volume has held up far beyond the time set by the prophets for a collapse. What the year will bring in the automobile industry still is the most interesting question of the moment. The answer revolves around the plans of Henry Ford but it now appears possible that the increased competition of the next six months may bring the 1927 production very close to that of last year. All things considered the outlook for continued stable business throughout the second half of the year is excellent. Signs may be found that different industries must prepare for a smaller volume of business than they would like but on the whole the situation promises a high level of activity.

PreHoliday Trade Saturday.

"In the perfunctory, pre-holiday market today there was little of interest to record and little that would be of value to the statistician. Fluctuations in stocks represented the narrow trading of a few professionals. Wall Street houses were run by skeleton forces and the attendance of floor brokers was small. Public interest in stocks was at a low ebb commission houses reported as the majority of their customers were far away from the sputter of the ticker at seashore and mountain. A large number of stocks that have been actively traded in during the past few days did not appear on the ticker at all today. The buying power was supplied mostly by pools which are interested in one or two specialties. But fluctuations today are not likely to count much in calculations of the market of the beginning of next week it was said. Generally speaking there was a slight improvement in the tone of business news. Some encouragement was found in the weekly mercantile reviews which reported improvement in forward buying with small stocks on hand.

Baldwin Drops Back.

The activity was mostly on the constructive side. The leading industrials either maintained the best levels of yesterday or did a little better. Baldwin Locomotive after its sensational 15 point rise yesterday dropped back three points today which brought a sprinkling of selling in some of the other equipments.

Small gains were made by General Motors, Steel common, Colorado Fuel, American Machine and Foundry and Reid Ice Cream. Burns Brothers "A," which had a sharp advance yesterday, fell back several points today. Oils were firmer with fairly good support in evidence for Atlantic Refining and Phillips. The most interesting event in the rail group was a gain of about three points in Norfolk & Southern. Demand continued for Chicago & Eastern Illinois preferred and Chicago & Alton preferred, both of which were raised to new high ground. The foreign exchange market was stagnant.

Deficit in Surplus Reserves.

"The actual statement of the New York Clearing House revealed another deficit in surplus reserves of $2,588,920 contrasted with a deficit of $6,575,530 a week ago. Loans and discounts reflecting the mid-year settlements were up $161,570,000 on the week, while net demand deposits showed an expansion of $247,445,600.

TRACTION SECURITIES FEATURE LOCAL TRADE

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, July 2.—Transactions in local traction securities comprised about the only feature to the local market the past week and the activity in these issues was mostly late in week. St. Louis Public Service stock sold between 26½ and 26, something over 1600 shares changing hands. The price basis was higher. The United Railways 4s were unchanged to higher, sales including the certificates of deposit aggregating $11,000 for the week.

Stock prices generally showed mixed changes for the week. International Shoe had the widest upward range. Wagner Electric sold at 36 and 34. Fulton Iron was fractionally lower.

FIRM TONE ON CURB BUT TRADE SLACKENS

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 2.—Resistance shown in the last few sessions on the Curb Exchange to the selling pressure occasioned by the unsettled conditions earlier in the week imparted a firm tone at the opening today, although trading slackened, being confronted by an extended holiday period.

Some of the recent leaders hovered around the high quotations reached on the recent upturn and a few issues attracted attention with material advances. Royal Baking Powder, which rose easily about 20 points in the previous session, registered a further gain of 9 points, selling to 234. Bancitaly Corporation scored an overnight gain of 3¼ points and Goodyear Tire rallied after an easier opening.

There were a few strong issues in the public utility division appreciably following the opening proceedings. Electric Bond and Share and Southeastern Power were higher fractionally. New England Power opened off 11 points and continued lower before meeting support.

In the oil department, Gulf Oil and Carib Syndicate were strong features. Illinois Pipe Line improved 5 points on a small turnover.

Warner Bros 6½ per cent bonds and common shares moved contrary to the trend with new low quotations reached in each on declines of 4½ and 1¼ points respectively. Subsequent support caused a rally of about a point range. Medellin 7s also yielded to a low figure, selling from 92½ to 91.

COTTON MARKET QUIET, STEADY AT WEEK-END

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The cotton market was quiet today, but prices held generally steady on reports of rains in the Southwest and relatively steady Liverpool cables. October contracts, after selling up to 17.18c, reacted to 17.11c, but stiffened up again, closing at 17.15c, general market closing steady at net advances of 4 to 6 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 4 to 7 points, active months showing net gains of about 6 to 7 points in the first three minutes on a spurt of covering, and commission house or trade buying, which appeared to be inspired by the unfavorable weather reports from Texas.

The relatively steady showing of the English market which had evidently responded to the rain news from the Southwest before the local opening, also was a factor. General buying was restricted by the usual pre-holiday consideration, however, and after the initial demand was supplied, the market eased off under realizing or liquidation, probably promoted by a favorable Western belt forecast.

Local map readers said it looked like good weather in the South for the next 36 hours, but would go no further with their forecasts, and the uncertainty of conditions over the 4th of July holiday, no doubt, helped to hold offerings in check.

Another spurt of covering occurred toward the close, attributed to the evening up of commitments for over the week-end and last prices were within a point or two of the best on most of the active positions.

Private cables said there had been trade calling and covering in Liverpool and also reported fair business in cotton cloths for India and China was pending in the Manchester market.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 111,000 bales, against 51,000 last year, and 45,000 two years ago. Two figures suggested a continued full movement of cotton for this season of the year, and it is reported that rather a better demand has developed for new crop shipments.

Two more private crop reports were issued, one making the condition 75.8 and the decrease in acreage 10.7 per cent, while the other placed the condition at 75.1, the indicated acreage at 44,145,000 and the indicated crop at 14,321,000.

BANK CLEARINGS FOR DAY SET NEW RECORD AT $1,950,000,000

By the Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 2.—

CLEARANCES of checks through the New York Clearing House today reached the record breaking total of $1,950,000,000. This compares with $1,532,000,000 on the corresponding date last year and the previous record of $1,874,000,000 on Jan. 2, 1926.

The unusually heavy and year and month end settlements, combined with the distribution of a record breaking volume of funds in the way of dividend and interest payments, accounts for the large total.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Primary cotton goods markets were inactive today, as most houses were closed. A new shirting season will get under way after the holiday. Yarns were ready. Burlap markets abroad and at home were closed on account of holidays. Raw silk was quiet and inactive. A stronger market is looked for when the new crop trading starts more freely in the next week or two. Garment manufacturers are showing more interest in fall lines of dress fabrics and coatings.

Several Exchanges Closed.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The Rubber, Cocoa and Coffee and Sugar Exchange and the Cottonseed Oil Markets here are closed today.

New York Silk.

NEW YORK, July 2.—Raw silk unchanged.

Development Opportunity

The Lower Rio Grande Valley

The Tip of Texas

Is enjoying a remarkable development. Looks like Florida before the boom. Whole territory is crowded with people, hotels crowded, new buildings, new subdivisions, new townsites, new school buildings and churches. Cameron County is spending $6,000,000 for paved roads, deep water harbor being built at Point Isabel, General Goethals making survey for intracoastal canal. Southern Pacific Railroad building new line through Valley. Missouri Pacific Railroad building three new lines through part of Valley.

BUT the Lower Rio Grande Valley will not "blow up" as other "boom sections" have, because we have developed our agricultural resources first. Cities and towns naturally follow, approximately 200,000 population at this time and increasing rapidly.

We own the Buena Vista Ranch, comprising 16,880 acres of land, located in the northeast corner of Cameron County in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of South Texas. Water-front property, about 12,000 acres splendid agricultural land. Property embraces a townsite and should sell three or four thousand lots. Agricultural land should sell for $300, $400 or $500 per acre when developed.

This is an outstanding development opportunity. Investigation will show the property is a bargain at the price. Our price at this time, subject to a change without notice, is $35.00 per acre. We will pay a maximum of 5% commission, but will not allow promoters to increase price of property. No options given. Terms: 50% cash, balance one to five years. Our reason for selling: it is not convenient for us to finance development of the property and it should be gotten ready for sale by this Fall. If desirable, we are willing to contract with purchasers for development and sale. Several fortunes already made by development companies in Rio Grande Valley.

GRAIN LIST HIGHER ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, July 2.—Wheat closed substantially higher at the week-end on the local market. Corn was a cent to more up at finish.

It was more of a "possibility" market than anything else. The possibility of rust development in Northwest if unfavorable weather develops and talk of possible corn deterioration in case of any prolonged heat without ample rain fall.

Forecast of warmer weather revived possibilities of rust news coming on market again and this was credited with being largely responsible for wheat upturn. Liverpool wheat closed ¼d lower on July; ⅛d on October and ⅝d on December.

Hard September wheat opened at $1.43⅛. September corn $1.06½, and December corn $1.09½.

Local wheat receipts, which were 32,200 bushels, compared with 54,000 bushels a week ago and 96,000 bushels a year ago, included 11 cars local and 12 through. Corn receipts, which were 75,000 bushels, compared with 67,200 bushels a week ago and 44,000 bushels a year ago, included 60 cars local and 4 through. Oats receipts, which were 60,000 bushels, compared with 46,000 bushels a week ago and 44,000 bushels a year ago, included 28 cars local and 5 through. Hay receipts were 13 cars local and 4 through.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago. Oats receipts were lighter than a week ago. Wheat shipments were lighter than a week ago. Corn shipments were lighter than a week ago. Oats shipments were lighter than a week ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,143,000 bushels, compared with 744,000 a week ago. Corn receipts were 737,000 bushels, compared with 797,000 a week ago. Oats receipts were 320,000 bushels, compared with 375,000 a week ago. Wheat shipments were 486,000 bushels, compared with 1,182,000 a week ago. Corn shipments were 384,000 bushels, compared with 465,000 a week ago. Oats shipments were 185,000 bushels, compared with 360,000 a week ago.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators amounted to 485,335 bushels of wheat; 1,970,107 bushels of corn; 203,415 bushels of oats. GRAIN MARKETS ARE MOVED MAINLY BY "POSSIBILITIES"

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Increasing apprehension relative both to spring wheat aid to corn did much today to bring about higher prices for all grain. Black rust possibilities reports from the Northwest vied with talk about deficiency of rainfall in the corn belt.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm, 1⅜c to 1⅞c net higher, with corn 1¼c to 2½c up, oats unchanged to ⅝c advance and provisions 2c to 17c down.

Numerous dispatches telling of black rust conditions indicated that, although actual damage to wheat has nowhere yet become apparent, the pest is in evidence. Meanwhile, predictions of warmer unsettled weather in the Dakotas were by no means reassuring, being taken to indicate more chance of rust propagation. Advices at hand from places where rust has been discovered were variable as to the outlook for serious injury. One leading authority telegraphing from Yankton, S. D., said the situation is not alarming at present, but another expert wired from Aberdeen that wheat has started to head and is more susceptible to rust.

Aside from black rust chances, the wheat market was strengthened by figures indicating deterioration of European crops. According to estimates current here, European wheat production this season is at present likely to be 33,000,000 bushels less than was forecast a month ago. On the other hand, export buying of wheat today was of small proportions. They were said to be good-sized orders in sight, however, to buy at a little under the market.

Corn derived most of its gain from predictions that any experience of prolonged heat in the corn belt without ample rainfall will bring about rapid curtailment of yields. Reports were circulated purporting to show dearth of moisture over a widespread extent of territory, including sections of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota. In this connection, it was pointed out that Omaha during the last month has received only .74 of an inch, compared with 5.05 inches normal.

Oats weer affected mainly by the action of corn.

Provisions went lower with hogs and as a result of a larger increase of stocks of lard here than had been looked for.

FRUIT MARKET

With the exception of best native beef steers, mixed butcher yearlings and bulls the cattle trade was on a declining basis here the past week with serious breaks suffered in some classes, notably cows. In point of numbers receipts for the period were about normal, running somewhat under the previous six-day period, however. A scarcity of the better finished native steers throughout held prices full steady on this class. Top on mature offerings was $12.75 for steers weighing around 1300 lbs. Yearling steers reached a peak of $12.00. A bulk of all native steer sales for the week was included in a spread of $9.50 to $12.00, occasional sales upward to $12.25 and $12.50.

Western steers numbered right at 100 cars and quality in this division was good. Kansas and Oklahoma furnished practically the entire run with Kansas leading in shipments. Top steers reached $10.75 with a load of Brahma steers at $10.50 representing the best lot of this class of steers to arrive here in some time.

Mixed butcher steers and heifers were in keen demand all week and a new top for the year was established on straight heifers when a consignment made $11.10. Mixed offerings stopped at $11.00. A bulk of all sales of good to choice kinds made $10.00 to $11.00 with medium and grass kinds ranging from $6.00 to $9.00.

Strictly choice quality weighty beef cows held steady but all others were mostly 50c lower, canners excepted with a 25 to 50c decline. Most beef cows sold from $5.75 to $6.75, few above $7.00, although tops reached $8.25 and $8.50. Cutters bulked at $4.50 to $5.25 and canners $3.75 to $4.25. Little activity was featured in bull trading this week with prices holding steady in all classes. Beef and butcher animals ranged $6.25 to $7.50 while bologna bulls sold mostly at $5.50 to $6.50. Common and canner bulls ranged $4.50 to $5.00 largely, some inferior grades downward to $3.75. Meager supplies of stocker and feeder cattle found outlet the past week at steady to 25c lower values, least change noted on she stuff. Good and choice veal calves closhd the week at 25c decline, next cuts following suit although heavy calves and canner yearlings were not materially changed. Bulk of best calves sold during the week at $11.75 to $12.00, first cuts $9.25 to $9.50 and heavy calves $6.00 to $9.00. Southern canner yearlings bulked at $4.25 to $4.50, range in price, $4.00 to $5.00.

Pig Prices Stronger.

The features of the local swine market the past week were the strengthening of pigs and the exceptionally good demand on this class. Packing sows were in poor demand and prices for the week are lower. Light and medium weight hogs were good sellers, but the weightier kinds were somewhat of a drag. Trading the first three days of the week was on a steady basis. Buyers were bearish but salesmen held out for steady prices. Thursday light hogs under a good demand whipped up 25c to a top of $9.65. Packers were bearish and the market that day closed dull, packers refusing to give any advance. Salesmen had to sell their medium and heavy hogs on that day steady. Friday the market was slow early, prices barely steady on light hogs. Packers held out till late in the session and forced salesmen to take a 15c to 20c cut. Prices were lower Saturday with clearance fair. The first part of the week the clearance was good but the latter part buyers failed to clean the market up so good. Pigs were in very good demand and prices were trending higher each day. Bulk of pigs sold for the week at $8.75 to $9.25. Principally at $9. A week ago they sold at $8.50 to $8.75. Strong weight pigs sold up to $9.65. Inferior kinds down to $7. Packing sows were in very slow call and prices were weak to lower each day. At the close Friday best kinds were 20c to 40c lower. Bulk sold at $7.50 to $7.75 for the week.

Lamb Prices Decline.

Up till the Friday period lambs were trending lower. A somewhat light run with a good demand whipped prices up a quarter in the closing period. In the early part of the week fat lambs were forced down 75c, but the 25c advance of Friday put them 50c under last week. Top lambs for the period made $14.25. At the close $14 was the best price obtainable. There was a fairly good demand throughout the week, but with fairly liberal receipts buyers were bearish and the market almost invariably opened with a weak undertone. Buyers when once started cleaned the market up good. The closing period, however, was a strong active market. Bulk of fat lambs sold for the period under review at $13.25 to $14.25. Medium grades followed at $10 to $13. Culls went principally at $8.50 with skips at $5.50 to $7.00. Aged sheep were in limited supply, and prices held to a steady level. Best light ewes made $5.50 with the weightier kinds $4.50 to $5.00. Choppers and bucks, $3.00 to $3.50, canners $1.00 to $2.50. There were only odd lots of yearling lambs on sale, and they sold from $8.50 to $11.50. Wethers were almost entirely absent.

Quotations Slaughter Stock: Good to choice spring lambs $13.25 to $14, medium to good $11.50 to $13.25, plain to medium $10.50 to $11.50, cull and common $8 to $10. Good to choice yearling lambs (dry lot fed), $1.50 to $11.50. Medium to good $9.50 to $10.50, plain to medium $8.50 to $9.50, cull and common $7 to $8, skins $4 to $6.50. Grass fed kinds discounted $1 to $1.50 under dry fed kinds. Good to choice aged western wethers $8 to $9, good fat southern kinds $7.50 to $8.50, thin to fair kinds $4 to $6.50. Good to choice mutton ewes $4.50 to $5.50, plain to good $4 to $4.50 choppers and bucks $3 to $3.50, canners $1 to $2.50. Fat goats $3 to $4, fair to good kids $4 to $7, thin to fair kids $1.50 to $3.

Horses and Mules.

Receipts were very light in horses and mules here the past week, salable offerings especially in meager numbers. Common kinds prevailed in numbers and were slow sale, good kinds, however, continuing in demand and selling readily at firm values. No essential variation in price was noted on any and a good clearance was effected.

Lounger Beats Favorites in Fairmount Stake

CROWD OF 15,000 WITNESSES DEFEAT OF COTLOGOMOR AND BANTON IN NEAR RECORD TIME

a—Bedwell and Moorehouse entry.

Lounger raced under restraint in close pursuit of Cudgeller to the stretch, then, challenging the latter, took the lead easily and came away well in last furlong. Cudgeller raced into the lead and set a good pace to nearing the last eighth, then held on well to the end. Cotlogomor was carried wide on the turns, raced well, but lacked his usual speed and failed to respond when ridden hard during the last quarter mile.

$2 mutuels paid: Lounger, win $9.70. No place or show mutuels sold.

By Jack Alexander.

It is becoming a safe rule at Fairmount, if the bettor craves to win on big handicaps, to play the longest shot on the card. Buddy Bauer, disregarded in the Fairmount Derby betting, won and paid the outlandish price of $55.60. Banton fooled everybody last week in the Statler Handicap by trimming Princess Doreen and paying $25 for a $2 ticket and Lounger, yesterday in the Jefferson Hotel Handicap, in which the field was so small that no place or show tickets were sold, beat Banton, Cotlogomor and Cudgeller and paid $9.70.

Possibly the crowd, estimated at 15,000 was swayed by the fact that in the four races preceding the feature, the favorite won every time and the prices ranged from $4.32 downward to $3.10.

Lounger ran much the best race and deserved to win. His time was caught at 1:53 1-5 for the mile and a furlong, only a second over Captain Hal's track record of 1:52 1-5.

Banton and Cotlogomor proved the big disappointments. When Cotlogomor got off last, his backers were still optimistic because of his customary finishing strength but he gained little on the back stretch and just enough more at the end to beat out Banton for third place. Banton never did get anywhere. The Bedwell-Morehouse entry of Banton and Cudgeller, was heaviest played, with Cotlogomer a close second.

Cudgeller Breaks Fast.

Cudgeller broke best, cutting across from the outside of the track to take the lead, with Lounger catching up to his heels at the clubhouse turn. Banton was in third position with Cotlogomor fourth. On the back stretch Lounger almost came abreast the leader but was held back until the stretch turn where he took command and whipped Cudgeller in the final duel to the finish. By the time they swept pass the judges, Lounger had opened up a gap of two and a half lengths.

Yesterday was a great day for the "sure thing" bettors. Five of the eight races went to the favorites and the winners paid even money, or a little more or less.

The margins of victory were correspondingly long. In the first six races the gaps at the finish between the winner and second horse ranged from one and a half lengths to seven. Things picked up for the general public, however, in the last two events. Dynamo won a thrilling race in the seventh, beating Grass Maid by a nose and paying the large price of $52.80 for a $2 ticket.

Outside of the four good prices, Dynamo's $52.80, Student Prince's $19.46 to place in the second, Lounger's $9.70 and Spring's $10.78, the prices were uniformly and exceptionally low.

Tomorrow the Spring meeting will come to an end with the Independence day handicap the feature. This race will be at six furlongs and the horses named for it are Lounger, Cudgeller, Banton, Brown Sugar, Mazetta, Beggar Boy and Patsy Jane. It will carry an added purse of $2,000.

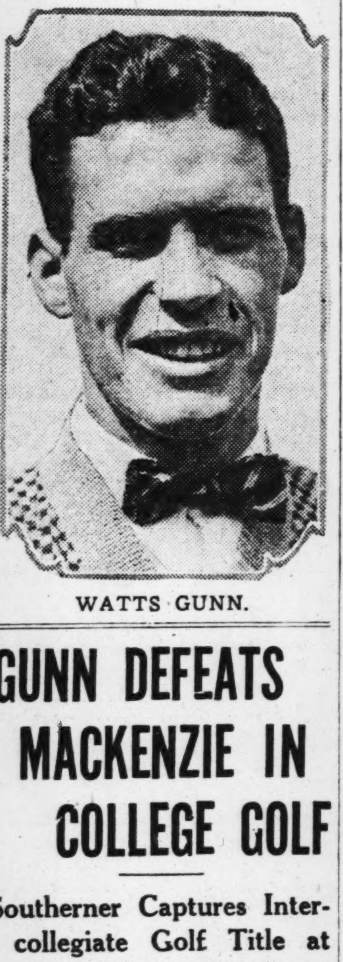
Intercollegiate Golf Champion



WATTS GUNN.

GUNN DEFEATS MACKENZIE IN COLLEGE GOLF

Southerner Captures Intercollegiate Golf Title at Garden City, Shooting a 302 Over 72 Holes to Win

By the Associated Press.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., July 2.—Overcoming the medalist jinx which has held good with only three exceptions in the history of major tournament competition, Watts Gunn, Georgia Tech senior, yesterday won the Inter-Collegiate Golf Association's championship by defeating Roland Mackenzie, Brown University sophomore, 10 and 9.

Watts in Great Form.

Watts was in championship form. He won the medal with 78-76-75-73—302, good enough, ordinarily, to beat any field. He came through four rounds of match play without a close call. Starting the 36-hole final today the Southerner went around the hard Garden City course in 69, establishing an all-time competitive record. Never before had any golfer, professional or amateur, traversed the course in competition below 71.

In taking only 27 holes to beat Mackenzie he gave the Washington, D. C., youth the worst beating he has suffered since he broke into prominence two years ago by winning the medal in the National open. Tonight the Atlantan was casting for the national amateur championship to be held over the Minikahde course at Minneapolis, starting Aug. 22.

Gets Seven Birdies.

Seven birdies emblazoned Gunn's path over the morning 18. On the very first hole Gunn sounded a warning of what was to come by putting by a half stymie to get a half. Square going to the fifth Watts sent a screaming drive down the fairway to touch off a five-hole series of golfing pyrotechnics. From the fifth through the ninth Watts was one under par on each hole. Mackenzie halved the fifth with a birdie three but he was unequal to his opponent's dizzy pace from there on. Watts' uncanny touch permitted him to sink five successive putts ranging from 12 to 40 yards.

Karl Hodge Wins in Straight Sets in Opening Central States Net Tournament.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

Thirteen matches were decided in the first round of the Central States tennis championship which opened yesterday afternoon on the courts of the Triple A Club. The remaining first round contests will be played today and tomorrow. First round matches in the men's doubles between local teams will start this afternoon. The doubles draw will be made at 11 o'clock and players desiring to enter may call the Triple A Club before that time.

The first upset in the tourney took place when Karl Hodge, Triple A player defeated Joe Smith of the Forest Park Tennis Club team. Hodge opened strong in the first set and his consistent playing bewildered his younger opponent. In the second set Smith improved his game and forced Hodge to a deuce set. Hodge was too steady, however, and took the next two games. Smith made the mistake of too much net playing. Hodge has shown an improved game over last season and his defeat of Smith, No. 4 ranking player in the district last year, indicates a better ranking this year. The score of the contest was 6—1, 7—5.

Ted Drewes Wins.

Theodore Drewes, National Public parks champion, advanced to the second round by eliminating Richard Rosebrough, Woodlawn Country Club player, in a match which produced some spectacular tennis. Rosebrough gave Drewes a close battle in the opening set and in the second set caused the champion to play at top speed. Drewes' greater experience enabled him to gain the victory. The score was 7—5, 6—3.

In the only three-set encounter of the afternoon Herbert Bryant of Ferguson, former St. Louis County champion, eliminated Jack Dailey, Triple A player. The first and third sets in this match were close. Bryant outplaced Dailey to win the second set. The third set was hard fought, Bryant finally taking it and winning the match, 5—7, 6—1, 6—4.

Some of the visiting players are due to arrive this morning while the others must report tomorrow. Ralph Powell, the Omaha star, Robert Kerr and Paul Frederick of Springfield, Mo., and the two Centralia, Ill., players, Robert Crain and Robert Hails, are expected to get into action today. George O'Connell, Shreveport, La., and five junior stars from Oklahoma will be here tomorrow.

Yesterday's Results.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 2.—In an afternoon of s weltering heat and record-breaking performances, the Illinois Athletic Club of Chicago duplicated its triumph of a year ago in winning the National A. A. U. senior track and field championships in the University of Nebraska Memorial Stadium today.

The Chicagoans piled up an impressive total of 55 points, scoring in 15 of the 19 events. They won five of the events. The Olympic Club of San Francisco was second with 28, the Hollywood A. C. third with either 25 or 27 points, depending on the decision settling the winner of the '00-yard dash. The Los Angeles A. C. was fourth with 20, New York A. C. fifth with 19, University of Nebraska sixth with seven, the Kansas City A. C. seventh with six points.

One world's record was broken, another was tied, two National A. A. U. records fell and two were equaled.

Johnny Gibson, a former Fordham star, smashed the world's record for the 440-yard hurdles, leaping the barriers in :52 3-5. This clipped one and three-fifths seconds from the old mark established by J. K. Norton of Stanford University in 1920.

The world's record was equalled in the 100-yard dash, but just who is credited with this performance remains to be settled by others than the contestants themselves. Charley Borah of the Hollywood A. C., the 1926 sprint champion, was officially announced as the winner. The time was :09 3-5.

After the decision was announced, however, the Judges were in doubt whether Borah broke the tape ahead of Chester Bowman of the Newark, A. C., or whether Bowman was first to the tape.

Murray Hulbert of New York, president of the National A. A. U., said his decision would not be made until he had an opportunity to view the motion pictures made of the thrilling finish, examine other photographs, and take the statements of the six judges.

The National A. A. U records thrown into the discard were in the six-mile run and the running broad jump. Dehart Hubbard,

ERRORS BY TOPORCER AND BELL GIVE GAME TO CUBS, NOW AHEAD OF CHAMPIONS

Blake Gives O'Farrell's Men Plenty of Chances to Score but They Fail in Pinches, 15 Runners Being Left on Bases—Shortstop's Fumble Paves Way for Four Runs

By William J. McGoogan,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, July 2.—Jess Haines' support faltered and the Cardinals couldn't hit in the pinches this afternoon, so the champions lost their second game in a row to the Cubs. The score was 7 to 4

As a result of the defeat the Cardinals dropped to third place in the league standing and the Cubs moved up to second.

Pittsburg defeated Cincinnati so the Cardinals dropped another full game further behind the league-leading Pirates. The champions are now two and one-half games out of first place.

Two costly breaks in the defense were largely responsible for today's loss. Toporcer made one with an easy double play in front of him which, had it been completed, would have retired the Cubs without a run in the seventh inning, but instead they scored four. Another was Lester Bell's fumble of Southworth's throw to head off Beck at third in the second, which permitted the runner to score.

Haines was greatly put out by these boots behind him, especially Toporcer's in the seventh, and, in addition, Jess was waging a verbal war with Umpire McCormick on the latter's calling of balls and strikes, and these things didn't add to the big right-hander's effectiveness.

Sheriff Blake, who started the game for the Cubs, gave the champions many opportunities, but they refused to take advantage of his kindness. They had 15 men left on bases. Only once did they flock their knocks. That was in their half of the seventh when they went to bat on the short end of a 3-to-1 score and put together enough singles to tie it up.

In this frame a piece of strategy which went wrong proved costly, although it looked like a good move at the time. Blades and Toporcer singled in succession and when Frisch came through with a safety, Blades scored and Toporcer reached third. With Bottomley, a good hitter, up, Frisch decided it would be a good time to steal second, but a good throw by Hartnett nailed him and this kept the Cardinals from scoring another run for, after Bottomley had lined out, Southworth singled to score Toporcer with the tying run. Had Frisch made the steal successfully he also could have scored on the hit.

The Terrible Seventh.

It looked then, with the score tied, as if Haines would be his usual effective self and that the Cardinals would go on to win but this didn't prove to be the case, for the Cubs in their half of the seventh scored four runs and sewed up the ball game.

Bush started it with a tap to Haines. Singles by Adams and Pick put men on first and third. Webb drove a sharp grounder to Toporcer but George in his eagerness to hand the ball to Frisch to start a double play let it slip from his hand and Adams scored and there were still two on. Wilson hit a hard hopper at Lester Bell and the bases were filled when the third baseman didn't hold it. The scorer called it a hit. Stephenson's single scored two more runners and Grimm's safety added another, before Hartnett hit into a double play, Toporcer to Frisch to Bottomley to end the frame.

Sherdel or McGraw to Hurl Final of Series in Chicago

Because of the impending series with Pittsburg, Manager O'Farrel was undecided as to his choice for a pitcher for the final game with the Cubs tomorrow. [illegible] would probably Sherdel or McGraw. Charley Root is due [illegible]

Frisch singled in the first inning after Blades and Toporcer had rolled to Beck, but Frisch was out trying to steal second.

After two were out in the Cubs' half, Webb doubled to left, but Haines bore down and the dangerous Wilson taped to the pitcher.

A run without a hit in the Cards' second, Southworth walked after Bottomley was out, took second on a wild pitch, third on Bell's sacrifice fly and scored when Pick fumbled Douthit's easy roller, after O'Farrel had walked. Haines fanned for the final out.

Two runs gave the Cubs the lead. After two were out, Hartnett walked, Beck singled to right and Hartnett went to third. Blake then singled and Hartnett scored. Southworth fielded Blake's hit and threw to third to head off Beck, but Bell let the ball get away and Beck scored. Adams tapped to aHines.

O'Farrell Flags Runner.

The Cubs were still generous in the third, but the Cardinals' heavy guns failed. Blades reached first on Adams' fumble and went to second, while Pick was throwing out Toporcer. Frisch then rolled out and Blades took third, Bottomley walked, but Southworth wasn't there in the pinch and flied to Adams.

Nothing for the Cubs. Pick struck out. Webb walked, but Wilson forced him and Hack was out trying to steal, O'Farrell to Frisch.

Bell and O'Farrell flied out in the fourth. Douthit walked and Haines grounded to Adams.

TWO HOMERS OFF GASTON GIVE WHITE SOX 6-5 VICTORY OVER BROWNS

Ward Smashes One With Two On, Falk's In Tenth Breaks Tie

Bad Breaks and Unfortunate Base-Running Hurt Howley's Men, Who Score Only One Earned Tally Against Lyons—Blankenship Due to Hurl Today.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Milton Gaston pitched a good game for the Browns against the White Sox yesterday afternoon in the third contest of the series, but two swings beat him, giving Chicago a 6 to 5 victory in ten innings, though the men of Dan Howley outhit the visitors, 9 to 8, and made only one error while the Sox were booting the ball four times.

One of the swings that beat our Milton was a lunge by Aaron Ward who in the past helped the Yankees to several pennants. With two men on bases and two out in the sixth inning and the Browns three runs ahead, Ward lunged at the ball, sliced a high fly to right and the ball fell in the right field pavilion for a home run, tying the score.

Falk's Homer Decides It.

The other swing was by Bib Falk, who does more damage to Brownie pitchers in the course of a season than Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth together. Bib led off for the Sox in the tenth inning. Bib does not like to work hard. He plays a great outfield and bats in many a run. He does his work in a masterful manner, but he does not like to prolong his working hours.

And so, leading off in the first extra inning, Bib decided to put an end to it. He missed by a few yards on his first swing, sending a foul into the grandstand near the right field line, but he timed it better the next time and lifted the ball to the roof of the pavilion in right center and the ball game was over, except for the formality of completing the inning.

Lyons Deserved Victory.

As a matter of fact, the Browns did not deserve to win the ball game. They earned only one run off Ted Lyons and ne earned run does not constitute a very strong clai min a baseball contest.

Barrett Donates a Run.

Barrett started the Browns on the way to their first run when he dropped O'Rourke's fly in the opening inning, Frank reaching second. Bennett sacrificed O'Rourke to third and Sisler's long fly to Barrett sent Frank over the plate.

In the second inning, McCurdy singled to center with one out and scored on Kamm's triple to right center and Ward tripled to the same spot, scoring Kamm.

Moe Berg fumbled Schang's grounder wtih two down in the second and the Browns seized that opportunity to push over two more unearned runs to take the lead. Gerber doubled to right center, scoring Schang and Gaston slammed one to left center, scoring Gerber.

An Earned Tally.

By way of variety the Browns earned one in the fourth. Rice singled to center and was forced by Melillo and Schang doubled against the right field wall, sending Melillo to third. Gerber's sacrifice fly scored Melillo. Then, in the fifth, with two down, Berg made another error, fumbling a grounder from Sisler and Williams scored George with a double to right center.

That gave the Browns a lead of 5 to 2, and Gaston held it only until Ward took that swing in the sixth inning. Milton got Barrett on a grounder to Gerber to start the inning, then lost control and walked Sheely and McCurdy. Kamm popped to Sisler, but Ward hit the previously-mentioned home run and the three tallies tied the score, and set the stage for Falk's tie-breaking tenth inning sock.

Breaks Against Howleymen.

Bad breaks and unfortunate base running hurt the Browns. In the third inning, Bennett singled to center and Sisler singled to right, sending Bennett to third, but George tried to stretch it into a double and was nailed at second.

While Williams was batting McCurdy chased a foul ball to the grandstand wall and stumbled and fell against the concrete. He was knocked down but after wet towels were applied to his head, he donned his accoutrements of war again and went behind the bat.

Williams sent a short fly to Falk and Bennett figured McCurdy might not be able to make the play at the plate, so soon after his injury, but he was all wrong, as McCurdy took Falk's throw and slapped it on Bennett and the promising rally was ended without a run.

Bad Base Running.

In the fourth inning Schang's double hit the top of the concrete bleacher wall, but bounced back to the playing field. The Browns contended it should be ruled a home run, but the mistake was made by Melillo and Schang, who did not run as fast as they might have run and as Melillo stopped at third and Schang at second, Umpire Owens ruled it a ball in play and therefore a two-base hit. It was costly, as the Browns would have won in 8½ innings if Schang's ball had travelled another inch, or if he had stretched it into a triple.

Gaston struck out six batters while Lyons fanned only three, but Lyon's control was better, the Browns getting only one pass while Gaston gave four. And two of those passes developed into runs for the visitors.

Ted Blankenship, another star of the White Sox staff, will pitch the fourth and final game of the series this afternoon with Sam Jones or Tom Zachary due for the Brownies.

Tomorrow there will be a double header with the Detroit Tigers, the first game at 1:30 o'clock.

THE KING OF SWAT.

LOU GEHRIG, Yankee first baseman, who leads Babe Ruth in number of home runs this season. Gehrig has 26 to Ruth's 25.

Gehrig, Yankee Star, Says Luck Plays an Imprtant Part in Home-Run Hitting

First Sacker, Only Man to Pass Babe Ruth in Four Baggers at This Time of Season, Asserts He Will Be Satisfied With 40 Circuit Smashes.

By G. W. Daley.

Of the New York World Sports Staff.

NEW YORK, July 2.—If Henry Louis Gehrig realizes that he is the King of Hitters, the new Sultan of Swat, the wielder of the screptre in the land of homerundom, he takes a peculiar way of showing it. After he clouted his twenty-sixth homer yesterday and shot above Babe Ruth, a feat which has never before been accomplished at this time of the year since the famous Babe began to smash four baggers for a living back in 1920, the new ruler removed his uniform and sat down in the Yankee club house under the concrete cash box owned by Jacob Ruppert and engaged in a game of pinochle with Doc Woods, the Yankee trainer.

"Yes, I know I hit 13 homers in June and beat Ruth's best record," said Lou, pressed heartily and repeatedly for a few views on long-distance hitting. "But I had to have a lot of luck to do it. That's all I want to say about home runs—a lot of luck."

There are a few Columbia College admirers of Lou's who have their pencils out and who have figured that with 13 more home runs in July—well started with one already—and 13 in August and 13 in September and the young clouting colossus can ride over the 59 a year record of Ruth, made in 1921. But Gehrig himself has no such illusions. He can't see a chance for 64 homers.

Hitting in Great Luck.

"I'll be satisfied if I get 50—satisfied if I get forty—for that will be far ahead of anything I have ever done," said Lou. "I was tickled t death with 16 and 17 in the first years I broke it. It seems to me that it is all luck—just the luck of getting a ball from the pitchers you can hit at the time you are ready and set for it.

"I have been hitting in great luck this month. It just seems I can't miss anything. The day I hit three in Boston—do you know that each one of these balls came to me to hit when I was all ready and knew I was ready? Well, it makes a big difference to hit then and to hit when you are fishing for a curve or a fast one.

"Suppose Ruth had been hitting home runs as I have this month. He has been out of the game and batting in hard luck, and that is why I caught him. But if he ahd been smacking one or two every other day, the pitchers would have started passing him. You'll say they didn't pass him because I am coming up next and they don't want to let me drive him around. The thing that makes it easier for me to hit, as I figure it, and where I am lucky, is that he gets on the bases so often. With him on they can't do anything but pitch to me.

Gave Valuable Tips.

"It is not exactly true that Miller Huggins changed my style of hitting and kept me from batting a lot of home runs last year and the year before. He is the manager of the club and he gave me a lot of god advice. Among other things he advised against me getting set in hitting to any one field, which I had practiced in the two years the Yankees sent me to Hartford after I came out of Columbia.

"Huggins gave me the tip to swing a little late at a ball and drop them into left field. I could do that and he showed me that by so doing the fielders were at a loss as to where to play for me. 'When they're back in left and center, then is the time to take your full swing and then you will stand a good chance of getting a long one through,' he used to say.

"This year, though, I have been hitting more to right field just because the pitchers have been feeding the ball to me, more in the middle and on the inside. But I can still hit to left. I have made two homers in the ten days or so—almost dead in left."

South Side Crews of Quincy Win Five of Six Events On Junior Day of Regatta

Western Club Oarsmen Capture Only First for St. Louis in Six-Oared Barge Race—Senior Events Today.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Ill., July 2.—Oarsmen of the South Side Boat Club of Quincy won the junior day meet of the Central States Amateur Rowing Association's annual regatta here today with a total of 110 points and are favored to win the senior events scheduled for Sunday.

The Quincy oarsmen took five firsts out of six events, and placed second in the sixth. Their nearest contenders were the oarsmen of the Century Rowing Club of St. Louis, who piled up a total of 38 points. The Western Rowing Club, also of St. Louis, won 31 points, the Baden Rowing Club of St. Louis, 12, the St. Louis Rowing Club 5, and the North End Rowing Club of St. Louis won no points.

Western Gains a First.

The only race not won by local rowers was the first event of the afternoon, the six-oared barge race over a three-quarter mile course. In that event the Quincy barge led the field until within 100 yards of the finish line, when the Western Rowing Club barge dashed ahead in a magnificent driving finish to win by slightly more than a length.

A brisk wind, quartering across the river course from the northwest, was a severe handicap to the oarsmen. Many also found difficulty with the river current, which after running parallel for most of the course, quartered it from the same direction as the wind. The wind raised choppy waves which militated against good oarsmanship. Much water was thrown by nearly every crew.

Two Close Finishes.

The regatta got away to a good start with a thrilling event, and the afternoon's events finished with the other feature race. In the first, the six-oared shell, the driving finish brought spectators to their feet, and the final event, the junior eight-oared shell race, was also close. Only two accidents, neither serious, occurred.

In the first four-oared shell event the Century Boat Club crew No. 1 was forced out at the start when an outrigger was jammed by a boat at the starting line, breaking it. In the final event, as the Century No. 2 swept across the finish line in second place the oar of O'Connell, at No. 2, struck a flag buoy, and rebounding, knocked him "cold." He was revived in a moment.

St. Louis Delegation of 118.

The setting was perfect for a regatta, but the attendance was disappointing. The decks of the Packet Belle of Calhoun, which arrived from St. Louis Saturday morning with the St. Louis oarsmen and a delegation of 118 St. Louisans, were lined with spectators, as were the east bank of the river. The west best view of the course, is a tangle of Missouri willows and cottonwoods, and unfit for occupation.

The St. Louis delegation, representing the Baden, Century, North End, St. Louis and Western Rowing Clubs, will return to St. Louis on the Belle of Calhoun, Sunday night, following the dance to be given by the South Side Boat Club for the visitors.

BARNHART HITS HOMER IN 9TH; PITTSBURG WINS

Cincinnati Reds Lose, 7 to 6, After Getting Jump in First and Scoring Two Runs.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 2.—Barnhart's home run with one on in the ninth inning gave Pittsburg a 7 to 6 victory over Cincinnati today.

Cincinnati got the jump in the first inning, scoring twice on a triple to Dressen and singles by Zitzmann, Pipp and Walker. The Reds added another in the third when after Critz doubled, P. Waner fumbled Dressen's hit. The visiting batters continued the barrage in the third, scoring three runs on three singles and a walk. The Pirates' first tally came in the third. Heinie Groh batting for Meadows, singled and went around the bases on two hits. Pittsburg tallied twice in each of the seventh and eighth innings by bunching hits. Headed all the way to the last inning the Pirates became desperate. One run behind and with Traynor on base, Barnhart ended the battle with a thrilling home run over the fence.

CARDINAL DEFENSE FALTERS AND HAINES IS BEATEN BY CUBS

Haines pitched himself out of a tight spot. Stephenson led off with a double. Grimm lined to Blades and Hartnett grounded to Toporcer, who made a pretty stop behind second. Beck walked and Blake flied to Douthit.

Blades opened the fifth with a single but stayed on first while Toporcer and Frisch flied out. Bottomley walked but Southworth ended it with a roller to Beck.

Another run for the Cubs. Adams started by beating out a grounder to Frisch on which it appeared Frank was a bit tardy with his throw. Pick sacrificed and Webb scored Adams with a single. Wilson grounded to Bell and Stephenson tapped to Haines.

Two bases on balls after one was out procured nothing for the Cardinals in the sixth. Bell struck out. O'Farrell and Douthit walked but Haines hit into a double play.

Grimm, Hartnett and Beck went out in order for the Cubs.

Cards Rally in Seventh.

The championship punch showed up in the seventh and the count was tied at three all. Blades, Toporcer and Frisch singled in succession, the latter hit scoring Blades and putting Toporcer on third. Frisch tried to steal second but was out, then Bottomley lined out. Southworth was there this time with the single which scored Toporcer with the tying run. Bell followed with a single and Blake was relieved by Bush. O'Farrell walked to fill the sacks but Douthit forced O'Farrell.

Haines' support cracked and the Cubs counted four times in their half. Bush was easy. Then Adams singled and Pick singled. Webb grounded hard to Toporcer, who, with a double play in front of him, fumbled. Adams scored and there were still two on. Wilson hit to Bell and the scorer called a hit to fill the bases. Stephenson bounced a hit over Bell's head, Pick and Webb scoring and Wilson going to third. Grimm followed with a safety to right, scoring Wilson and sending Stephenson to third. Hartnett ended it by hitting into a double play, Toporcer to Frisch to Bottomley.

Reinhart took Haines' place on the mound and retired Beck and Bush. Adams smacked one at Bell which the third baseman knocked down but could not hold and when Bell picked the ball up and threw it over Bottomley's head. Adams reached second and stayed there while Pick flied to Blades.

Cincinnati got the jump in the first inning, scoring twice on a triple to Dressen and singles by Zitzmann, Pipp and Walker. The Reds added another in the third when after Critz doubled, P. Waner fumbled Dressen's hit. The visiting batters continued the barrage in the third, scoring three runs on three singles and a walk. The Pirates' first tally came in the third. Heinie Groh batting for Meadows, singled and went around the bases on two hits. Pittsburg tallied twice in each of the seventh and eighth innings by bunching hits. Headed all the way to the last inning the Pirates became desperate. One run behind and with Traynor on base, Barnhart ended the battle with a thrilling home run over the fence.

CARDINAL DEFENSE FALTERS AND HAINES IS BEATEN BY CUBS

Haines pitched himself out of a tight spot. Stephenson led off with a double. Grimm lined to Blades and Hartnett grounded to Toporcer, who made a pretty stop behind second. Beck walked and Blake flied to Douthit.

Blades opened the fifth with a single but stayed on first while Toporcer and Frisch flied out. Bottomley walked but Southworth ended it with a roller to Beck.

Another run for the Cubs. Adams started by beating out a grounder to Frisch on which it appeared Frank was a bit tardy with his throw. Pick sacrificed and Webb scored Adams with a single. Wilson grounded to Bell and Stephenson tapped to Haines.

Two bases on balls after one was out procured nothing for the Cardinals in the sixth. Bell struck out. O'Farrell and Douthit walked but Haines hit into a double play.

Grimm, Hartnett and Beck went out in order for the Cubs.

Cards Rally in Seventh.

The championship punch showed up in the seventh and the count was tied at three all. Blades, Toporcer and Frisch singled in succession, the latter hit scoring Blades and putting Toporcer on third. Frisch tried to steal second but was out, then Bottomley lined out. Southworth was there this time with the single which scored Toporcer with the tying run. Bell followed with a single and Blake was relieved by Bush. O'Farrell walked to fill the sacks but Douthit forced O'Farrell.

Haines' support cracked and the Cubs counted four times in their half. Bush was easy. Then Adams singled and Pick singled, Webb grounded hard to Toporcer, who, with a double play in front of him, fumbled. Adams scored and there were still two on. Wilson hit to Bell and the scorer called a hit to fill the bases. Stephenson bounced a hit over Bell's head, Pick and Webb scoring and Wilson going to third. Grimm followed with a safety to right, scoring Wilson and sending Stephenson to third. Hartnett ended it by hitting into a double play, Toporcer to Frisch to Bottomley.

Reinhart took Haines' place on the mound and retired Beck and Bush. Adams smacked one at Bell which the third baseman knocked down but could not hold and when Bell picked the ball up and threw it over Bottomley's head. Adams reached second and stayed there while Pick flied to Blades.

Tilden and Cochet Again Deny They Will Join "Pros"

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 2.

A RUMOR that Big Bill Tilden and Henri Cochet would both turn professional next Monday, having agreed to sign contracts with a well-known English promoter, spread like wildfire around Wimbledon's center court today after Cochet had downed Jean Borotra in five sets to take the Wimbledon singles title.

"It's the first I've heard about it," said Tilden to questioners.

"Leave me alone," was Cochet's response.

By Herbert L. Bourke.

WIMBLEDON, July 3.—Wimbledon paid homage today to a w queen of international lawn nis.

Miss Helen Wills, tall, sturdy, hletic daughter of California, was acclaimed this afternoon when, h a deft, dazzling drive she d the base line placement nst the sparkling Spanish preder, Senorita Lilli de Alvarez, ich ended the title match, 6—2, —4, in favor of the American.

It was the first American vicy scored in the women's chamnship since 1905 when Mrs. Bun, the former May Sutton, captured crown, and it was the one sins triumph for the Yankees this r, for, with the passing of Frank ter and "Big Bill" Tilden, as as representatives of Great itain and other European couns from the men's division, that ampionship became an allench affair, in which the azing Henri Cochet once again opped the first two sets and then me from behind to whip Jean orotra, the defending champion, —6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5.

America still has opportunity, wever, to win doubles titles, for den and Hunter entered the final round of men's doubles today by quishing Randolph Lycett and W. Austin of England, 6—0, —8, 6—4, while Miss Wills, parted with a sister Californian, Elizabeth Ryan, attained the l round of the women's doubles Friday, where they will meet British pair, Mrs. Kathleen Mc Godfrey and Miss Betty Nut-

Spanish Girl Outclassed.

With no British representative either of the singles finals and international aspect in the Cot-Borotra engagement, the interest of the gallery as no less than ,000 were in attendance, quite turally centered in the meeting Miss Wills and Senorita de Alrez.

The demure, unsmiling Helen, r white, sailored-collared uni, and the happy faced, spark Senorita, arrayed in vivid came to the championship rt each determined on victory, the cool always capable game the American girl and at times ing plays of her adversary profed a contest of classic quality one which was much more ly fought than the scores ht indicate.

Throughout the gripping duel Wills played the steadier and re careful game, and through the many and prolonged backd exchanges which featured the tch. She had a way of forcing Spanish player into overhit, and her victory, perhaps owto her appealing court deportt and lack of theatricalism as as to her fine stroke producand faultless generalship, was popular.

e final in the men singles saw i Cochet demonstrating for the d consecutive match that he is greatest five-set player ever to pete in a Wimbledon champion. In the quarter final, Cochet r yielding two sets to Frank nter, won the next three and the tch. In the semi-finals, after en had captured the first two and a lead of 5—1 in the , the same Cochet carried gh to a thrilling triumph, and afternoon he allowed Jean otra, defending champion, a -set lead before he asserted mastery and won the Wimn title.

Cochet's victory gave France its th successive conquest in the bledon singles for Borotra the title in 1924. Rene Lawas the winner in 1925 and the winner last year.

THE DEMPSEY FIGHT "PLANT" AS IT IS TODAY

THAT Dempsey's general physical condition is good is shown in these photographs taken recently at Saratoga, where he has beeen in training.

There is only a few pounds of fat on Dempsey, and with nearly three weeks in which to train he should be fit to stand the 15-round gaff.

It is not believed any serious interruption to his work will follow the announcement, yesterday, of his brother's death by suicide.

WRAY'S COLUMN

They Do Come Back.

BROOKLYN is coming back strong, now, although its hitting punch is none too good. Its rise from the rut is due to comebacks being achieved by too hurlers—Dazzy Vance and Bill Doak, retired veteran formerly with the Cardinals.

Vance, the first national League "most valuable player," flopped terribly, last year. Now he is hitting on high again and regaining the dazzling form that carried him to 28 victories in 1923. That year he had a whale of a hitting team back of him.

Bill Doak's return to the spotlight is far more remarkable than Vance's. Doak had quit baseball to juggle Florida real estate. He was completely out of the game and did not figure on returning to it.

Then the Florida bubble broke and left him financially stranded.

At an advanced age, for a ballplayer, Doak's comeback has been remarkable. This morning Vance's record today was 9 and 6, .700, having won seven and lost three games. He pitched a whale of a battle in St. Louis and really looked better than in 1913, when he topped the National League hurlers in efficiency. Vance's record today was 9 and 5.

These Brooklyn veterans have come back in the right way—not only by getting in condition, but by going to the firing line in training camp and championship games, and taking their medicine.

Dempsey would have a lot better chance had he ought his way back, than by depending on mere practice conditioning.

The Pay-Off.

C. H. K. inquires how it happens that a certain handbook here in St. Louis is reported to have paid off a $10 wager at odds of more than 181 to 1, when "big stores" here have a pay-off imit of 20 to 1.

Generally speaking, the 20 to 1 maximum limit prevails throughout all handbooks in this city. Formerly it was even lower——15 to 1. In one or two instances, however, track odds are paid on wagers, up to $10, provided the bet is made "over the counter," and not by telephone.

Dempsey to the Rescue.

BOXING promoters are beginning to brighten up a bit with Dempsey's return to action.

Dempsey is to them the Moses that will lead the game back to its peak—a peak chiefly notable for the daredevil recklessness with which the cash customers rushed up to the box office and hurled down $50 for a single seat.

Some of the dash has gone out of the well remembered C. C. of late. The box office hasn't been stormed with the old vigor since the season opened. The biggest fight of all — Sharkey and Maloney—was financially a disappointment, whereas three years ago a big lummix like Firpo and a wreck like Harry Wills, fairly packed the house.

The present champion has done nothing to pep up the customers who have conceived a strong dislike of having literature mixed up with their fighting—and very tame fighting at that.

The hard-pitching Dempsey will be eagerly awaited and cheered loudly, whether he gets anywhere or not. The promoters have it all figured out. Rickard is praying for one of two things to happen July 21—that Dempsey will beat Sharkey; or, if Sharkey wins, that he accomplishes the feat by a knockout.

Tap-and-Get-Away Stuff.

IF Sharkey shades Dempsey in one of those play-it-safe affairs, the promoters might as well put up the shutters on the season. The Sharkey-Tunney affair would then reduce to a safety-first affair, about as thrilling as a pillow fight.

Dempsey has ruined the ring followers of the country who have come to believe that no fight is worth while unless the principals bite the resin once or twice.

That's one theory of the present pugilistic apathy.

There is another. It is that the public is becoming pocketbook-weary. Digging for double eagles to be spent for tickets to uninteresting and inconclusive shows is not thrilling.

If the fight boom is dying out, about the only thing that could restore it would be a double victory by Dempsey over both Sharkey and Tunney.

And that's asking quite a little of Jack's comeback.

Bobby Jones Tells How to Get the Most Out of Golf Club Grip

Star Emphasizes Compactness and Leverage, and Gives Finger and Palm Combination as Best Hold—Strength of Hands Should Be Considered.

By Robert T. Jones Jr.

RECENTLY Mrs. Jones started to play golf and I was struck immediately with the evident impossibility of her hitting a golf ball with the grip she tried to use. Yet her grip was not vastly different from that with which the average male takes hold of his first golf club, nor from that which many players continue to use when they should know better.

It seems to me that there has been in our best instruction a tendency to overlook the importance of a proper position of the hands upon the club. The usual formula is to advise that the club be held in a manner comfortable to the player and that feature is very important. Obviously, there may be, and very often there is, considerable difficulty to be encountered by one person in adopting the exact grip used by another. Human hands differ almost as much as human faces, and small allowances must be made here and there for these variations, but still there are certain principles which cannot be overlooked in setting the hands of a beginner upon a golf club.

The average person who has never played golf, when handed a club, wants to take hold of it in one of two ways; either entirely in the fingers, or, like a baseball player, entirely in the palms. The former is preferred by women while the latter has favor with the men, probably because of their universal training in college or high school baseball. Yet neither will work with a golf club.

If the player takes the club entirely in his fingers, he quite obviously cannot manipulate the small shaft with certainty, and the same is true if he grasps it like a baseball bat. But there is a still greater objection to both types of grip. With the club held solely in the fingers it is impossible to bring the clubhead to the ground without arching the wrists and arms upward. Just one trial will show that in this position the wrists are almost powerless.

Compactness and Leverage

So if the grip is entirely in the palms; the club would have to be of such a flat lie as to be almost a straight line from the top of the shaft to the toe of the head.

But no argument is necessary to show that both methods are wrong. It would probably be best now to follow with a few suggestions concerning a better way.

There are two things to be considered, from a theoretical viewpoint, in determining the proper grip—compactness and leverage. Our two hands must fit closely together upon the shaft because our two arms are of the same length and they must work together. That much, of course, is undisputed, so the problem is really a paradox—how to get the hands far apart while keeping them close together.

The question of leverage is the troublesome factor. On the average driver, 42 inches long, the clubhead would be at least 34 inches from the right hand of the player. That means that hold on to eight or 10 inches of wood of comparatively negligible weight a person must control the clubhead weighing seven to nine ounces with a lever arm of 30 inches or more. It is easily seen that to do so requires a generous spread of the hands upon the club. It was Archimedes, I think, of ancient fame, who announced that, given a fulcrum upon which to rest his lever, he could move the world. A golfer does not have to move the world, but an inch or a fraction more leverage in his grip will aid materially in propelling the smaller spheroid which is his immediate objective.

To illustrate the importance of leverage as applied to the golf stroke, take hold of the club with the thumb and forefinger of each hand at points four inches apart and waggle the clubhead back and forth. Now drop the lower point 10 inches. In the latter position a great deal less effort is required to move the club. Of course, for proper control the intermediate fingers must be on the club, but I believe that the two most positive points of the grip are with the thumb and forefinger of the right hand and with the two smallest fingers of the left hand, and that these points should be as far apart as the spread of the hands will permit. That is one reason that large hands are an admitted asset to the golfer.

Finger and Palm Grip.

Leaving out of consideration the fact that the grip determines to a great extent the position of the wrists, it is also important in regard to this question of obtaining leverage upon the club. To this end, the best grip, and that used by all first class players, is a combination finger and palm affair. The club is grasped by the fingers but it is pressed almost diagonally across the palm of each hand.

As grip the club, the shaft rests squarely upon the second joint of the index finger of each hand, and passes across the palm, emerging midway between the base of the little finger and the wrist. In this way I have a contact with the club greatly exceeding the width of my hands, and when in addition the index finger of my right hand is extended and crooked around the shaft, I have increased even more my leverage upon the club. I do not think that the thumbs should be placed upon the top of the shaft for in that position they restrict the free swing. Slightly upon the side, forming a letter V with the index fingers is the best position.

Many players would do well to consider carefully if they have enough strength in their hands to use the inter-locking or over-lapping grip. Although these grips make for compactness, there is a necessary loss of leverage which may be fatal to a player with small or weak hands. When the little finger of the right hand is lapped over the index finger of the left, the spread is decreased so much. For women always, and for men not blessed with large, strong hands, I should recommend the old fashioned grip with no overlap or inter-lock. It has recently gone out of style because it has been thought that one simply must use the Vardon or some other kind of grip, but the older and plainer style has lost none of its efficacy, and can serve just as well as the popular variations.

The Call of the Outdoors

By ALEC MERMOD

Game Propagation.

THE scientific breeding of game birds has been going on in European countries for a hundred years or more, but not until about 30 years ago did the idea appeal to the sportsmen of this country, and then only in a half-hearted way.

A few rich men in the East, who owned large estates, experimented in a small way with different breeds of pheasants. We in the United States (especiall in the West and Middle West) did not see any necessity of game propagation, for there was an abundance everywhere of quail, wild turkey and migratory birds of all kinds.

The East started the movement, then it skipped this section and was taken up on the Pacific Coast where Mongolian pheasants and Hungarian partridges were imported and released in California, Oregon and Washington, but it was in Oregon that the pheasants seemed to thrive best, so that in a few years there was a short open season with a small bag limit, and now this bird is quite plentiful. The Hungarian partridge has not been a big success so far, although it has increased sufficiently to afford some shooting.

Eleven or twelve years ago the pheasant was introduced into South Dakota where it is now to be found in thousands.

Illinois Plan Worked.

SEVERAL years ago a State Game Farm was established in Illinois. It has been very successful in raising game birds of several varieties and has distributed hundreds of pheasants and thousands of eggs throughout the State. But the birds have not multiplied as they have in the Western States, and so far, while we have five days' open season with a bag limit of two cocks a day, the shooting is not very good.

Game farms, both privately and State owned, have been established in many parts of the country where both foreign and native birds are being raised; many dealers in the East are now ready to take and fill orders for nearly any of the upland birds and a great variety of water fowl.

Progress of Missouri Club.

THERE are many prominent St. Louisans on the board of directors who have pledged themselves to see that the main object of the club is carried out, i. e., to restore more game and fish than are destroyed.

So far 500 pheasants and 20 pair of quail have been released, and the club has contracted for 200 wild turkeys to be shipped from Mexico where they are still to be found in large numbers.

The country surrounding the club property will very soon profit to a material extent, for there will be quite an overflow of game so the shooting public at large will have an opportunity to indulge in its favorite sport.

The State of Louisiana which already has nearly 200,000 acres of land and water set aside for game refuges has added 81,000 acres in the shape of leased lands for the protection of upland game birds and bear and deer.

Upper Meramec Good.

THE Upper Meramec is now in good shape for fishing, and some nice bass have been brought in. The Gasconade is reported clear above Hazel Green, and the Big Piney has been in shape for some time. The Bourbeuse is still muddy. Indian Creek is clear and bass are beginning to strike at artificial flies.

TEXAN WINS U. S. COLLEGE TENNIS TITLE

Wilmer Allison Clearly Outclasses Ben Gorchakoff of Occidental College, California, in Finals.

By the Associated Press.

HAVERFORD, Pa., July 2.—The state of Texas captured its first national intercollegiate singles tennis championship today when Wilmer Allison, University of Texas, defeated Ben Gorchakoff of Occidental College in the final match, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1.

The East however took the doubles title when Princeton's team, John Van Ryn and Kenneth Appel, beat Gorchakoff and Norval Craig of Occidental in a four set struggle, 6-3, 7-5, 5-7, 6-4.

In the singles Gorchakoff was not able to cope with Allison's terrific service and court generalship, and it required only forty-five minutes for the Texan to brush his opponent aside. Allison sailed into the Californian almost from the beginning, the latter winning but one game in each set.

When the match was half finished it appeared to spectators that Gorchakoff realized defeat was almost a certainty and decided to save himself for the doubles championship contest which was to start at the conclusion of the singles. In this, coupled with Norval Craig, he was also defeated, although he and Craig gave the Occidental College pair a hard battle.

CHANCE SHOT, CONCEDING 18 POUNDS, IS BEATEN BY KENTUCKY

FAVORITE FAILS TO MAINTAIN STRETCH SPURT

Jockey Maiben, on Winner, Waits for Sande's Move, Then Outlasts the Son of Fair Play.

By G. F. T. Ryall.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 2.—Chance Shot, winner of the Withers Mile and the Belmont Stakes, was not able to give 18 pounds to Kentucky II in the tenth running of the Dwyer Stakes, for three-year-olds at one mile and a half and was beaten here this afternoon. The margin was two lengths. Bois De Rose was third. The time for the distance was 2:31 4-5.

Yesterday, in commenting on the Dwyer Stakes, this writer said, "Man O'War got the race of his life when he tried to concede 18 pounds to John P. Grier, in this race." But today there was nothing approaching the class of Grier in this field. The writer might add now, Chance Shot is not another Man O'War.

Barring some slight interference in the first half mile, Chance Shot met no mishaps. He moved up smoothly when Sande set him down and he stood a drive gamely for nearly three furlongs but Kentucky II held him safely. Incidentally, Maiben has his revenge. Maiben rode Chance Play, full brother of Chance Shot, when Crusader, with Sande up, beat him a head on the post last year.

Maiben's Judgment of Pace Wins.

It may be said in passing Maiben rode one of his good races, showing perfect judgment of pace, and the story of the race might best be summed up in that.

The five starters did not delay long at the post and when the break came Maiben sent Kentucky II to the front. Flambino was a half length back passing the stand with Bois De Rose third on the outside and Chance Shot, which broke from the rail, in close quarters. Coming to the first turn Sande tried to take up and go around, but Fator on Bois De Rose held him in.

Rounding the turn he was crowded slightly, but turning into the back stretch Flambino bore out a bit and Sande quickly moved into second place a length off Kentucky II. Six furlongs from home Flambino was through and dropped back with Architect as Fator made his move on Bois De Rose.

For the first seven furlongs the pace was remarkably slow and neither Maiben nor Sande made a move until half way around the stretch turn. When he did make his move Sande seemed a bit too anxious and when he got Chance Shot within half a length of Kentucky II he went to the whip. The Fair Play colt responded but a sixteenth of a mile from home he hung and Kentucky II drew away.

The fractional times for the mile and a half were: :24, :50 1-5, 1:16, 1:43, 2:07 3-5, 2:31 4-5.

Kentucky II is a bay colt by Royal Canopy out of Naisha, by John O'Gaunt. He was purchased in England by A. C. Schwartz about the same time as the New York sportsman bought Jack Horner. He cost a fancy price, too, but the purse of $18,500 he won today discounted much of that.

Sande had no excuses for Chance Shot after the Dwyer, nor did Pete Coyne, trainer of the colt, which now will be rested until the Saratoga meeting.

Latter shuffled back in the early stages, closed an immense gap. Stormy Port prominent from start, took lead in stretch, but quit badly in last sixteenth. Duff's Time was racing well when taken up to avoid fallen horses. Keith went very wide in stretch. Old Times suffered heavy early interference. Malcolm was racing in tight quarters and near lead when he fell, Beauregard and Big Chief falling over his prostrate form. Beauregard had raced on the pace from the start.

Shadowy under restraint, but with first half mile moved to leaders in stretch and under light driving outstayed Genial Host. Latter also began slowly, forced wide but closed with a rush. Royal Omar, taken back after first quarter, came fast again when urged. Fair Rowena began tiring after half mile. Red Grange was much used making early pace and retired fast last quarter. Rocky Cliff was taken up sharply after a quarter and never recovered. Little Visitor quit badly.

Toro, well handled, restrained off leaders for half mile, raced up fast on outside thereafter and, taking lead in last furlong, easily held Charles J. S. safe. Latter, also restrained first half mile, raced wide entering stretch and, finishing gamely wore down Greenock. Latter had hustled to dispose of Wisdom, tiring after reaching last furlong. Noble Wrack finished fast. Happy Time well up for slightly more than four furlongs, then tired under impost. Wisdom was done after half a mile.

a—Idle Hour Farm entry.

Oh Susanna, away fast and showing most speed, raced Sir Peter into defeat after half a mile, drew away slightly thereafter and continuing gamely, won with speed in reserve. Emery far back in early stages, closed with a big rush. Percentage away slowly, was rushed into contention, lost ground at stretch turn and began tiring last furlong. Clonaslee also raced wide, held on fairly well. Sir Peter was hard urged in forcing winner's fast pace and tired badly in stretch.

$2 mutuels paid: Oh Susanna, win $6.00, place $3.60, show $3.40; Energy, place $4.40, show $2.60; Percentage, show $2.40.

Peggy Bledsoe raced into a long lead early, was taken up, restrained last two turns, drew away slightly after reaching stretch and outstayed Eric. Latter, probably much the best, dwelt slightly at the start, raced into contention fast, was forced wide after first half mile and, finishing gamely, was wearing the winner down. Loretta Brooks, fairly well up from the start, began tiring in last 70 yards. Lady Carolyn was in tight quarters in the drive after racing wide last half mile. Others weer outrun.

HEAVY BATTING STANDS OUT IN MUNICIPAL LEAGUE CONTESTS

SLUGGERS HOLD FIELD DAY IN ALL LEAGUES

Pitchers Wessling, Madsen, O'Neal and Schnell Turn in Excellent Games for Their Teams, However, Against Strong Opponents

The city authorities' ruling that fireworks may not be used until the eve of July 4 meant nothing to batters in the Municipal League yesterday. The hitters showed contempt for the edict by breaking forth with an explosion of base hits which in many cases would have put that Friday fiasco between the Browns and the White Sox to shame.

Merry-Go-Round Affair.

Fans who watched the melees in the Manufacturers' League saw perhaps the most intensive hitting. Four teams each scored from 21 to 31 runs off 17 to 30 hits.

Then to show a diversity, some of the nines turned around in double-header games and produced low-score and low-run affairs.

Some Pitchers Pitched.

In such a bombardment of batting throughout every division of the league, the pitching of Wassling and Madsen for the Freight Accountants in the Missouri Pacific League; Schnell for Zions in the Senior Evangelical League, and O'Neal and Abkenier in the Commercial; stood out in bold relief.

Wessling and Madsen, twirling against the Boosters, allowed but two hits, and were mostly responsible for their team's 5 to 2 victory.

O'Neal Repeats.

O'Neal, who was drafted from the outfield last week to the pitching slab for Tower Camp in the Commercial League, with excellent results, started again yesterday and granted only three hits to the Huttigs.

Schnell was in rare form againct the St. Matthews aggregation, holding his opponents to three hits, and winning, 14 to 2.

Employed Boys.

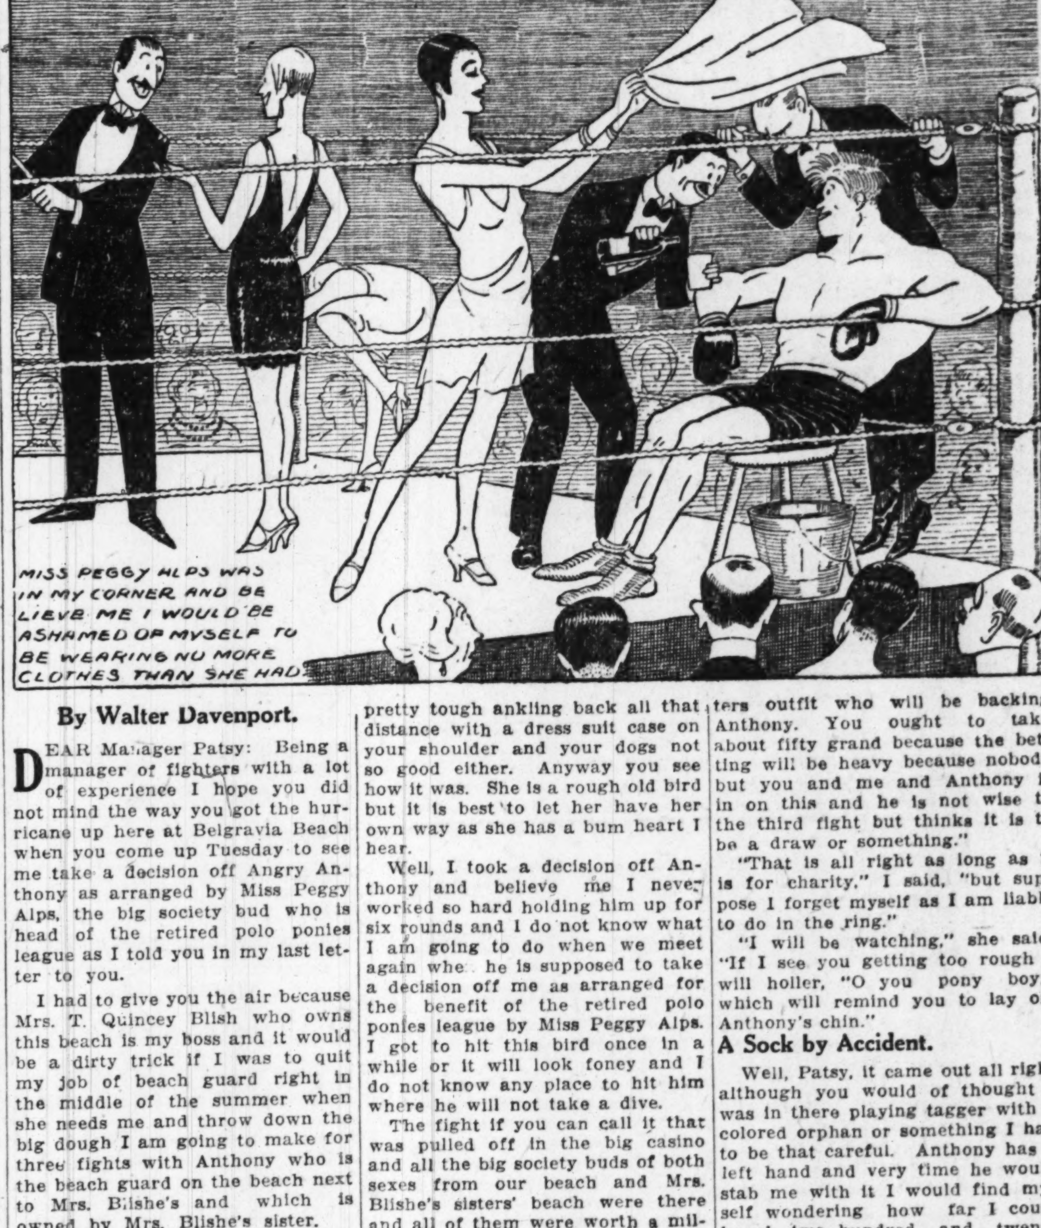
K. O. Frisbie Wins "Frame Up" Opener

—But Patsy Fears the Other Two Bouts

No. 13—A Fighter's Letters to His Manager



MISS PEGGY ALPS WAS IN MY CORNER AND BELIEVE ME I WOULD BE ASHAMED OF MYSELF TO BE WEARING NO MORE CLOTHES THAN SHE HAD ON

By Walter Davenport.

DEAR Manager Patsy: Being a manager of fighters with a lot of experience I hope you did not mind the way you got the hurricane up here at Belgravia Beach when you come up Tuesday to see me take a decision off Angry Anthony as arranged by Miss Peggy Alps, the big society bud who is head of the retired polo ponies league as I told you in my last letter to you.

I had to give you the air because Mrs. T. Quincey Blish who owns this beach is my boss and it would be a dirty trick if I was to quit my job of beach guard right in the middle of the summer when she needs me and throw down the big dough I am going to make for three fights with Anthony who is the beach guard on the beach next to Mrs. Blishe's and which is owned by Mrs. Blishe's sister.

How was I to know that when I come down to the train to meet you Mrs. Blish who has so much jack that she lends the Rockefellers dough, would be there too to meet a lot of exclusive society people.

"Frisbie," she said to me, "who was that person who got off the train and shook hands with you?"

"That was Patsy O'Brien, my manager," I said.

"It is 9 o'clock now and I am going out walking at 10 o'clock," she said, "and if I see Mr. O'Brien around here when I go out walking you are fired. Your job is to see that I and my guests are not annoyed and the minute I saw Mr. O'Brien I was annoyed."

"There is no train back to town till 4 this afternoon," I said.

"Who is talking about trains," she said. "All I said is that if I see Mr. O'Brien around here when I go walking, you are canned."

Frisbie Gets Decision.

SO you see I had to give you the air. I hope you got somebody to give you a lift in his car on the road because it must of been pretty tough ankling back all that distance with a dress suit case on your shoulder and your dogs not so good either. Anyway you see how it was. She is a rough old bird but it is best to let her have her own way as she has a bum heart I hear.

Well, I took a decision off Anthony and believe me I never worked so hard holding him up for six rounds and I do not know what I am going to do when we meet again when he is supposed to take a decision off me as arranged for the benefit of the retired polo ponies league by Miss Peggy Alps. I got to hit this bird once in a while or it will look foney and I do not know any place to hit him where he will not take a dive.

The fight if you can call it that was pulled off in the big casino and all the big society buds of both sexes from our beach and Mrs. Blishe's sisters' beach were there and all of them were worth a million dollars in the least.

Miss Peggy Alps was in my corner and believe me I do not care how many millions dollars she has I would be ashamed of myself to be wearing no more clothes than she had on. If what she was wearing was a dress then you could hold John Ringling's show under your hat that's all.

"O You Pony Boy."

"LISTEN Miss Alps," I said to her just before the fight. "I am doing this for you because you are raising a big fund to take care of old polo ponies but suppose this big chunk over there I am fighting will not leave me carry him for six rounds. If he gives me a stiff poke in the nose I am liable to bear down because it will make me sore and that will be the end of this fight."

"Think of what you are going to get out of this benefit," she said. "Remember you are to take a decision off him tonight and he is to take a decision off you next time and the third fight will be on the square and of course you will win and drag down half the bets we will collect off Mrs. Blishe's sisters outfit who will be backing Anthony. You ought to take about fifty grand because the betting will be heavy because nobody but you and me and Anthony is in on this and he is not wise to the third fight but thinks it is to be a draw or something."

"That is all right as long as it is for charity," I said, "but suppose I forget myself as I am liable to do in the ring."

"I will be watching," she said. "If I see you getting too rough I will holler, "O you pony boy," which will remind you to lay off Anthony's chin."

A Sock by Accident.

Well, Patsy, it came out all right although you would of thought I was in there playing tagger with a colored orphan or something I had to be that careful. Anthony has a left hand and very time he would stab me with it I would find myself wondering how far I could knock two hundred and twenty pounds of bull meat.

Once we was in a clinch and I poked my left into his stomack and he said:

"Go easy, big boy, I just eat a big steak and there is no use spoiling a show when it is for charity."

Another time I slapped him with my open hand on the ear and he said:

"If you do that again I will have to take a dive and then you will be out of luck for the big dough."

And by accident I socked him in the eye in the sixth round and he said:

"Listen Frisbie, what are you trying to do, ruin this benefit. Lay off that eye of mine will you."

Well Patsy I was never so tired laying off a guy in my life and between you and me I think I will have to sock somebody on the chin pretty soon because this can't go on much longer. How I am going to loose a decision to this bird next week I do not know. Between you and me you would not dare to even kiss this bird for fear he would take the count. I am using Miss Peggy Alpses brother, who is a football player in college where he is called the hurdling half-wit for a sparring partner and I got to carry him too because I would not like to hurt her feelings.

A big newspaper is asking me to write a lot of articles for them which I will tell you about later. Where is Tunney hiding out these days.

K. O. FRISBIE.

Patsy Has Suspicions.

DEAR Frisbie:

That's all right about me bethrown out of Belgravia Beach even by you. That don't worry me any. There are very few places worth going to a fight manager isn't thrown out of sooner or later. Besides I got used to being thrown out early. I was born in St. Louis and the first thing my old man did to me after I learned to walk was throw me out and I guess he would of done it sooner if he had been home.

What's worrying me is that sweet charity frame you have been let in for by that innocent young thing. Miss Peggy Alps. And I don't like that Kid McCoy stuff this Anthony pulls about how easy you could lick him. Something is coming to you. I ain't sure what it will be but I got a hunch it won't be fifty grand. If I was on the ground maybe I could get wise to what is about to fall on you but all I can do is to tell you to keep your left out straight and your chin behind your shoulder. Boy I just feel it in my bones that we are about to hear the ambulance gong.

Let me know what happens and don't hold anything back. I am all set for the worst. When a bunch of millionaires talk about handing you fifty grand get all ready to give up a couple of ears and at least one leg. That's all except does this Miss Peggy Alps pack a gun or is she just the master mind of a mob. If you notice she ever begins to take a personal interest in you forget she is a woman and sock her. It aint nice to sock a lady but it saves a lot of time.

PATSY.

EVENTS RECITED IN PREVIOUS LETTERS

HARVEY (K. O.) FRISBIE is a young chauffeur, 18 years old, who writes Patsy O'Brien, a hard-boiled but human prizefight manager, in an effort to enter the famed O'Brien fighting stable. The latter looks over Frisbie and finally lets him in. Aside from his ring proclivities, Frisbie is the self-appointed successor to Rudy Valentino as the world's leading sheik. Right now, K. O. Frisbie is quite sure he can bowl over Paolino, Sharkey or Tunney. After watching Harvey polish off a number of tough second raters, O'Brien secures the boy a summer job as life saver at ultra fashionable Belgravia Beach. The lay of the land is that Mrs. Blish, who owns half the beach, is crazy about fighters and wants one to add tone to her swimming domain. On the other hand, Mrs. O. N. T. Sledge, Mrs. Blish's sister, is also plugstruck but owing to a terrific squabble with her sister has ended diplomatic relations with the Blishes, taken over the other half of the beach as her territory, and engaged Angry Anthony, another canvas kisser, for a life saver. Shortly after Harvey's arrival he agrees to enter a framed fight agreement with Angry Anthony, whereby two battles are to be fixed to stimulate betting on the third. Peggy Alps, a society girl interested in retired polo ponies, is behind the scheme.

No Pay, Players 'Boot' Game Away, —One Suspended

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 2.

JOHN KING, left fielder for St. Joseph in the Western Association, was suspended indefinitely today by Dale Gear, president of the association, for leading a group of players who made a farce of yesterday's game between St. Joseph and Topeka here. Topeka won the game, 15 to 3, and fans in the stands left, disgusted at the antics of the local players.

King, who leads the Western Association in home runs, made no effort to catch balls hit in his direction. Manager Marty Purdell was out of the city and the players, incensed because no pay was forthcoming on that, their pay day, decided to boot their way through the game.

President Gear said today that he probably also will stick a heavy fine on King.

No Pay, Players 'Boot' Game Away, —One Suspended

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 2.

JOHN KING, left fielder for St. Joseph in the Western Association, was suspended indefinitely today by Dale Gear, president of the association, for leading a group of players who made a farce of yesterday's game between St. Joseph and Topeka here. Topeka won the game, 15 to 3, and fans in the stands left, disgusted at the antics of the local players.

King, who leads the Western Association in home runs, made no effort to catch balls hit in his direction. Manager Marty Purdell was out of the city and the players, incensed because no pay was forthcoming on that, their pay day, decided to boot their way through the game.

President Gear said today that he probably also will stick a heavy fine on King.

POOR ROADS STILL COST MOTOR CAR OWNERS MILLIONS

Gallon of Gasoline Gives Twice to Three Times the Mileage on Paving As On Dirt.

TIRE, TIME AND COMFORT SAVING

Operating Cost of Car Averages 2 to 3 Cents Per Mile Less on Pavement, Test Shows.

Greater comfort and reduced repair and maintenance expense are not the only reason for better highways. Tests conducted by the engineering experimental station of the State College of Washington indicates that the cost of poor roads, when measured in terms of increased car wear and gasoline consumption, is tremendous.

Mud Roads Costly.

In Missouri, experts have figured that the mud tax has cost motorists an aggregate of $30,000,000 annually. This does not take into account loss of time and comfort and what it means to the farmer who cannot get his products to market at the proper time, but is based on extra gasoline consumed, wear and tear on tires and machines and additional repair bills.

Experts have found that one gallon of gasoline will yield 31 ton miles on concrete, 21 ton miles on gravel and 18 ton miles of dirt; a credit of ten miles to gravel over dirt, and a credit of 17 miles to paving over dirt.

A 1.4 ton motor car delivered 22 miles of travel on concrete on one gallon of gasoline at a cost of 20 cents; on gravel it required 1.46 gallons at a cost of 29 cents and on dirt it required 2.2 gallons at a cost of 44 cents.

In its research work the State College of Washington found that tire treads wear off approximately 17 times as fast on good macadam and about 56 times as fast on poor macadam as on concrete. Translating these figures into money, if $1 represents the tire cost for a certain mileage on concrete, the cost for traveling the same distance on good macadam would be $17 and on poor macadam $56. It also was found that if it costs $10 for gasoline to drive a car a certain distance on a concrete road, the fuel cost for the same distance on good macadam would be $11.13 and on poor macadam $15.07.

From these figures it is evident that good roads pay for themselves, not only in comfort, but also in reduced operating expenses. The figures quoted are, of course, only indicative, as the tests on which they are based are not sufficiently comprehensive to warrant their being taken as 100 per cent accurate. But they do demonstrate in a striking way why good roads are essential.

Two Owners Keep Records.

An excellent idea of the difference in cost to the car owner who drives over pavement and to the one who drives only on earth and gravel roads is obtained in statistics kept by two Springfield (Ill.) men who decided to go into the business of "Rent a car and drive it yourself."

Naturally, it cost the average driver the same amount as on these machines ,and the only reason their figures are given is because the average car owner does not keep an account of what it costs to operate his car.

One of the Springfield men relates experience as follows: "We had no previous experience in renting cars without drivers. As it was important to be able to ascertain the financial status of the enterprise at any time, we devised a complete cost record system for each car in service. The first investment was 15 cars—two Dodge touring cars and 13 Fords, including touring, coupe and sedan models. We designated six of these cars for use on paved highways; and the other nine were to be used for trips over dirt roads. Of course, a car hired for paved road trips ; occasionally driven over unpaved highways, and cars used principally for earth road service are driven over paved city streets and paved roads as a part of the trip. All o. the cars have now been driven 12,000 miles or more in the year. They were all new when put in service. Our cost data show a substantial saving in the mile cost of operation over paved roads as against dirt roads. Costs include gasoline, oil, tires, repairs, depreciation, interest in the investment, cleaning and housing."

There is a practically uniform saving of 2.4 cents a mile on the total cost of operating over pavement as against nonrigid types. In terms of percentage, this saving runs from about 21 to 25 per cent, depending on type of car. For 12,000 miles, th saving totals $228, which is important to any car owner, and especially to the owner of a small car."

Traffic A Factor in Paving.

Interesting statistics on the necessity of paving dirt roads as traffic over them increases result from tests made by the Iowa State Highway Commission and the Good Roads Department of the Iowa State College. These two bodies found that when traffic on a dirt road reaches 320 tons daily average, it becomes economical to pave. It was also found that when traffic on a graveled road becomes 470 tons per day it likewise becomes economical to pave that road.

The Iowa experimentors on an ordinary dirt road obtained about 14-ton miles of traffic on a gallon of gasoline. On a gravel road abou twenty-ton miles per gallon, and on a paved road about 31-ton miles of traffic per gallon of gasoline.

"The ordinary Ford touring car weighs about 1600 pounds. The ordinary motor vehicle carries an average of three people, so the ordinary Ford touring car, with an ordinary haul of three people, weighs about one ton. When you drive that vehicle one mile, you are developing about one ton mile of traffic. With the heavier type of vehicle, of course, you get a larger ton mile for the miles traveled. For instance, if your vehicle is heavy enough so that with its ordinary load it weighs two tons, then by driving that vehicle one mile you develop two ton miles of traffic."

Proposed Missouri Road Bonds Amendment Analyzed by John Malang

The proposed constitutional amendment, whereby Missouri would issue another $120,000,000 in good roads bonds, which barely failed of passage in the Legislature, is thus analyzed and explained by John Malang, director of the Good Roads Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

"The amendment provides that we issue $120,000,000 in bonds, setting aside $60,000,000 to complete the present road system as laid out, refunding moneys due counties and political subdivisions of State, and dividing or setting aside $60,000,000 of the bond issue among the counties and political subdivisions of the State, Kansas City and St. Louis, as their interests appear measured by the motor vehicle registration from such county, subdivision or city. Providing, further, that no county receive less than $150,000 in roads.

How It Figures Out.

"This bond issue can be floated and paid off, together with interest, without increased taxation. After carefully figuring the estimated revenue from motor vehicle license tax and motor vehicle fuel tax, it is found that the present income, together with a modest increase, will provide funds to pay interest on the bonded indebtedness, including the new and old, to provide administration cost of the Highway Department, provide maintenance for the State Highway system, and leave a substantial sum as a surplus t. be used in maintenance and construction of the State Highway system and other State roads and bridges.

"Basing our bond issue on the above amount and retiring the bonds, including the old, in a period of 32 years, the surplus will show a substantial amount. We will have 40 to 60 millions of dollars in excess of the amount necessary to pay interest and sinking funds, administration cost and maintenance in the first eight years, and from four to five millions a year in the surplus fund until the bonds have been paid for construction and maintenance.

Safeguards Provided.

"We have an abundance of money if we care to capitalize it, not only to finish our present system of roads but add a considerable mileage as proposed and keep our Highway Department taxed to the limit for the next eight or 10 years.

"All this may be done without raising our license fee or gas tax. In fact, the amendment provides that the present rate of taxes on motor vehicles and fuel be the maximum amount that we may levy for such purposes.

"The amendment further provides that all the moneys derived from this source of taxation shall be paid into a State road fund and spent under the jurisdiction and supervision of the Highway Department in the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges, and for no other purpose.

"When we have completed our present system of State roads, we will have a connected system joining each county in the State as well as roads in adjacent states.

STATE SENTIMENT ON HIGHWAY BOND ISSUE IS SOUGHT

Conference Which Has Been Called for October May Have Big Bearing on Future.

COMMISSION STILL DIVIDED IN POLICY

Analysis of the Various Bond Propositions for Completing Good Roads System in Missouri.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 2.—A State-wide road conference that will have considerable bearing on Missouri's road building policy in the next few years has been called by the State Highway Commission for Oct. 12, in Jefferson City, to discuss several proposals for an additional bond issue to extend the State system and hasten its completion.

Bond propositions ranging from $60,000,000 to $120,000,000, have been under discussion for months. The additional bond issue plan has gained considerable support over the State, especially since the House of the last Legislature allowed a $120,000,000 road bond measure to die on its calendar at adjournment.

Last of $60,000,000 Bonds Sold.

The last $5,000,000 in bonds from the $60,000,000 road bond issue voted in 1920 was sold by the State on June 1, last. After this year, unless there is another bond issue, construction of the State system will be financed on the pay-as-you-go plan, sometimes termed the "pay-as-you-wait" method. The annual construction program will be reduced more than 50 per cent by the pay-as-you-go plan.

The Highway Commission is divided on additional bonds and the alternative of pay-as-you-go, and has taken no definite position on future financing of the road program. In calling the conference, the commission acted at the suggestion of bond advocates, but it is not committed to any plan. The conference will be held to determine the sentiment, it was announced, but drafting of a definite bond proposition is expected to result from the meeting.

Chairman C. D. Matthews of Sikeston and E. J. McGrew of Lexington, Republican members of the commission, favor the pay-as-you-go method. Vice Chairman Hugh Stephens of Jefferson City and J. R. Davis of Nevada, Democratic members, are for an additional bond issue.

Being thus divided, the commission has refrained from announcing an official policy. It stated in its last annual report that if a speedier construction program was demanded, the commission would work out what, in its judgment, was the best method of attaining it.

Say Bond Issue Is Feasible.

Representatives of automobile and good roads organizations and all others interested will be invited to the October conference, to obtain a full expression of sentiment on the course to be followed.

Construction of the State highway system of 7640 miles is being financed by the automobile owners of the State chiefly through the gasoline tax and automobile license fees. Federal aid has averaged about $2,400,000 a year. No property taxes have been levied for State road construction or retirement of State road bonds.

Analysis of Missouri road revenue, past and anticipated, by bond issue proponents shows that an additional bond issue of $100,000,000 to $120,000,000 is feasible, without an increase in the present automobile license fees or the two-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, if maturities of the new bonds are fixed on the same serial plan used for the present bonds. The last of the State road bonds now outstanding will mature in 1947.

Any bond issue plan adopted probably will not be submitted to the voters of the State before the election in November, 1928, due to the expense of a special election. Circulation of initiative petitions have been proposed to put a bond proposition on the ballot.

State at Turning Point.

The State has reached a turning point in road construction. One course is to continue the large scale construction which has been proceeding at the rate of about $25,000,000 a year during the last two years. This method reduces costs and gives earlier benefits from completed roads. The other course is the pay-as-you-go plan, which will cut the annual construction program more than 50 per cent.

TWO WAY DETOUR ON NO. 66 FOR HOLIDAY

Westbound Traffic to Use the One via Labadie, Eastbound the One via Pacific.

Completion of the pavement on Federal route No. 66 as far as the detour to Pacific, Mo., permits a change in the detour situation. The State highway engineers announced yesterday that for this week-end two detours would be in use.

One detour, they stated, would be for westbound traffic and would utilize the present narrow, winding Labadie detour to Gray's Summit. The other, they said, would utilize the Pacific detour and would be for eastbound traffic. The Pacific detour, which is eight miles long, is well graveled though rough.

Beginning next Tuesday morning the Labadie detour is to be abandoned and the Pacific detour used instead until the pavement at Gray's Summit is completed. It is hoped that within 10 days to two weeks detours can be eliminated.

There is still some construction in progress on route No. 32, in St. Francois County, but the concrete is open to traffic.

Route No. 21 was reported in fair condition in Washington County, south of Potosi.

What Good Roads Mean in Gasoline Economy

per gallon, the gasoline costs on a dirt road about 1.43 cents per ton mile. On gravel road it costs about .95 of a cent per ton mile, and on a paved road about .64 of a cent per ton mile. The saving on fuel alone between earth and paved road is nearly ¾ of a cent a mile, and .31 of a cent per mile between gravel and pavement. Estimating that the average car owner drives 6000 miles a year, he will save on fuel alone, more than $18 per year by using paved roads. Enough, Indiana officials say, at the present license rate on a Ford, to purchase license for nearly four years.

Whether the vehicle be a pleasure car or farm truck, bus or commercial machine, the saving in operation for a year over a paved road compared to a gravel road reaches a surprising figure even if only cost of fuel and tires are considered.

Saving Regardless of Car.

Automotive engineers of the nation, following a five years' test, are convinced that with gasoline at 20 cents a gallon, it costs nearly three-quarters of a cent more per ton mile to operate on an earth road than it does on pavement. On the same basis, it costs .31 of a cent per ton mile more to operate on gravel or stone than on concrete brick, bituminous or other hard surface types.

There is double mileage to be obtained in tires where the vehicle is operated on pavement, not to speak of saving of wear on machine, lessening of costly garage bills, etc.

Freedom from dust, plus comfort of traveling a paved road; also saving the occupants from having clothes cleaned after each trip in an open car on a dusty highway, are only a few of the advantages of paved roads.

Estimating that the average car owner drives at least 6000 miles each year, then pavement permits him to save better than $18 a year in fuel cost alone. A small part of this saving, if spent on either a higher license or an additional penny tax on gasoline, proceeds to go to the Highway Department, will go a long ways to pave Indiana's trunk line system and provide for a permanent saving to auto users.

Paving Sound Investment.

Virtually every state has found paved roads to be one of the soundest investments procurable. Paved roads reduce operating costs of all motor vehicles. They have proved themselves here and in other states to be certain producers of increased wealth, advanced social life, better living conditions, first aids to the farmers and sure means of leveling business all over the State. The tangible returns from paved roads have been figured in many ways and by numerous authorities. In no one instance have they yet shown a balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

Enlarged Trading Radius.

For the farmers paved roads have brought enlarged trading radius. Such roads have served to stabilize prices in as much as they permit farmers to sell produce when the prices are most advantageous regardless of weather, length of haul or scarcity of time on hand. Paved roads have broadened the social life of those who live outside our cities and have enabled the farmers to shop, visit or do business over a larger area and with lessened expenditure of time and money. That hauling over paved roads is cheaper than hauling over dirt roads or gravel roads has been proved in numerous instances.

Probably every piece of land in Missouri, where there is not some extraordinary circumstance involved, bordering along a paved road is today worth more money an acre than when the road was dirt or gravel. Buyers know that paved roads are advantageous and realize that land along paved roads is worth more money. Instances are frequently cited where the coming of pavement has boosted land values 30, 40, 50 or more per cent above its former value. Such instances are not confined to any one state or part of the country, but are general.

Increased delivery area and shortened delivery and trading time have been extended to all lines of business in the State. Every class of store has benefited by paved roads and will benefit further by more paved roads, for pavement means business, and more profitable business.

STATE SENTIMENT ON HIGHWAY BOND ISSUE IS SOUGHT

Under the pay-as-you-go plan, the money available for construction and maintenance would be the balance left in the road fund after deduction of the annual requirements for bond retirement and interest plus Federal aid. The amount available for construction will be $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year during the next few years, under the pay-as-you-go plan.

State System Over Half Finished.

The State sytem now is approximately 50 per cent hard-surfaced and is more than half completed, considering bridges, grading preliminary to hard-surfacing, and other work. It is estimated the system could be completed in four or five years with an additional bond issue, but 10 to 12 years would be required for completion by the pay-as-you-go plan.

Theodore Gary of Kansas City, former chairman of the commission and until recently an advocate of the pay-as-you-go plan for completing the system, now is suggesting an additional bond issue.

He recently suggested an issue of approximately $60,000,000, to include $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 to reimburse the counties for roads built with local funds and taken over as part of the State system; $20,000,000 for State aid to counties in construction of county roads, and $30,000,000 for completion of the State system and addition of not to exceed 1000 miles of roads.

The $120,000,000 bond issue proposal introduced in the 1927 session of the Legislature originated with John M. Malang of Joplin, director of the Good Roads Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri. This would provide $60,000,000 for completion of the present State system and $60,000,000 for a supplemental system of approximately 5000 miles of county roads, connecting with the State system. The proposal was passed by the Senate but died in the House.

Stephens for Bond Issue.

Voting of $120,000,000 in bonds has been urged by Hugh Stephens and by Roy F. Britton, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri, in recent road meetings over the State.

Stephens, one of the most active members of the Highway Commission since his appointment in September, 1925, has advocated a bond issue to hasten completion of the system so that the State could obtain immediate benefits of the finished system.

He has answered the arguments of pay-as-you-go proponents, who assert that the interest cost of another bond issue would be heavy, with figures showing that Missouri motorists would save approximately $30,000,000 a year in operating costs with a completed system, or several times the annual interest cost of a bond issue.

"Much support that existed a few months ago for the pay-as-you-go plan is changing to advocacy of bonds," Stephens said, "since it has been found that the State system cannot be finished with usual and ordinary changes in type on that plan until about 1940.

"Whether or not we issue bonds, we pay the interest. We pay it in the mud tax, for which we have nothing to show. We pay it in other taxes, intangible but real."

TRANS CONTINENTAL TOURING INCREASES

Count Show 30 Per Cent More Cars Entering California Than in 1926.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, July 2.—Transcontinental motor tourist travel is 30 per cent heavier than at this time a year ago. The trend is toward a greater and a greater increase. More than likely the total for the year will be at least 35 per cent and perhaps as great as 40 per cent heavier.

This announcement was made here following a precise count of all cars entering California from the East in the first five months of the year. It was compared with the count made last year. The count was made by the Agricultural Department of the State of California pursuant to its task of meeting all incoming cars and giving them the State agricultural regulations.

Thus far 8633 more cars have been driven into California from the East in 1927 than in the same period in 1926. The count was on Eastern gateways to the State only. This gave the assurance that only westbound travel counted. The purely up and down the coast travel across the California-Oregon line was not considered.

The count by months of Westbound cars across the California line in 1926 and thus far in 1927 follows:

	1926	1927
January	5833	7202
February	4642	5512
March	5115	6445
April	4957	7883
May	6955	9288
June	19,456
July	32,305
August	26,443
September	19,388
October	13,538
November	11,220
December	8994

The West bound cars in 1926 were more than 500 per cent more numerous than in 1921. In 1927 they will number 700 per cent more.

The increased travel is due to improved roads and to generally increasing use of automobiles. The eight national transcontinental routes are now in such shape that a transcontinental journey is now only a prolongation of a week end tour. Camps and good hotels line the way.

KENTUCKY SPENDING $16,000,000 ON ROADS

That Amount Authorized in Contracts Actually Under Way in the State.

By the Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 2.—More than $16,000,000 worth of highway contracts is under way in Kentucky, according to E. N. Todd, State highway engineer.

These contracts call for work in all parts of the State and comprise part of the program of the commission for its bi-annual period from July, 1926, to July, 1928.

On May 1, the contracts aggregated $13,518,261.66. Since then more than $2,500,000 have been let in contracts.

The contracts cover 1171 miles of construction and 299 miles of reconstruction.

The commission also has authorized asking for bids on 86 miles of road construction this month.

The State highway report shows that 268 miles of roads under construction were let prior to July 1, 1926, and 782 miles since that time, and that 119 remains to be contracted.

PROPOSED ROAD BONDS AMENDMENT ANALYZED BY MALANG

thus fulfilling the need for a continuous State Highway System. The new roads proposed are local in character and should be looked upon as additional roads to the State Highway System to serve local purposes.

"Looking at it from that point of view it necessarily follows that counties or subdivisions having a larger number of cars necessarily need more miles of roads and of higher type. Hence, the proposed division of the bond fund.

"The amendment further provides that all roads built from this fund, including the surplus, shall be State roads and the State Highway Department will be called upon to maintain such roads indefinitely.

"This is an ambitious scheme, but perfectly practical, feasible and sound. The interest we will pay will be more than returned in the use of the roads. We will be loaning the State Highway Department as a machine to the counties to build additional roads as well as maintain the same. It is fair, just and equitable. We will have an abundance of funds and will point the way for at least 10 years without interference.

"It gives to the Highway Department large authority, but at the same time lays out a fixed plan to follow. It authorizes the department to use the surplus fund in completing the present highway system as laid out and to use the fund in years to come on other roads and maintain them.

"It further authorizes the State Highway Department, and vests in it the authority, to build bridges within the State over any stream so located.

"In justification of the division of the funds provided in the amendment, it was necessary to build a State highway system out of State funds without regard to revenue coming from any special locality, in order to build a State highway system connecting each county in the State and roads in adjacent states.

'But now that we have provided funds to complete that system, provided funds to pay the interest and retire the bonds, provided funds for the administration of the Highway Department, provided funds for the maintenance of such system, we feel that it is just and fair that the division provided in the amendment shall prevail for reasons stated above.

"In view of the fact that St. Louis and Kansas City will pay an enormous amount into the fund, it is but fair and just that they receive a share of the bond issue provided for tertiary roads, to build and maintain streets used in connection with our State highway system and such other connections as may be deemed necessary."

Facts of Interest.

Malang called attention to these facts:

The receipts last year from automobile licenses and gasoline tax were around $13,600,000. They should total around $15,000,000 this year and correspondingly more each succeeding year.

In 1926, up to June 1, a total of 499,111 cars and trucks were registered in this State. In the same period this year, a total of 567,015 have been registered.

In the first four months of 1926, a total of $1,609,476 in gasoline tax was collected in Missouri. In the first four months of this year, the total was $1,811,680, despite the unfavorable weather, a gain in four months of $202,203.

If Missouri should issue $20,000,000 in road bonds in 1929 and $20,000,000 in each succeeding year until 1934, the total of $120,000,000 could be retired by 1963 with the same gasoline tax and license fee as now, together with retiring all bonds already issued, paying all interest and administration and maintenance of highways costs and also providing a surplus over and above all this to be spent on roads.

WINTON GETS CHRYSLER "80"

Twenty-nine years ago Alexander Winton, who became famous later as a manufacturer of cars, shipped the first automobile sold in America from his factory in Cleveland, O. Except for motor and chassis, it lacked virtually everything the modern motor car possesses. Yet it was No. 1 of 35,000,000 or more motor vehicles that have been made since and sold.

A few days ago, Alexander Winton, still hale, hearty, recently remarried, and still actively interested in the automotive industry, bought himself an automobile. It was one of the new Imperial "80" four-passenger coupes.

IOWA COUNTIES IN RACE TO VOTE ROAD BONDS

Total of $75,000,000 Likely to Be Authorized Before Summer Has Ended.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., July 2.—At last, Iowa is likely to pull itself out of the mud. A fever of bond issuing for road building has struck the State and indications are that around $75,000,000 in road bonds will be voted by the various counties between now and Sept. 1.

Ten counties already this year have voted road bonds aggregating $9,130,000. Bond elections scheduled before July 15 will pass over an aggregate of $18,703,000 in proposed road bonds and the sentiment is such that all of these appear practically sure of approval.

Will Help Lincoln Highway.

It is estimated that 60 or more Iowa counties will vote highway bonds during the summer. If each of these votes the average amount being issued by other Iowa counties, the total will run to about $75,000,000.

This amount will be supplemented as far as possible by the State Highway Commission out of surplus funds now on hand and the total will run more than $100,000,000 for the year.

All this means that the Lincoln Highway will soon be paved clear across the State of Iowa. For years Iowa mud has stood as a barrier between East and the West, on this route. A light rain holds traffic up for a day. A heavy rain forces tourists to lay up for two or three days. At times the Lincoln Highway in Western Iowa is impassable for a week or more at a time.

But it also means that practically all other primary roads in the State will be paved.

First Come, First Served.

The last Iowa Legislature passed laws which set the paving ball rolling all over the State, and put some 60 counties in a race to see which could get in under the new law and have their roads paved.

The new law is simple. Counties can vote paving bonds and the State will pay the bonds and interest out of the gasoline tax and automobile license funds. In this way, the counties will get their primary roads paved at the expense of the State and not at the expense of the people living in the counties.

But the State fund cannot take care of every county in the State, so the "first come, first served" plan has been adopted in handling the situation, in time, of course, the State fund can handle all the counties, but at present only about 75 counties can be taken care of. So there is a race to see which counties can get into this list of 75.

The new law is to be come effective July 4. The road fund available under the new laws will aggregate more than $15,000,000 annually, which will be used by the State Highway Commission.

In the last six years the Iowa primary road fund has amounted to $58,141,000, but laws governing its disbursement were such that not a single through line from the Mississippi to the Missouri River has been completed.

Because of the increase in the State gasoline tax, the next six years will see a heavily augmented amount for the State Highway Commission to expend and the new laws give this commission added power in the selecting roads to be paved.

But the paving of primary roads is not the only good Iowa will derive from the new era. The spending of $75,000,000 is going to be a tremendous thing for the State as a whole.

The first stretch of Lincoln highway paved under the new law probably will be from Council Bluffs eastward to Denison, Ia., a distance of 80 miles. This is a valley road and runs largely through a gumbo country. In the past it has been known as the very worst stretch of mud on the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco.

Eastward from Denison the road is graveled, but there are long stretches of mud, alternating with gravel and hard paving, until the permanent hard paving is reached about 60 miles west of the Mississippi River.

From this point through to the Atlantic there is a hard road, and it is to connect with this road that the Iowa paving will be built.

MENDING TIRE AS WELL AS TUBE MEANS REAL ECONOMY

Motorists realize today, more than ever before since the perfection of the low-pressure tire, that a puncture in the inner tube surely means a hole in the casing. These small breaks, if unattended, soon develop into real breaks, which mean a new casing or costly repair job.

The new Locktite is designed for this combination use—for both tube and casing repairs. It is the only material that renders this double service. So now when a motorist patches a tube, he also can easily and quickly mend the casing breaks, too. This "patch-in-time" will add thousands of miles to casings that otherwise might be quickly and permanently ruined.

Highest Bridge Opened.

The biggest highway bridge in the world, spanning Carquinez Straits on the northern arm of San Francisco Bay, has been opened to traffic. The roadway is 135 feet above the water line. Four years were taken in building the bridge, which cost $8,000,000.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY ROAD WORK OUTLOOK REVIEWED

Money for Needed Road Building and Reconstruction Lacking—Talk of Another Bond Election Revived

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF.

St. Louis County, a thriving residental and industrial community, where farms are giving way to subdivisions, is in great need of good roads. It has some acceptable thoroughfares, to be sure, but they are inadequate to serve this metropolitan and suburban area of 492 skuare miles, with its 150,000 people, its constant invitation to St. Louisans to cross the line and the demands of generally increasing use of motor cars.

The county, continually hard pressed for money to run its government, finds it burdensome to maintain existing roads, and, indeed, virtually ignores some roads. Construction of new highways out of general revenue is impossible, yet it has become apparent that additional traffic arteries must be provided to care for the future and that many routes must be converted to modern paving.

Bond Election Again Discussed.

No practical method has been suggested to increase the funds for maintenance and repairs, and the only apparent way to provide money for new work is by bond issue. Public sentiment in the county is divided as to need and advisability of issuing bonds. Talk of calling a bond election has been going on since the county defeated the city merger proposal last autumn, and may soon be intensified. It has not reached the stage of a definite scheme of construction or size of issue.

In April, 1925, county voters defeated a $5,000,000 road bond issue. An important reason for this was that the group fostering it did not offer a definite schedule of what work was contemplated—by routes, pavements and mileages—but presented a map indicating hard-surfacing of roads in all districts. Critics said the money would be insufficient to provide high-type surfacing for all these highways. Fear of increased taxes and political considerations also entered into the defeat.

Condition of County Roads.

Four concrete State highways radiate through the country from the city of St. Louis. They are good, but growing cross-country and local traffic has made it evident that the State some day will have to widen them or provide parallel routes, or both. They are Lemay Ferry road (No. 61, to the south), Gravois road (No. 30, southwest), Manchester road (Nos. 50 and 66, central) and St. Charles road (Nos. 40 and 61, northwest).

The main roads of the county spread out from the city in the same fan-shape. These thoroughfares, from south to north, and their condition, are:

Telegraph—good, but extension to the south only fair.

Tesson Ferry—fair.

Watson—unmade and frequently impassable; its improvement would serve a corwded suburban area and open a new residential and industrial section.

Big Bend—good in University City and Clayton; very rough in Richmond Heights; good in Maplewood and Webster Groves; fair in Oakland and a strip south of Kirkwood; part fair and part rough in western Kirkwood, and very rough in its continuation from Osage Hills to Valley Park.

Clayton—fair to North and South road, good from there to Mason road and only fair beyond.

Conway—fair.

Olive Street—good except that rough western part is being worked.

Page avenue and its connections, Lackland and Fee Fee—rough.

Natural Bridge—good.

Florissant—good.

Hall's Ferry—good, except that northern end is only fair.

Bellefontaine—good.

Columbia Bottom—fair.

Roads noted as "fair" vary in quality, since it is difficult to express conditions in exact degrees.

Good Cross Highways Lacking.

So much for the chief arteries. They are the better side of the picture and, on the whole, receive the most attention. The county is notoriously lacking in adequate transverse highways, to link these others and fill the gaps. North and South road, which runs only from St. Charles road to Webster Groves, but could be linked with others to cross the whole county, parallelling the city limits, is rough. Denny road, running from St. Charles road to Gravois road, is very rough, except in parts of Kirkwood.

Price road, which has been an excellent cross link, though short, has become rough. Bridgeton Station road, important because it serves Lambert-St. Louis Field, north to Florissant, is very rough, as those who met Col. Lindbergh in the rain June 17 can attest.

Many of the roads which serve the great Meramec River playground in the southwestern part of the county, are poor. Notable in this respect are Barrett's Station, Dougherty Ferry and Meramec Station roads, leading to Valley Park. Elsewhere some of the shorter roads and neighborhood arteries are in good condition, some poor. There are undeveloped districts which might prosper if made accessible. In the Missouri River Valley there are not many good thoroughfares and attention is required for the scenic routes in the favorite Wild Horse Creek section.

Prospects for Belt Highway.

In the more rural western part of the county there are comparatively few acceptable roads, and many stretches are rough. Because of construction work on No. 30 in Peiferson County, the State is maintaining a detour which has helped some St. Louis County roads—via Sniber Mill road from Fenton to a point near Valley Park, Antire road to Eureka and Bald Hill road south across the Meramec. From Eureka to Pacific the Antire road is poor.

The State owes the county about $900,000 for road construction, of which about $500,000 is now available. It has been decided to spend this refund on a belt highway from Pattonville on St. Charles road to Mehlville on Lemay Ferry road, via Denny road, with a 100-foot right-of-way and some new locations at either end. A county engineer said about 60 per cent of the necessary right-of-way had been acquired, following a movement by the County Chamber of Commerce to facilitate this, and it is hoped the first contract for a section of several miles of concrete can be awarded by September. This will be of material relief to traffic.

Bad weather can be blamed for poor condition of many roads to a great extent. But there is an underlying factor that should not be forgotten; that is that original construction was not strong enough to withstand the heavy motor travel of today, in many cases, to meet other modern specifications, such as adequate crowning and ditching. Mere patching cannot overcome that. The thick ice that covered the ground for day last midwinter started the new trouble. When it melted, there was havoc in the roads. Later, when the frost came out of the ground, the condition was intensified. In addition there were the extremely heavy rains of April and May, followed by hard rains in June. Sometimes repairs were washed away by renewed rain.

There was sufficient money this year for the county to keep its normal repair work up, a county engineer declared. Thirteen rollers and six patching gangs of about eight men each have been at work, concentrating on main highways. It is not expected that "good summer condition" will be achieved on the whole system till Aug. 1.

MANY DETAILS ARE INVOLVED IN PAVING

State Highways Must Meet All Conditions of Traffic 365 Days a Year.

Highways must be laid out and built so as to be passable 365 days a year, and safe for fast-moving, light cars, as well as slow-moving heavy trucks. They must be wide enough to let vehicles pass with safety. They must be so routed as to shorten the distance as much as is economically possible, and to have as few as possible congested places to slow down traffic. The average citizen does not appreciate the effort extended in obtaining right-of-way for the easement of curves and grade reductions to make the road safer.

As soon as the highway commission orders or authorizes a strip of highway constructed or hard surfaced, a survey party is sent to survey and lay out in more detail the alignment. They reference this line to property lines, streams, houses, etc., which will affect and be affected by the highway. They also take elevations on the ground, high water marks, etc., so as to determine the proper grades. The line and grade must be chosen from the standpoint both of economy and safety. Conflict often arises between these two elements, and it requires trained judgment to weigh the problem and determine when and how much to sacrifice cost for safety or safety for cost.

Preliminary Steps.

After the survey is made and notes completed, the survey notes are sent to the office where the notes are plotted to scale on transparent paper, the final grades are determined and a complete plan is made showing the conditions as they exist at present and the work proposed to make the improvement.

After the plans are approved the right of way must be obtained. When the right of way is assured, the project is ready to advertise for bids and award the contract for the improvement.

The surveys, plans, designs and construction of large bridges are handled by the bridge department of the construction division which has men specially trained in bridge work.

After the contract for the improvement of a part of road has been executed, the actual construction work starts as soon as the men and equipment can be assembled and weather permits. When work starts, a project engineer is assigned to set the line and grade stakes, lay out the work and supervise the construction to see that the work is performed as planned and specified in the contract. Sufficient help is provided for him to inspect all parts of the work while they are being performed.

Work Closely Watched.

The one operation in the construction of our modern concrete highways which requires most constant inspection and supervision, is the mixing, placing and finishing of concrete, both in culverts and in the roadway slab. It not only requires a man of irreproachable honesty and integrity, but one who is experienced and understands the relative influence of various factors on the strength and durability of cement concrete.

In the early development of the use of concrete pavement from 1910 to 1917, little attention was given to the riding qualities of the pavement. The surface was leveled off by hand with a strikeboard or lute and then smoothed up a little with a hand float. If the man using the float was experienced and had a good eye to detect uneven places in the surface, the probabilities were that the surface would be fairly good. At that period, there were usually no rigid specifications nor inspection, and most any kind of a surface finish was passable.

By 1917, automobiles had become numerous, the speed at which they traveled on the roads had increased, and along with them came the demand for smoother surfaced pavements. Smooth surfaces on pavement not only increase the comfort of driving, but decrease the impact stresses from heavy loaded trucks and increase the life of the pavement. So smooth surfaces on pavements not only have a pleasing effect on those who use them, but also have an economical effect by increasing the life of the pavement.

About the year 1918 or 1919, the finishing machine came into common use, and the result was smoother pavement surfaces. Each year since the starting of construction of pavements by the State Highway Commission it has built pavements with a little smoother surface than the preceding year. was found that the eye alone was not good enough to detect the uneven places in the surface and a straight-edge was brought into use for checking the finished surface to a mathematical nicety.

This construction season pavements are compacted and then finished with a belt on a finishing machine. They are checked with a 10-foot straight elge. If any variations are found in the surface, they are removed and the surface floated with a wooden float operated transversly over the pavement. The operation of checking the surface and correcting any uneven places will be repeated as often as necessary to assure a surface as nearly perfect as it is practical to obtain. All this must be done before the concrete hardens.

After the concrete has hardened sufficiently to walk on it without injury to it, the surface must be again checked with a straight edgefi, and if any variations of one-fourth inch or more are found the contractors are penalized on their contract.

Since the pavement slab on an average road costs about 80 per cent as much as the total cost of the road improvement, it is evident that great waste or great economies can be effected in its design.

LA SALLE, WITH 3 1-2 TO 1 GEAR, RUNS 95 M. P. H. FOR 9 HOURS 59 MINUTES

In a test of endurance and speed, a La Salle roadster, with 3½ to 1 gear ratio, covered 951 miles in nine hours, 59 minutes and 39.4 seconds, or at the rate of 95.3 m. p. m.

The car differed from the standard model in that it had a slightly higher compression, the camshaft was altered slightly for high speed work, the muffler was removed and the gear ratio changed to 3½ to 1.

The car used was the one which placed in the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis, and before starting the test had to its credit some 10,000 miles of high speed test work.

The test was started at 6:30 in the morning before newspaper men and representatives of the automobile industry, and ended at 4:30 that afternoon.

The speed of the fastest lap was 98.8 m.p.h. while the last was run at 98.3.

The fracture of a small oil suction tube brought the test run to an end.

During the run nine stops were made for tire changes, oil, gasoline and water. It was not necessary to make any mechanical adjustments or repairs.

AUTO-LOCOMOTIVE TOURS STREETS OF ST. LOUIS

Kelly-Springfield Good Roads Special, Which Cost $15,000, Stirs Interest.

A Kelly-Springfield good roads special—a motor car that from front and rear looks like a miniature steam locomotive, even to smoke puffing from a smokestack and steam issuing from a typical steam chest—created much interest in St. Louis the past week. Built by the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. and driven by Clyde Terry, an old-time racer, it has been touring this country for nine months in the cause of good roads and good tires.

The auto-locomotive is built on a 147-inch chassis and weighs 5600 pounds. It is powered with a heavy-duty six-cylinder Continental engine, and runs on Kelly-Springfield heavy-duty 33x5 tires. The smoke issuing from the stack is made by exhausting the first cylinder into the stack and using a special kerosene oil device. It has a real locomotive bell and whistle, and what looks like brass lamps on the fenders are in reality horns. The radiator is set low, beneath the locomotive cow catcher. The rear of the car is fitted with a duplicate, in miniature, of the observation platform that is a feature of the rear cars of many limited trains. All the fittings are solid brass, and the door handles are gold washed.

The auto-locomotive cost about $15,000, according to George M. Harbison, office manager in St. Louis for the Kelly-Springfield company.

P. H. BROCKMAN ADDRESSES SERVICE MANAGERS' BUREAU

Committee Named to Confer With Insurance Interests of St. Louis.

The June meeting of the Service Managers' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, held at the Claridge Hotel Wednesday, was presided over by Chairman W. B. Denhard, service manager of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. He announced appointment of a committee to meet insurance interests of St. Louis. This committee consists of Robert Weber, Weber Motor Car Co., James Hershfelt, Vesper-Buick Auto Co.; William M. Venner, Franklin Motor Car Co.; W. J. Van de Grift, Southwest Nash Co.; W. B. Denhard, Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., and Robert E. Lee.

Col. P. H. Brockman, president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, was introduced by Robert E. Lee, managing director of the bureau, as a man who served two consecutive terms as president of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association and is now beginning his third term after an interim of eight years, and as a man who had studied service very earnestly.

Col. Brockman complimented the service managers on the fact that they had kept up for 24 months the record of attendance at meetings to about 85 per cent of the membership.

He gave statistics of the automobile business to show that it was now the greatest manufacturing industry in the world and that its proper conduct and continuance at its present peak required that service managers as well as proprietors, be constantly on their toes to retain the good will of customers.

"Service," he said, "consists of waiting on customers promptly and courteously and filling their needs at reasonable prices." The service manager, he said, is really in the position of a physician toward customers and, no more than a physician would, should the service manager permit the customer to tell him what is wrong with a car. The service manager ought to find out for himself by investigation.

"The service manager's job," he said, "with all loyalty to his employer, is to see that the owner's car is kept going on the cheapest possible basis. You and your department are in a position to make or break a distributor or dealer, because after the first sale of car, it is up to the service department to keep that new owner pleased with the firm."

Brockman said that the flat rate system of charging for service work goes far to eliminate misunderstanding with customers.

P. E. Clark, service and parts manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., spoke on the attitude of the manufacturer toward service for their cars and owners. He said that more and more are the manufacturers realizing that it is tremendously important to them to have their distributors and their dealers maintain well equipped service stations, handled by polite and intelligent service managers.

It was decided that no meetings of the Service Managers' Bureau be held in July and August.

CHRYSLER INTRODUCES HIGH COMPRESSION ENGINE HEAD

New "Red Head" Design Made Feasible by Growing Distribution of Anti-Knock Fuel.

Compression is to be carried to new peaks of development according to E. Y. Watson, writing in the Detroit News. The first evidence of it became public when the Chrysler Corporation announced that the engines in all its six-cylinder cars would be of a new high compression type, to be distinguished from former power plants by a special cylinder head, which Chrysler has elected to paint a vivid red and call the "Red Head."

Chrysler, which three years ago pioneered the first types of such engines, is first to present the advanced type.

High compression, according to an engineering authority, gives greater engine efficiency at high speeds and greater economy in fuel.

This means that power is gained by reducing the space in the combustion chamber from the head of the piston to the inside top of the cylinder, when the piston is in the uppermost position. The gas is thereby compressed tighter; therefore there is more explosive or expansion force on the piston when combustion takes place.

According to the Chrysler engineers, the newly developed head assembly takes full advantage of power elements inherent in high compression fuels of the "anti-knock" variety and makes available a degree of speed, quick acceleration and hill-climbing beyond the capabilities of the cars of the past.

"For years," reads the Chrysler statement, "engineers have felt that a greater amount of performance should be secured from a given amount of fuel and that this could be effected only through scientific design and ingenious changes in the existing type of engine.

"The first Chrysler was designed so that in utilizing fuel it was able to employ a higher compression ratio than was then in ordinary use. With the wide distribution of high compression fuels, it is now considered practical to introduce this latest engineering development which makes it possible to get still more power and energy out of the fuel used.

In the new "Red Head," it is stated, twice the power is obtained from the same volume of gas as in a low-compression engine, with approximately the same fuel consumption.

"The 'Red Head' assembly will be available for installation on engines of all Chrysler six-cylinder cars"

THREE ENTIRELY NEW SERIES OF NASH CARS

New Roadster Design, Lower Body Lines, Wider Color Array Feature Models Shown

Three entirely new series of Nash cars, including 21 models on four different chassis lengths, are being demonstrated in St. Louis by the Southwest Nash Co. distributor.

The new series are known as the Advanced Six, the Special Six and the Standard Six. Despite a wide array of improvements, these cars also feature lower prices, the reductions ranging as much as $195

These new Nash cars have a new radiator design, lower and more sweeping body lines, and a brilliant array of new color combinations.

Springs of New Secret Steel.

Nash mechanical refinements and improvements include new springs of a secret alloy steel which are said greatly to increase riding comfort.

The new body lines are lower and more sweeping, and the wheels are smaller, giving an additional appearance of lowness to the cars although interior roominess has not been sacrificed.

Matching the beauty of line is the new array of color combinations which Nash has adopted for these cars. Striking new harmonies are used.

to go after the holdup man who had

The radiator design of the Standard Six gives this series a beauty of appearance which not long ago was confined to cars costing several times as much.

The size of the motor in the Standard Six has been increased, giving this car performance which Nash officials assert new to this price field.

In addition to increasing the size of the motor, the size of the 7-bearing crankshaft has been increased for greater smoothness.

The new springs of secret alloy steel are used on the Standard Six as well as on the Special Six and the Advance Six. Shock absorbers at the front are now standard equipment.

The Standard Six motor is now insulated from the frame at all points of contact with rubber, mitigating road shocks.

Other important refinements are: carburetor heat control valve on the instrument board; a new type of head lamp; a new 4-blade fan; a new stop light switch; a heavier oil pump cover plate; new parking lights; new instrument panel indirectly lighted; new remote control door locks; new light control on the steering wheel and new body hardware of special Nash design.

Advance and Special Sixes.

As far as the Advance Six series is concerned, the most important change is of course adoption of new lower body lines, new body colors and a deeper radiator.

The clutch, flywheel and crankshaft are now balanced as a unit on a highly sensitive machine for increased smoothness in operation. Body quietness is increased by use of a fender welt consisting of a contoured piece of heavy fabric-covered felt between the body and the fenders of the car. Springs are of new secret process alloy steel.

Other refinements are: Complete encasing of battery and tool boxes, preventing entry of dust or water; new friction pads on front brake support plates, preventing rattles; new carburetor heat control valve; new heat indicator on the instrument panel; new reinforcement of the frame for rigidity; new heavier and longer parking brake lever; new nickel steering column; new improved horn and new type of foot accelerator.

New hardware for the interior is also adopted throughout the advanced six series to match the new exterior colors and new upholstery.

Improvements in the special six series are similar to those in the advanced six. The body lines are lower and more sweeping and the wheels are smaller. New alloy steel springs. Refinements include balancing of the clutch, flywheel and crankshaft: the fender welt: the nickel steering column; the new accelerator.

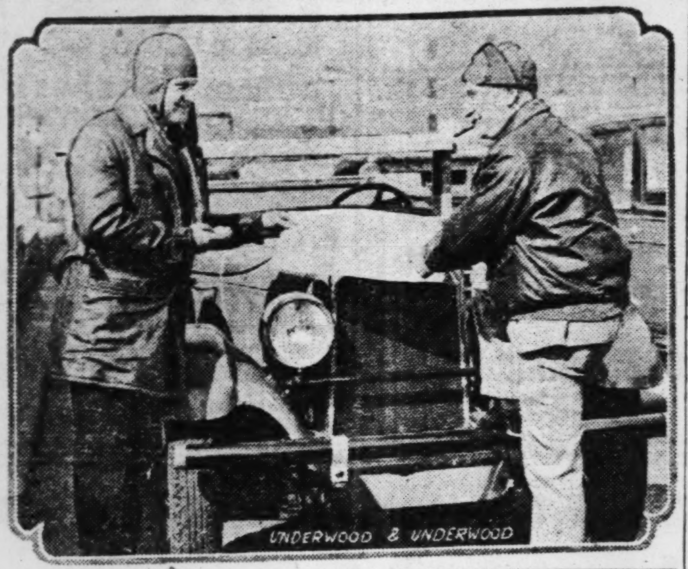
Killed in Record-Breaking Attempt



UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

Samuel Klein Jr. (Left) who was killed near Council Grove, Kan., in an attempt to set a record for the Chicago-Los Angeles run, and his father, (Right) who was fatally injured. They crashed into the side rail of a concrete culvert when running at high speed.

As a result of Klein running his car into the culvert, probably as a result of eye-strain and over-fatigue, cross-continental record-breaking runs are likely to fall into disfavor. The Attorney-General of Kansas has instructed all Sheriffs in that State to arrest racers who exceed 40 miles per hour. Heretofore Sheriffs, in a number of instances, have escorted racers through their counties, clearing the roads for them. This closes the Victory and Santa Fe highways to the racers. Similar action by the authorities of any states traversed by the Lincoln highway would virtually end trans-continental motor car speed runs.

Klein, who had made a number of high speed runs and was among the noted amateur drivers of this country, left the Dearborn street station, in Chicago, at 3 a. m. Tuesday, planning to drive his Auburn 8-88 roadster to Los Angeles via St. Louis in 56 hours, or 7 hours faster than the best train schedule

There was no question about the speed and stamina of their car, for Auburn eights have demonstrated repeatedly, in officially timed races, ability to do 86 stop watch miles per hour. It was merely a question of human stamina and driving ability.

Klein made the run from the station in Chicago to the St. Louis end of the McKinley bridge in an even six hours, being checked in at 9 a. m. by I. C. Hunter, general manager of the Auburn St. Louis Co. Hunter said Klein told him that he was making the run purely as a sporting proposition, was using his own car, and was paying all his own expenses. He averaged 51 miles per hour from Chicago to this city, and an official record for the run was claimed for him.

The distance from Chicago to Los Angeles via St. Louis and Trinidad, Col., is about 2440 miles, so Klein planned to average 43 miles per hour, which of course meant 70 to 80 miles per hour much of the way. Naturally, running at such speed, the chances of accident were many times multiplied.

Klein's schedule called for arrival in Los Angeles at 11 a. m. central standard time. He was maintaining his calculated speed when the crash into the culvert rail occurred.

As Council Grove, Kan., is about 150 miles beyond Kansas City, Klein had driven approximately 725 miles Tuesday when he hit the culvert. He had expected to reach Trinidad, which is 660 miles beyond Council Grove, the following morning.

Witnesses of the fatal crash said that Klein was driving at a high rate of speed.

STUTZ FEAT COMPARES WITH SPEED OF RACERS

The Stutz roadster driven by Tom Rooney to victory in a recent race at Atlantic City at an average speed of 86.247 miles per hour compares impressively with the speed of the Miller racing machine that finished in eighth position in the Decoration day race with an average speed of 85.081 miles per hour.

In the same race which Rooney won, a five-passenger stock Stutz, sedan top and all, finished seventh, with a speed of 79.45 miles per hour.

This same stock Stutz sedan made an even more significant comparison possible when it made its record over the Indianapolis speedway of 68.44 miles per hour in a 24-hour test, with a total distance of 1642.58 miles. Top, mud guards, running boards, wind shield—an officially inspected, strictly stock closed job—accomplished for 24 hours over the rough Indianapolis speedway brick course something within hailing distance of the best accomplishment of some racing machines tuned to go only 500 miles, with supercharger and other modern racing equipment.

WILLYS-OVERLAND SALES SHOW MARKED INCREASE

Gain of 36 Per Cent in First Five Months Over Same Period in 1926.

Marked increase of sales of Willys-Knight and Whippet cars in the St. Louis territory is reported by W. A. Elliot, branch manager for Willys-Overland, Inc. "In the 142 counties in our branch's territory," he said, "sales of Willys-Knights and Whippets are far in advance of a year ago. Our deliveries in the entire territory in the first five months of this year show an increase of 36.9 per cent over the same period in 1926.

"There were fewer cars of all makes sold in the five months just past, according to registrations covering our entire territory, and the general decline of 16.3 per cent for the industry as a whole makes the advance of Willys-Overland even more remarkable.

"Willys-Overland's greatest advance was made in the metropolitan district. In St. Louis and St. Louis County, the industry showed a loss in unit volume of 8.8 per cent for the five month period, but our gain was exactly 40 per cent This means that Willys-Overland's gain was 48.8 per cent in advance of the industry.

SAVING "GAS," TIRES BRAKES

"The assertion that Gabriel Snubbers actually save gas, tires and brakes is often dismissed as improbable by those who do not stop to analyze," says H. C. Merry, Gabriel distributor. "On the contrary, it is quite easy to explain just how this saving is accomplished. Almost all drivers of cars not equipped with a spring control device unconsciously slow down when a rough stretch of road is sighted ahead. Each time this occurs, the engine is momentarily throttled down, and additional gas is used to pick up speed. Brake linings and drums suffer a certain amount of wear, and some extra friction is created between tires and road surface.

"It is true that a single instance of this kind is hardly worth mentioning, but it is repeated thousands of times in the useful life of a car. It is this repetition that gradually builds up a needless amount of wear and tear and fuel consumption.

"In contrast, the driver of a car equipped with Gabriel Snubbers rides into most rough spots without perceptibly checking his speed, because of his confidence that the car will pass over it without undue discomfort."

TRANS-OCEANIC RADIO PROGRAMS PLANNED

Exchange of Features Between London and New York Stations in Prospect.

DENVER, Colo., July 2.—A plan calling for inauguration of across-the-ocean broadcasting by which London and New York would regularly exchange feature programs so that Americans would hear European stars broadcast from London and European audiences would receive the offerings of the leading American broadcasting stations, will be proposed by the National Broadcasting Co. this fall at a conference in New York wth Sir John Reith, Director-General of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Announced by Aylesworth.

This announcement was made by M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., in the course of an address delivered here at the International Advertising Association meeting.

The head of the British broadcasting system, it was stated, would attend the ceremonies incident to opening of the new National Broadcasting Co. building in New York, and occasion would be taken then to discuss co-ordination of facilities and co-operative exchange of broadcastng programs that would give both American and European radio listeners the pick of two continents.

"The real beginning of the era of international broadcasting when radio will bring London to New York, Chicago and San Francisco, and events of international importance carried by the National Broadcasting Co. and associated radio stations will be transmitted to millions of European homes, awaits technical co-ordination and the final perfection of co-operative plans between the British Broadcasting Corp. and the National Broadcasting Co.," Aylesworth said.

"When these are effected, not only the greater part of the United States, but also the greater part of Europe within range of the British stations, will be able to join by radio in the celebration of a heroic feat which thrills the world, like the recent reception to Colonel Lindbergh in New York and Washington."

"Goldman Band Concerts," Edwin Frank Goldman, conducting, from the New York University Campus.

Beginning with the two-hour varied program by Maj. Bowes' Capitol Theater Family and the Atwater Kent Hour this evening, KSD will broadcast this week another of the series of features that are making radio reception as interesting this summer as in the winter.

Paul Althouse, celebrated American tenor, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who was announced to be the artist of the Atwater Kent Radio Hour two weeks ago, will be heard in this through KSD radio feature this evening.

His program will start with DeKoven's musical setting of Rudyard Kipling's poem, "Recessional." Probably this selection is more familiarly known by its last line, "Lest We Forget," than by its title.

The third selection by Althouse is to be the love song of the Maori tribe of New Zealand about whom little is known in this country. A glimpse, however, of their charm is afforded in "Unfold Thy Snowy Pinions," with English words, set to music by William E. Jones. Althouse has included in his program Charles Bennet's arrangement of "Hawaiian Love Song." The program follows:

"Recessional"........R. DeKoven
"What a Wonderful World It Would Be"......Hermann Lohr
"Unfold Thy Snowy Pinions"—Wm. E. Jones
"The Sorrows of Death" (from the Sacred Cantata "Hymn of Praise")......Felix Mendelssohn
"In the Luxembourg Gardens"—Kathleen Lockhart Manning
"Hawaiian Love Song" Chas. Bennet
"The Great Awakening"—Walter Kramer

Monday on KSD

Erno Rapee, orchestra conductor, will receive marked attention in Roxy and His Gang's program to be broadcast through KSD tomorrow night, Independence day, July 4. He will conduct the 110-piece symphonic orchestra of the Roxy Theater. Roxy will also give his radio audience musical numbers by other soloists of the Gang and will support these artists with his 100-voice chorus, his Russian Choir, the large theater organ, the newly organized group of syncopators, the Jazzmanians and the cathedral chimes.

Motion pictures for which Rapee is credited with having made the musical presentations are: "Over the Hill," "If Winter Comes," "A Connecticut Yankee," "The Queen of Sheba," "Robin Hood," "Monte Cristo," "Passion" and 'Nero."

Tuesday on KSD

Tuesday evening, "Four Bards," a male quartet, and the Angelus Trio will unite in a half hour program, as one of the series of "Songs of the City."

The selections to be sung will sketch the story of a bus ride in the cool of a summer evening up Fifth avenue, New York.

The program follows:

"We Meet Again Tonight, Boys," quartet; "The Girl I Left Behind Me," trio; "In Dublin's Fair City," quartet; "Bonnie Doon," trio; "Just Around the Corner," quartet; "Frasquita," trio; "Can't You Hear Me Calling, Caroline?" quartet; "We Won't Get Home Until Morning," trio; "Till We Meet Again," quartet.

The Eveready Hour to be broadcast through KSD Tuesday evening will feature a new arrangement by Nathaniel Shilkret, conductor of the Eveready Orchestra, of the "William Tell" overture by Rossini. The rescoring by Shilkret allows introduction of saxophone and muted brasses. No sacrifice of essential form or rhythm is made by the new arrangement, it is said.

In addition to this overture, which will be the opening number, the Eveready Orchestra will play "Glowworm," by Lincke; "American Patrol," by Meacham; Ganne's "La Czarina;" Middleton's rhapsody, "By the Swanee River," and in the 15-minute period of dance music with which the Eveready Hour summer programs conclude, "Havanola" and "Skaters' Waltz."

Maury Kellner, violinist, and Bernice Altschuler, 'cellist, will be heard in solos, the former playing Massenet's "Le Deluge" and the latter Cesar Cui's "Orientale." Kellner and Altschuler also will play as a duet the "Berceuse" from the opera "Jocelyn" by Godard.

When the next episode of the romance of Vivian, the "Coca-Cola Girl," is broadcast through KSD, Tuesday evening, the radio audience will find Vivian and her two lovers back in New York.

The scene of the evenings story will be laid in a Gotham night club where Freddy, imbued with the carnival spirit, is literally "spending his last cent." Unexpectedly, as has been the case in previous weeks, Jim arrives, having worked his way, after his encounter with the police as related in the last episode, on a coasting steamer to New York. The orchestra will musically depict much of the action.

"The Poets of Harmony," Pierre Harrower and Dorothy Hemenway, will be featured in "The Cavalcade" through KSD Tuesday evening.

Harrower was for five years a member of "Roxy's Gang." He has appeared throughout the West in concert and oratorio. Dorothy Hemenway has a brilliant soprano. Mr. Harrower and Miss Hemenway will sing "You in a Gondola" (Clarke), "Mah Lindy Lou" (Strickland), and "What Does It Matter?" (Berlin).

"The Cavalcade," as is implied by its name, is a swiftly moving presentation of a diversified radio program. Among other artists scheduled in this hour are Torre and Viviano, the violin and accordion duo; Mary Leaf, who with a ukulele, will present special arrangements of parodies and popular songs, and Major Dawley in recitations.

Wednesday on KSD

Gottfried H. Federlin, organist of Temple Emanu-El, New York, and of the Marcy Avenue Baptist Church, Brooklyn, will play the organ recital through KSD on Wednesday evening. He will be assisted by George O'Brien, tenor soloist of the National Light Opera Co.

The program follows:

"Meditation" ....Massenet
Nocturne in E Flat........Chopin
"Press Thy Cheek Against Mine" .... Jensen
George O'Brien, tenor
"To the Evening Star—("Tannhauser") ....Wagner
"Serenade" ....Toselli
"Ave Maria"............Schubert
George O'Brien, tenor
"Moonlight Tender"..........Niel
"March of the Priests" Mendelssohn

Following is the program to be played by the Ipano Troubadours Wednesday night: "Smiles," "Meet Me in the Moonlight," "Just the Same," "Little Star," cello solo; "Saluto," "Valse Des Fleurs," from "Nutcracker Suite;" "Gorgeous," "La Violetera," string trio;" "Fate" (Tango), "Under the Moonlight," "Smiles."

The Goodrich Silvertown Cord Orchestra, the Goodrich Silvertown Quartet and the Silver-Masked tenor, will be heard again Wednesday evening through KSD instead of Thursday as formerly. Last week, for the first time, this orchestra and soloists made their debut as a mid-week feature, and evenings.

Following the Goodrich hour they will continue on Wednesday will come Jack Albin and his orchestra in dance music from New York.

Thursday on KSD

KSD will present the National Broadcasting Co. Thursday evening in "The Red Hussar," a comic opera in three acts by Edward Solomon. The cast includes Rosalie Wolf, soprano; Frances Paperte, mezzo soprano; George O'Brien, tenor; Harvey Hindermeyer, tenor; John Oakley, basso; John Quine, baritone.

The action of this opera, which was first produced at the Lyric Theater, London, in 1889, takes place in the reign of Queen Anne, when England was at war with France. Ralph Rodney, once a wealthy gentleman, joins the regiment of Corporal Bundy and goes to the English camp near Bruges, Flanders. He is in love with a young maiden, Kitty Carroll, who follows the army to the continent. Rodney disguises himself as a young German girl and secretly

Performance, Comfort and Luxury

$750 to $830

f. o. b. Detroit

IN THE Chrysler "50" Walter P. Chrysler has upset all ideas of the quality and value that can be purchased in a motor car priced at $750.

Full-sized comfort with ample seating capacity for adult passengers;

Speed of 50 and more miles an hour with a smoothness never before known at such price;

Pick-up of 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds;

Economy of 25 miles to the gallon;

Distinctive and enduring beauty which makes you proud to own and drive it;

And with these—through the great Chrysler plan of Standardized Quality—dependability and long life assured by the same finest engineering design and precision manufacturing which have produced the Chrysler "60", "70" and Imperial "80".

You owe it to yourself to ride in the "50"—

Not a perfunctory demonstration, but we are eager to give you the opportunity for a real test, you to select the route and do the driving, if you wish.

Then and only then will you appreciate that nowhere else at $750 can you obtain the same performance, luxury and comfort you get in the Chrysler "50".

KU KLUX KLAN STATION NOT LIKELY TO GET WAVE LENGTH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—Warning has been served to the Fellowship Forum, official organ of the Ku Klux Klan, that there is slight possibility of obtaining a broadcasting license for a 10,000-watt broadcasting station which it has under construction here.

Learning unofficially that work on the station was going forward, although no building permit had been obtained, Commissioner Caldwell wrote to James S. Vance, general manager of the paper, as follows:

"At present, the commission has on file some 300 applications for new stations for which it is unable to find wave lengths. I can therefore give you very little encouragement looking toward a wave length on which to operate in the near future."

$1295 for this snappy
PEERLESS SIX-60

A PEERLESS Roadster for the amazing low price of $1295!

"Fundamentally better" in every way than any Six ever offered at the price.

A roadster combining every advantage of advanced engineering with quality that's typically Peerless through and through.

Power that's bigger, smoother, freer from vibration than that of any low-cost car you know. Made possible by a 7-bearing crankshaft of generous dimensions, new type Nelson Bohnalite pistons, and Ring True bearings machined to such a point of fineness that they are interchangeable.

Here's a car that's speedy and looks it—with that unusual acceleration that steps it ahead of the crowd.

Light enough to meet every demand for economy. Yet, it holds a rough road perfectly at any pace. Rumble seat accommodates two comfortably.

Long, low, lithe in appearance. And easy to handle, as only a Ross cam and lever steering gear can make it.

If you love action—if you want a car that's truly individual—drive this Six-60 Roadster. Just phone.

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 3, 1927. PAGES 1—4A

"Red Mill" in Forest Park And Garden's "Much Ado" Week's Out-of-Doors Bills

Both Summer Amusement Places Making Preparations for Next Week's Programs, Which Will Offer Distinct Noveltes.

THE fifth week of the Municipal Opera season begins tomorrow night with the Victor Herbert-Henry Blossom extravaganza, "The Red Mill," a piece made famous 20 years ago by Montgomery Stone, as the attraction. Tonight will mark the final performance of "The Song of the Flame," which has exceeded all of this season's productions in the way of attendance and receipts.

"The Red Mill" was presented at the Forest Park open-air theater last summer and proved extremely popular with Municipal Operagoers. It has a distinctive Herbert score, filled with tuneful numbers, its comedy is broad and the two acts allow a spectacular scenic embellishment.

It is a coincidence that just at the time the Municipal Theater Association is reviving "The Red Mill," New York newspapers announce that the long run record of the Knickerbocker Theater on Broadway, established by the Herbert-Blossom opus in 1907, was finally broken by a newer musical comedy, "Honeymoon Lane," which enters the thirty-eighth week of a New York run tomorrow night. "The Red Mill" played at the Knickerbocker for 36 weeks, a run that exceeded those of Maude Adams in "Peter Pan," David Warfield in "The Music Master," Julia Sanderson in "The Dollar Princess," Listen Lester and "Dearest Enemy," a few of the outstanding attractions that followed at the Knickerbocker.

The Herbert-Blossom extravaganza makes use of the Municipal Theater Association's full cast. A special feature of the week's performances will be the appearance of 40 local children in several of the musical numbers.

"MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING" will have its first performance in Garden Theater Tuesday night with the Goodman Players, under the direction of Thomas Wood Stevens. There will be six performances, as the play will be given every night of this week, except Monday.

The play gives ample opportunities to the various players who have won favor at Garden Theater. "Much Ado" runs the gamut from almost burlesque to the edge of tragedy. It was written by Shakspeare sometime between 1598 and 1600, having been entered on the Stationer's register in August, 1600.

"Much Ado" was one of the most popular plays in its day and it has remained so through all these centuries. It contains joy and sorrow and deep love as well as dark hate.

"ROSE-MARIE," the American light opera whose melodies have gone around the world, will be presented a week from tomorrow night, July 11, at the Municipal Theater, for the first time anywhere by a repertory company.

One of the most remarkable hits in the history of the American theater, "Rose-Marie" played in New York for two years, in Chicago for a year, and companies will still be playing it on the road next year after its presentation at the Municipal Theater.

In spite of the lower scale of admission, St. Louisans will probably see a presentation of "Rose-Marie" exceeding in splendor that of the original Hammerstein production. For with a chorus of 96, Municipal Opera will offer a chorus with a tonal volume far exceeding that of the legitimate theater offerings.

Rudolf Friml, one of America's most fertile and brilliant composers, and Herbert Stothart, whose compositions have been heard to advantage in "The Song of the Flame," in which he collaborated with George Gershwin, wrote the music for "Rose-Marie."

PREPARATIONS are being made at Garden Theater for the presentation of "Fashion or the Life in New York," which will open for one week's engagement, Tuesday, July 12.

The Goodman Players this time will appear in an American play. It is, to be sure, a play of other days, but it is one our grand-

Japan Is Making 700 Films a Year

In a recent address Horace T. Clarke, of Kobe, Japan, Far Eastern representative of First National Pictures, gave some interesting information concerning the film situation in the Orient. He said:

"The total population of the Orient is nine hundred million approximately, and to serve that population of nine hundred million people there are some sixteen hundred motion picture theaters scattered from Yokohama, Japan, to Bombay, India.

"In Japan today the Japanese motion picture producers are producing seven hundred pictures a year, or approximately the same number of pictures being produced in the United States. To buck that competition we have to have good pictures, not mediocre pictures, and as many as we can get.

"The sub-titling of pictures in the Orient is rather interesting. In India we use English titles. In the Dutch East Indies we use Dutch and English titles on the same frame. In the Philippines we use Spanish and English titles on the same frame. In China we use English titles and in Japan we use English titles, but it is quite impossible, as you can readily appreciate, for the average Japanese to read English, so it becomes necessary to have a 'speech man' to translate the titles as they appear on the screen. That speech man is generally an ex-actor and it is up to him either to make or mar the picture. If he has a good idea of the story and puts it over big, so much the better for the picture."

Slash in the Expenses Of the Movie Theaters Is Next Economy Move

Stage Shows to be Built Around the Popularity of a Single "Matinee Idol" Who Will Lead a Band.

By NIE.

WITH at least a gesture in the direction of cutting down the expense of making movies in the shape of an invitation for every one connected with the industry to step up and take a cut in salary the film producers who operate chains of theaters on the side say that they are going to turn their attention next to economy in the cinema palaces. Out on the Pacific Coast, where the films are made, there has been no mad rush on the part of the actors, who are under contract, to submit to having their pay checks trimmed. In the theaters, however, it will be a reasonably easy matter to cut down a considerable part of the overhead. The impression that a poor picture could be put over successfully by sewing three more gold stripes on the arms of the already magnificently overdressed ushers or ordering another bucket of purple paint for the lobbies has been more or less knocked sky high. All of the other little fancy trimmings, too, failed to draw people into a slovenly made drama and the manufacturers of gaudy colors and fancy uniforms are trembling in their gay topped, Russian boots.

But the slashes in theater expense are going deeper. Big cuts are to be made in the stage shows and except where theaters are to actually become vaudeville houses with five or more variety acts to go on with the film the stage "presentations" are to be made far less costly.

AT the Missouri Theater much of the present business is attributed to Brooke Johns who leads a band of local musicians bolstered up with some small time, but usually excellent, vaudeville acts. Paul Ash has been having a like success in Chicago and now, at the Ambassador the same sort of a program is to be provided with none other than Herbert Rawlinson, a movie star, as the leader of the stage band. What Rawlinson knows about music has not been disclosed but at all events he is to do a Brooke Johns turn at the Ambassador for four weeks starting July 16. If he goes over he will probably become a fixture at that downtown house just as Johns has become out on Grand avenue. Rawlinson will act as master of ceremonies, lead the stage band and introduce whatever acts are on the program. In addition he will have a number of local dancers just as the Missouri has.

It is not to be inferred that the traveling movie stage shows will be abandoned although, as fast as possible, it is likely that the offerings will become less pretentious and costly. The elaborate productions which were brought to St. Louis and sent around the circuit of houses in the affiliated chain cost thousands of dollars to produce and from $3500 to $6000 a week to keep going. This was a tremendous addition to the overhead of each theater, too much in fact, for most of them to stand.

MORE and more are the theater managers getting the idea that the thing to do is to establish someone in each house as a sort of matinee idol and build the stage show around him with a band as the main attraction. If he happens to be a musician, so much the better, but that won't be a part of his contract by any means.

However, some big acts, with real drawing power will be provided. Andre Charlot, of Charlot's Revue fame, is going to put out four tabloid revues for the movie theaters, the first one opening in New York in a week or two. In one of the Charlot offerings Gertrude Lawrence, a musical comedy star, is to be the headliner. Whether or not she will show elsewhere than in New York is not known.

All of the cinema theater owners, while shedding bitter tears and considerable profanity over the expense, seem to have no idea that what the public really wants is better pictures. By that we do not mean "high brow" art but something really better than the present block of dramas being turned out for first reader audiences. First thing they know someone will start a movie theater where nothing but movies will be shown. The Grand Central, which closes

Abie Still Going Strong in His Sixth Year

NEW YORK, July 2.

FRANK BACON said to me on the night he completed his second year in "Lightnin'":

"I never think about the lines any more. I just get into the old clothes and tell myself I'm Bill Jones and walk out on the stage and the part begins to play itself. At this moment, if you were to give me a cue for one of the speeches in the middle of the play, I couldn't follow it. Fact is, if I began to think about the lines, I'd probably forget them. So don't you talk about the lines to me."

"If," wrote William James in his famous chapter on memory, "a phenomenon be met with too often, although its image is retained and reproduced with great facility, it fails to come up with projection of it backward to a particular date consequently does not come about. We recognize it but do not remember it—its associates form too confused a cloud."

Mr. Bacon didn't put it quite that way but it was obvious that on this point, he and Professor James were in perfect agreement. That was in 1920 when "Lightnin'" was in the midst of a run loudly heralded as record-breaking. Since that time, a new phenomenon has sprung up which makes the time record of Bill Jones seem like an incidental summer run. It is too late for Prof. James to inquire into the psychological reactions of that company which, for more than five years, have been repeating the same lines in "Abie's Irish Rose"—an experiment, incidentally which he would have dearly loved. But, as far as can be gathered from the wanderings backstage of an inquiring layman, their record stands as follows:

HARRY BRADLEY: He plays Father Whalen and is the only member of the cast who has never missed a performance since its beginning. He is not Irish in spite of his rich and melodious brogue. His general aspect is that of a Connecticut Yankee who migrated to California, where he played in the Alcazar stock company, before this eternal engagement in the East. He is frankly tired of Father Whalen and doesn't care who knows it. When the play closes "if it ever does," he adds mournfully, he is going back to California for a long rest at fruit-growing.

Alfred White: Has played the part of Solomon Levy, the father of Abie since its opening night. In that time, however, he has missed one week because of illness. Before he signed this amazing run-of-the-play contract, he was a stock actor playing a variety of character roles in a quiet way. He views the role with amused tolerance and with a shrewd eye for its practical values. "I've watched too many of my friends rehearse for six weeks in a show that ran just one, not to know a good thing when I see it," he remarks philosophically, and walks on for his nightly combat with racial prejudices.

JACK BERTIN: He plays Rabbi Jacob Samuels and is incidentally no more Jewish than Father Whalen is Irish. He is a French Canadian who, before this engagement, had played various minor roles in Belasco productions. He marks his time in the piece (which he entered in August, 1922) by a simple chronological device. "When I first came in, I started to grow a natural beard for the role," he confides solemnly. "If I had let it grow it would be sweeping my knees by now."

IDA KRAMER: She plays Mrs. Isaac Cohen with the expansive and garrulous fervor of another Mrs. Feitlebaum. She took the role soon after the opening and is frankly sentimental about it. "It is so pure, you could take your daughter," she explained, "and it shows how all religions are alike." She insists further that she never wants to leave and that she would like to play the part forever. As present indications go, she has a fair chance of having this aspiration realized.

MILTON WALLACE: Otherwise Isaac Cohen, the diminutive husband of Mrs. Cohen and the big comedy role of the piece. As solemn, not to say as melancholy, a comedian as you could meet offstage. He is primarily a singer; he has been with "Abie" four years and the role gives him not so much as a bar to sing from "Eli, Eli." All his suppressed melodic impulses, however, are to be released in the fall when he takes a role in a musical comedy called "Half a Widow," assuming, of course, that "Abie" closes in August.

HAROLD SHUBERT: Abie himself. This role has it perils, inasmuch as the leading juvenile is always in danger of growing slightly gray about the temples with the passage of time. However, he has only played for four and a half years.

ANDREW MACK: He has played Patrick Murphy, the father of Rosemary, for four years. Before this he was well known as a singer of Irish songs and the creator of Irish roles straight from the school of Chauncey Olcott. Unlike Mr. Wallace, he is not at all depressed by the fact that his role is vocally a total loss. He varies its monotony with occasional concerts.

ELSIE NICHOLS: A sister of Anne Nichols and the fourth actress to play the role of Rose. The other three are Marie Carroll, who opened with the show; Anne Bronaugh, who followed her and another Nichols sister, called Evelyn. The present Miss Nichols is comparatively a freshman in this group of veterans, for she has recited the lines for only a scant 12 months. It was her first role on any stage. She hopes to follow it up with a variety of other interpretations—a list which may be hopelessly curtailed if she intends to go on

BEHIND THE SCREENS

HOLLYWOOD, July 2.

WHEN Herbert Brenon, who is directing "Sorrell and Son," and Buster Keaton were about a quarter of a century younger, Brenon was playing in vaudeville, and so was Buster. Brenon was a member of the team of Brenon and Downing, and the frozen-faced fun maker, then a mere tot, was a third of the "Three Keatons"—father, mother and son. They often appeared on the same bill together and Buster used to make the childish boast that he'd have his own theater some day and let Brenon use it.

Fate intervened and Brenon and Keaton became motion picture notables. Brenon always remembered what Keaton said about letting him use a theater, and when the director started "Sorrell and Son" he discovered that he needed more than one studio for the many big sets in the screen version of the best selling English novel.

He visited Keaton's studio one day recently and told Buster of his plight.

"I promised that you could use my theater some day," said Buster. "I haven't got a theater, but you're welcome to use my studio if there isn't room enough for all your sets on the United Artists' lot. I've just finished a picture and won't need the studio for several weeks. Here it is; build your sets, bring your company over, and make yourself at home."

And that's why part of "Sorrell and Son" is being filmed at the Keaton studio.

"Did you see 'Beau Geste?'" George Bancroft asked Chester Conklin in a conversational interlude between scenes of their Paramount comedy, "Tell It To Sweeney."

"No," said Chester.

"Gosh, why not?" quizzed George. "It's been running for six or eight months."

"Listen," Chester came back, "there are rivers in Africa that have been running for 5000 years and I haven't seen 'em yet."

With a dozen companies working, preparing for cutting, the United Artists Studio now is in the midst of the busiest period of its history. Douglas Fairbanks is making "The Gaucho," a spectacular story of South America adventure. It is Doug's most ambitious effort. Mary Pickford has started work on her long-awaited opus of the shop girl. It is titled "My Best Girl" and it affords "America's Sweetheart" a brand-new characterization. Herbert Brenon is bringing the best-selling English novel, "Sorrell and Son," to the screen, with H. B. Warner in his first role since "The King of Kings;" Alice Joyce, Anna Q. Nilsson, Carmel Myers, Norman Trevor, Louis Wolheim, Mickey McBann and other players. The company leaves for England this month to shoot about half of the picture. Constance Talmadge is starring in "Dejeuner de Soleil," a gay story of modern Paris. It is Constance's last feature for First National reacting in her sister's plays and if Abie's sequel has half the endurance of its eternal original.

THERE is also a little bridesmaid called Dorothy Grau who, every night for more than five years, has descended the stairs of the Levy household to the strains of Lohengrin. This, with the constantly changing procession of other bridesmaids who have grown up, married and died, comprises the cast of the extraordinary production which, in its sixth season, has established a new record for endurance tests in the theater. According to a recent announcement, the end of this record run is now in sight and it won't be long now before a new play enters the Republic Theater. The advertisements now bear the sign, "Last Five Weeks," but an official in the office confided to this department that Miss Nichols hasn't the slightest intention of taking the play off Broadway as long as it is playing to its present excellent houses. Apparently "Abie" is undergoing one of its periodic revivals of interest, for business during the past two weeks has been much better than earlier in the month. The end isn't definitely in sight and the indications are that the grandchildren of those aged first-nighters who saw "Abie's Irish Rose" will yet be journeying down to a tottering old playhouse in reverent memory of the days when the Republic Theater was considered uptown.

IF Abie is still flourishing, the majority of its companions on Broadway are not. The casualties at every week-end have been enormous, plays have been passing out in droves of 14 at a time and practically nothing has arrived to take their places. The week that is past saw only two openings, both musical and both contributing less than nothing of significance to the midsummer calendar.

One was a Negro show called "Bottomland" in which a company, which hitherto had been imprisoned in Okeh records, suddenly burst out of their phonograph onto the stage of the Princess Theater. Apart from the irresistible racial hilarity the piece has little to recommend it. The other was one of those semi-amateurish revues which opened in the little cellar theater called the Triangle and which rejoices in the title of "Bare Facts of 1927." Such pieces are constantly creeping into the cellar and garret playhouses of Greenwich Village with the wistful hope of being transferred uptown; in this case such hopes seem to be utterly without foundation.

Grand Opera —in— Europe

By HERBERT M. JOHNSON, Manager Chicago Civic Opera.

LONDON, July 2.

A YEAR has wrought great changes in musical England, mostly for the better, I believe.

The Royal Opera at Covent Garden is at its height and at its conclusion on June 24 the proponents of the enterprise hope to have only a small deficit to meet. This improvement in operatic conditions appears from reports to permeate all Europe in spite of the trying economic conditions with which the people are contending. Here in England the entire field of public entertainment seems to have regained a healthy equilibrium, in contrast with the universal complaint at home concerning the status of the theater. The big English theaters are making money and paying dividends. This is reflected far afield in activities which are suffering in the States. For instance, Louis Sterling, head of the Columbia Graphaphone Co. informs me that his company is paying cash dividends of 40 per cent for the third successive year. What a scramble there would be in musical circles were American talking machine companies maintaining such a record.

American visitors were surprised by the success of the German Opera season at Covent Garden with a performance of "Gotterdam mering," concluding two complete cycles of Richard Wagner's "Der Ring Des Nibelungen." From that date until the end of the London season all performances are being sung in Italian with the exception of "Carmen," in French. Bizet's work maintains its popularity in England the same as at home.

"Les Huguenots," alternating between the French and Italian repertoire in many lands, is included in the latter here, sung as "Gli Ugonotti" as when last heard in Chicago. It enjoyed the advantage of the patronage of the King and Queen, who are not as a rule opera enthusiasts, but who have a fondness for Italian Opera, with a strong preference for "La Boheme."

THE entire season is under the stage direction of Charles Moor, who hitherto has been responsible only for German performances in London. This interesting and talented director furnishes an eloquent illustration of the international character of the artistic personnel making grand opera possible in America. He will be remembered as the authority on German lyric art "borrowed" by the Chicago Civic Opera from the German state opera at Darmstadt two years ago, when we were staging "Der Rosenkavalier," and engaged last season as our general stage director—a contract which now has been extended, and which has been duplicated by the Covent Garden management.

This German authority is a Scotchman of very old family, and despite his long professional activities in Central Europe, fought with the British army in the World War, achieving a captaincy for distinguished service. When he stepped out of uniform it was to resume his professional calling in Germany, and when he reappeared in England it was to stage German opera. The story epitomized in this man's career is that in every department grand opera requires the best talent the world produces without reference to nationality or similar considerations, and it is the best answer to the insistent demand in some poorly informed quarters that only Americans be given consideration in opera produced in this country.

The same demand, emphasized and accentuated by stringent economic conditions, is heard in Germany, France, Italy, Spain and elsewhere. Yet wherever grand opera worthy of the name is produced an infusion of "foreign" artistry will be found. Edith Mason at La Scala, Milan, and Mary Garden in Paris are striking examples of the hour.

LONDON'S season is of eight weeks' duration, as compared with New York's 24. The cont is greater when one considers the relative sizes of the opera houses and the further fact that here no performances are sung on Saturday or Sunday and no matinees are given. Historic old Covent Garden seats only 1900 patrons as compared with about 3600 in our opera houses, so the fact that 18 of the first 20 performances were absolutely sold out, while pleasing, means little from our standpoint. Covent Garden's prices are a bit below the New York scale, so that capacity means only about $7000—a joke from American standpoints.

As against this, however, producing costs fully equalize conditions. Union labor costs absorb about forty per cent of grand opera expenditures at home. Here, in comparison, labor costs are trifling. The players in the Covent Garden orchestra receive about $7.50 a performance with a free rehearsal for each opera, whereas musicians receive double that sum and from $90 to $100 a week for rehearsals. The weekly wage for a chorister in London is about the daily fee of the player in the pit and they, too, accord a free rehearsal for each opera. The minimum scale of the Choral Alliance, as the American choristers' union is known, is $61 a week, with $42 a week for rehearsals. The variance in costs for everything else is in proportion.

To casually accept these comparative figures as indicative of particularly hard times among the working classes in England would be misleading. England has experienced hard times indeed, but it is in every way on the mend as shown by conditions cited in the opening paragraphs of this letter. Also there appears to be a friendlier spirit towards America and Americans. The recent visit of Charles Lindbergh afforded splendid opportunity to gauge this, and the genial and modest bearing of the daring young aviator did more than any circumstance I have noted in years to overcome the bad impression created by ill-mannered up-start tourists, who, last year, in particular, made America a household joke throughout all Europe. Lindbergh was accorded a royal welcome and he accomplished more in creating friendly and sympathetic sentiment than a retinue of diplomats. His welcome came from the people as a whole and put a quietus on the employment of the derisive term "swanking Yankees."

PRICES are high as measured from the English standpoint, and taxes and high considered from any point of view. The people, however, are both cheerful and industrious. Unemployment still is a problem, but not in the degree commonly attributed to the subject. There are now over 1,000,000 unemployed as compared with half that number in pre-war days. Here again careful analysis is necessary to avoid grossly incorrect conclusions, for, as a matte rof fact, there are more workers than ever, due to the number of women, younger sons, etc., who are earning incomes instead of living in idleness as in the other days. So, proportionately there is less actual unemployment than usual. A tremendous social and economic change has taken place, and stillis in progress, in the development of which a large number of persons have been squeezed out of employment and their accepted routine in life. These people still have to adjust and accommodate themselves to the new order of things, and they gradually are doing so.

The only novelty offered in the Covent Garden Opera season—Puccini's "Turandot"—affords another illustration of the advantages enjoyed by the European opera producer. Whereas American audiences demand as their right from four to six novelties each season, London is content to pay increased prices $10 a seat in this instance) for a new work. But the real point does not lie in the facility with which European managements may raise prices—for Miss Garden in Paris, for instance, for premieres, etc.—but in the simplicity with which they solve the problem of meeting the heavy burden of producing novelties. Instead of making a costly production of "Turandot" as we should be compelled to do under like circumstances, the London management simply "borrows" it from the Opera House, at Turin, Italy, whose stage is of similar proportions.

GRAND OPERA via LIGHT OPERA

By ANNE YAGO OF THE MUNICIPAL COMPANY

SOME of my friends have asked me from time to time why I am engaged in light opera work. For they know that my goal is grand opera with the Metropolitan Opera Compaany as my objective, and they cannot reconcile my aspiration with my present work.

There are two reasons for the seeming inconsistency between my hopes and my activity—the very material one of grand opera singing not paying sufficiently well, and the personal belief that the true grand opera singers are schooled in light opera.

From the time I first found I had a voice as a girl in Toronto, Canada, I have striven to make the most of it with a view to going as far as I possibly could in the musical world. But just when I had my first real opportunity, I had it snatched away.

The Canadian Government had planned to send me to Europe for study, an experience so essential in acquiring an operatic reputation, but the war then became so taxing that the idea of encouraging girls to further their musical education was out of the question.

That disappointment, however, did not dampen my spirit. I continued my study, and realized my desire of becoming a member of an operatic organization. And for several years I was with one opera company after another—the San Carlo, the Gallo, the Boston, the Philadelphia, the Lyford Company in Cincinnati, and in fact virtually everyone in the country with the exception of the one that I most desired—the Metropolitan.

ABOUT this time, after several years of interesting though not very eventful work, I decided it was time to take stock and I found that I was still far from my goal of the Metropolitan without receiving sufficient compensation to make up for my disappointment.

I had learned that entrance into the Metropolitan was difficult without a European reputation. One can, of course, join that organization in a minor capacity, but the artist will be given only minor roles as long as he does not possess the halo of a European name.

And then, in further studying the situation, I discovered that many of the leading singers had a background of light opera. Jeritza is the product of Viennese opera; Chaliapin sang in comic opera; and so did Bohnen. And there is also the case of Mary Lewis, the American singer, who was starred in musical comedy and vaudeville before joining the Metropolitan.

The unusual thing in these personalities is that they are also among the finest operatic stars. They make their roles living creatures—a result of their light opera experience that demands acting as well as singing.

So I decided it might not be weakness but wisdom to follow their paths in my effort to enter the Metropolitan. And in casting my lot with light opera, I found I was not only helping myself, but also profiting in salary—a factor that made further study easier.

MY first light opera work was with De Wolf Hopper in Baltimore. In a summer park in the open air those presentations can be likened to Municipal Opera only in that similar works were presented, "Robin Hood" being my first light opera experience.

Those weeks with De Wolf Hopper were of immeasurable benefit to me. Hopper who is a master of enunciation, taught me English diction, and showed me how important it was to be understood. In grand opera, where one sings in a different language, the words are sacrificed for the melody, as no one is expected to understand the story.

In ensuing light opera work, ranging from road engagements to two seasons with Atlanta's Municipal Opera, I have been finding that there is more to opera than singing. Acting, so essential a part of comic opera, is just as important in grand opera.

Yvonne D'Arle, whose teacher is also mine, found this to be true, and I am sure benefited from her experience in Municipal Opera. So also must have Ralph Errolle, and so shall I in my summer with St. Louis' Municipal Opera.

To me this civic institution is the last word in light opera, just as the Metropolitan is the ultimate in grand opera. Both are supreme in their fields.

And Municipal Opera will play its part in revivifying grand opera in this country. Grand opera singers who are too prone to rely on their voices alone will gain in Municipal Opera experience the warmth and vitality of acting that are so essential in true artists.

Municipal Opera has not only been an important factor in re establishing light opera in this country, but through its pre-eminence will also lead in establishing grand opera.

mothers thought much of. It will be done here in all seriousness and in fact, the seriousness will, no doubt, be such as to make it appear funny. This will be due to the fact that things have changed in America since the days when this play won favor in the year 1850. It was the most successful play of the period and its author, Anna Cora Mowatt, was acclaimed as a real dramatic genius. She was even induced to appear in the play in person.

There will be the costumes our grandmothers used and our grandfathers admired and grumbled about as they paid the bills. For human nature has not changed even though fashions have changed quite a bit. There will be old songs, too, the kind that touched the tender hearts of those days.

TO CUT EXPENSES OF MOVIE THEATERS

next Saturday, as has already been told in these columns, is going to do just that thing when it reopens next month, but will try and get only pictures big enough to run for several weeks. Incidentally, "Chang," a great picture which will have little appeal to Grand avenue audiences of the present type, will be the first film shown under the Grand Central's new policy. It may win back a part of the very considerable patronage which has quit the movie houses altogether.

AND on the subject of vaudeville in the movies, James R. Quirk, editor of Photoplay Magazine, announces that "what the country needs more than good five-cent cigars is good twenty-five-cent movies."

With this declaration Mr. Quirk has begun a campaign for a return of the days when a movie fan could pay a moderate price and see a fair feature picture without sitting through a melange of vaudeville, orchestral and vocal special numbers to which, he says, the films are coming to be only incidental.

"Big exhibitors have gone daffy on fantastic architecture, symphony orchestras, prologues, toe dancers, and other forms of cinematographic sauces," says Quirk in an editorial to be published in the July issue of his monthly.

"I like my pictures straight, and I am but echoing the voice of millions of cinema enthusiasts when I cry out for a theater where I can get a fairly good movie and three reels of news pictures at a fair price.

"If I want acrobats, Swiss bellringers, contortionists, clog dancers or mammy sobbers, I can go to a vaudeville theater. If I want Italian baritones or German sopranos, I can go to grand opera. If I want symphonies, I don't want to hear them murdered. If I want Vitaphone, or other forms of squawking pictures, I can wait until they get the right combinations."

Granting that "the best of the picture palaces are worthy enterprises, marvels of diversified entertainment," Quirk aims his criticism particularly at smaller exhibitors who, instead of providing good photoplay entertainment at reasonable prices, attempt to reproduce the programs of the larger houses, raising prices to cover the additional expense.

"The Lord preserve us from those second rate movie palaces which imitate high class presentations like the Japanese imitate American-made locomotives," he says. "They imitate everything, including the defects, and the result is a combination of 20 German street bands in plush dinner coats and vaudeville acts that never got beyond Little Rock, Ark."

CHRISTY CABANNE of St. Louis celebrated the anniversary of his fifteenth year as a motion picture director when he directed Mae Murray in "Altars of Desire," with Conway Tearle in the featured male lead. This production is playing at Loew's this week.

Cabanne is one of the few old-time directors that have survived in the industry to the present day. He has directed motion pictures for practically every producing organization, and was with D. W. Griffith in the early days, directing Lillian Gish and Douglas Fairbanks in their first pictures.

The list of people that Cabanne started on the road to fame reads like a Blue Book of the screen. In this list are Monte Blue, Erich von Stroheim, Andre Beranger, Gertrude Astor and dozens of others.

After leaving Griffith, Cabanne branched out for himself. Lately he has directed "The Midshipman," "Monte Carlo" and "The Masked Bride" for Metro-Goldwyn Mayer, to whom he is under contract.

In "Altars of Desire," Cabanne has a supporting cast that includes Maude George, Robert Edeson and Andre Beranger.

DID you know that Colleen Moore, recently voted by exhibitors of the country to be the best box office star in motion pictures, sat on an extra bench for six months and then got a job lasting only three days? Well, it's an interesting sidelight on the career of this highly popular star.

One day her uncle, Walter Howie, a newspaper editor, walked into the offices of the old Essanay Company in Chicago. He was astonished to find his lively little niece sitting on the extra bench. Inquiry revealed that she had determined on a film career. When the editor offered to get her a better part than extra in the movies she refused his aid, asserting that she wanted to "get by" on her own merits. Many times during the six long months of waiting that followed she felt like asking Uncle Walter to help her out, but she fought this temptation off.

Finally the chance came. The job lasted three days, at $3.50 a day, netting the grand total of $10.50. But a short time later D. W. Griffith chanced to meet Miss Mbore in her uncle's home. He immediately saw possibilities in Miss Moore and convinced her family that she had a screen future. Within a week she was on her joyous way to California, and her first chance came under the direction of Griffith. A long apprenticeship in small and featured roles, then came a First National contract, "Flaming Youth," stardom and popularity. Her success continued to grow with "So Big," "Sally" and "Irene." "Twinkletoes" and "Orchids and Ermine" are her latest vehicles. Her last was "Naughty but Nice."

Miss Moore was born in Port Huron, Mich. Most of her childhood was spent in Tampa, Fla., where she was educated at a convent. At the age of 10 she became interested in theatricals, organizing an impromptu neighborhood stock company, playing principal roles from heroine to villain and acting as property man. Her family wanted her to become a concert pianist, but a course in a musical conservatory failed to swerve her love for histrionics. Colleen is the wife of John McCormick, the producer of her pictures. They have a beautiful home in Hollywood.

lease before she joins United Artists. Corinne Griffith's "The Garden of Eden," which has a modern continental locale, is well into production. In the supporting cast are Louise Dresser, Rose Dione, Edward Martindel, David Torrence, Andre Beranger and Andres de Segurola. Norma Talmadge has completed "The Dove," which now is in the cutting room, and has gone to Europe for a vacation before launching another production. Gloria Swanson and John Barrymore are preparing to start new pictures, and D. W. Griffith is expected to begin work in the near future. Miss Swanson will make "Sadie Thompson," and Barrymore is to abandon costume roles and do "Tempest," which has a modern setting.

After a week of very strenuous scenes, the company filming Milton Sills' latest starring vehicle, "Hard-Boiled Haggerty," is catching its breath by "shots" alternating between an officer's ball behind the lines, and a court martial. The film has a wartime background, but most of its action takes place in Paris. The story gives Sills a hard-bitten, rugged character, and Molly O'Day, his leading lady, the role of a vivacious French girl.

George Fawcett is the latest addition to the principals of the cast, which also includes Arthur Stone and Mitchell Lewis. The scene of aerial fighting over the German lines, with Sills at the stick of an American plane, have been taken.

Frank Reicher, long identified with the New York stage both as a player and a director, has been cast in an important role in Paramount's picturization of the P. C. Wren novel "Beau Sabreur," which goes into production soon.

There should be plenty of "dirty work" in Billie Dove's current starring picture, "American Beauty," for there are three prominent movie villains in the cast. Walter McGrail, Lucien Prival and Freeman Wood, "heavies" of the first rank, are all members of the cast.

The bad weather jinx which has been riding Douglas MacLean for many months has gone away to hoodoo some other motion picture producer.

For the first time since MacLean made "Hold That Lion," the weather man has presented the comedian with clear weather when it was needed during the filming of exterior scenes in the comedy "Soft Cushions."

Hooray! Big Party! All bedbugs invited!

Big night for bedbugs: There's a ne baby at the Jones house!

BEDBUGS love new babies—and they love the babies' parents, too.

Keep them out of your house! They are filthy. They spread disease.

Don't fight them with a spray. No spray can possibly exterminate them. They don't live in the bedclothes, as you may have supposed. They are behind the picture moldings. In the woodwork. Only a liq uid can seep down and g the young and the eggs. Bedbugs don't eat. They suck. Therefore only a liq uid can exterminate them.

Peterman's Discovery (liquid) is the right liquid. It will exterminate all bed bugs, all their young and eggs, in any house in 48 hours.

Here is the right insecticide for each insect:

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY, Liquid—exterminates bedbugs.

FLYOSAN, Liquid Spray—kills flies and mosquitoes.

PETERMAN'S ROACH FOOD—exterminates cockroaches.

PETERMAN'S ANT FOOD—exterminates ants.

PETERMAN'S MOTH FOOD—protects against moths.

You must have a specific insecticide for each insect. No single insecticide will exterminate them all. We have had nearly 50 years' experience. We know that is true.

Peterman's has the right insecticide for each insect. On sale wherever drugs are sold.

CITIZENS ASKED TO LEASE LAND AS GAME REFUGES

Missouri Department Seeks Sites Under New Law Which Sets Aside Areas As Auxiliary Parks.

STATE WILL STOCK FARM RESERVES

No Sanctuary Will Be Created Unless 80 Per Cent Is Available as Public Shooting Grounds.

Game refuges combined with public hunting grounds, to be leased to the State for nominal consideration, as auxiliaries to the State park system, are being sought by the State Game and Fish Department, under authority of a new law. Commissioner McCanse and Park Chief Montieth have issued the following explanation:

"Sportsmen's organizations, service clubs, associations and individuals can be of great assistance to the State Game and Fish Department in the matter of obtaining proper sites for auxiliary game refuges. The assistance and cooperation of all interested citizens, and especially the Izaak Walton Chapters and Sportsmen's Protective Leagues is solicited by the department.

"An auxiliary game refuge consists of a tract of land of which the hunting rights are leased by the State for a period of not less than 10 years. Approximately 20 per cent of the area is used for the game refuge proper and the rest forms a public hunting ground, where any citizen may hunt in season.

"It is a cardinal principle that no game refuge will be created unless there is provided in connection therewith a public shooting ground. If this principle were not adhered to, the State would only be stocking and protecting certain areas from which the game would overflow to premises on which the public might be denied access and would not receive the benefit it should from the refuge.

State-wide Refuge Planned.

"A State-wide comprehensive game refuge and public shooting ground plan is the program of the department. Every section of the State is to be given consideration. A law sponsored by the department and fathered by Senator Morgan of Putnam County was passed by the last Legislature and has made possible this program.

"After 20 years of experience Pennsylvania has proved the refuge system to be the most practical and successful method for the upbuilding of outdoor wild life. Indicative of this success are the figures of their legal kill in 1926: Deer (two-prong bucks only), 11,667; bear, 645; ruffed grouse, 130,620; ring-neck pheasants, 144,453; rabbits, 1,401,690; wild turkey, 3241; quail, 160,425; woodcock and shore birds, 61,876. Pennsylvania is only two-thirds as large as Missouri and has a population almost three times as great.

"We patterned our law after Pennsylvania and before inaugurating our system we made a careful study of Pennsylvania's methods by personal inspection, and are following in her footsteps and adapting the Pennsylvania plan to Missouri.

"Game refuges may be said to be of three types: Big game, refuges, principally for deer and turkey; small game refuges, principally for quail, pheasant, rabbits, etc.; and migratory bird refugees, principally for ducks and geese. The type of refuge is wholly dependent upon the character of the territory in which it is located. In submitting data concerning proposed refuges a study of the territory should be made.

State to Stock Refuges.

"Game refuges will be protected the year 'round by this department. They will be stocked by the department. Much attention will be given to the enemies of game. Expert woodsmen will carry on constant warfare in game refuges against vermin. Predatory animals and birds take a far larger toll of game than does the hunter.

It is the hope of the department to give the sportsmen of Missouri a place where they may hunt without trespass signs, on land in which they have an interest and on which they are welcome. By stocking sanctuaries or refuges with game, protecting the game and fighting its enemies, the department is confident that the time is not far distant when sportsmen will be able to enjoy themselves on public hunting grounds.

Sportsmen can help in this program by locating suitable areas in their communities and by convincing the land owners of the desirability of establishing game refuges. The department will pay a nominal consideration of $1 for such leases. After an inspection by the department, if further consideration is to be given the location submitted for refuge, a petition will be required to be signed by 100 citizens of the county, who are holders of hunting licenses. The petition will ask the department to establish the refuge and blanks for the purpose will be furnished by the department.

Broad Powers Given Commissioner.

The auxiliary refuge law puts broad description in establishment and control of these areas in the hands of the Game and Fish Commissioner. It says: "Suitable lands or waters owned or controlled by individuals, corporations, associations, municipalities or the State may be used for such purposes, subject to the permission of the proper authorities owning or controlling the same." Leases may be cancelled by the commission on 60 days' notice when no longer needed or desired, and provision is made for cancellation in event of sale.

The refuge portions will be set off, as in the present State parks, by single wire strands, appropriately posted. The auxiliaries will not be exempted from taxation. It is a misdemeanor to enter a refuge in a State park or an auxiliary, without permit from the commissioner, and no one may hunt in a refuge. Applications for auxiliary parks prepared by the department include a pledge to endeavor to protect the area from hunting and forest fires. These may be obtained from the department at Jefferson City.

COURT GRANTS MAN RIGHT TO MOVE LIQUOR TO HOME

Former Dealer Allowed to Take Stock From Warehouse to Kansas City.

Federal Judge Faris yesterday upheld the right of Alexander Rieger, a former liquor dealer, to move large stocks of liquors from a warehouse to his home in Kansas City.

On the representation of Rieger that he stored the liquor in June, 1919, for his own use, Judge Faris held that, if the stock were contraband, the Government should have seized it in 1920. Under the ruling Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair and Prohibition Administrator Haley are restrained from seizing the liquor.

SCOUT DECALOGUE RULES BOYS IN CAMP

Care of Lions' Den Reservation Outlined in Ten Commandments Issued by Headquarters.

Ten commandments for Boy Scout troops camping at the Lions' Den Reservation, the official week-end camp of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, near Sieckman, Mo., have been issued by local headquarters in connection with the opening last week of the camp for the summer. All scouts and scoutmasters intending to make use of the camp are expected to familiarize themselves with the regulations before signing their application for camping privileges.

The regulations follow:

Each troop will be permitted to have one ax. The scoutmaster, however, must be responsible for the proper use of the ax, and must see that no standing timber, be it ever so small, is hacked or cut down. Individual scouts may not bring axes on the reservation.

Before a troop or individual scout is permitted to use the reservation it will be necessary to present to the camp director an official permit issued by local headquarters.

Must Care for Equipment.

All equipment on the reservation must be kept in good condition. When lent to a troop or individual it is in that shape, and, therefore, any damage found when the equipment is turned back to the quartermaster must be compensated for by the individual to whom the permit is issued.

No wild flowers, of which there are a large number on the reservation, are to be picked, but are to be left for all to enjoy.

No fruit tree or berry bush is to be molested under any circumstance The caretaker is instructed to deprive the use of the reservation to any individual violating this rule.

Taps is sounded at 10 o'clock; scouts and leaders are expected to maintain quiet thereafter.

Women visitors are welcome to the camp during the day time, but must leave the reservation by 8:30 p. m.

Firearms in the hands of any scout, official or visitor are strictly forbidden, as the reservation is a game preserve.

No fires are to be built except in the places provided for them, and such fires must be completely extinguished before they are left.

Camps to Be Inspected.

When troops are preparing to leave either the equipped or non-equipped camps, they must have their camp ready for inspection by the camp director at least one hour before time to leave. Troops must not break camp until so instructed by the director. Camp sites must be cleaned and policed, all garbage disposed of, and all equipment returned to the quartermaster in good order. All fires must be out, ashes disposed of and a supply of wood placed in the racks for the next troop using the site.

Each troop will be rated on its keeping of the above rules, and a record kept at local headquarters of the points awarded for good camping.

The Lions' Den Reservation, a 250-acre tract donated last year by the South Side Lions' Club for a boy scout camping grounds, opened last Monday for camping seven days a week. Formerly it was used only over the week-ends and on holidays. The local council maintains a special bus service from the south end of the Bellefontaine car line to the camp, busses going down one day and returning the next. The camp is under the charge of Merle Shippey, field executive of the South District.

Boy Scout Troop Notes

South District.

Troop 63 entertained their parents and friends with a scout program last Tuesday evening, as a conclusion to an inter-patrol and an individual achivement contest closing that evening. The individual merit contest was won by Scout Robert Hennessy, who was awarded a period at Camp Irondale. The Moose patrol won first prize in the patrol project contest by making a miniature camp; second prize was won by the Panther patrol. The interpatrol contest was won by the Flying Eagle patrol, second prize being awarded the Bears. Table decorations was won by the Bear patrol, second place going to the Moose patrol. Scoutmaster Rubey, Deputy Commissioner O'Rourke and H. A. Murphy served as judges in awarding the prizes. The project exhibits were all good, and showed that Patrol Leaders Kendall, Finger, Record and Reber had worked hard to make this showing among the best the troop has ever had.

Troop 118 administered first air

Troop 118 administered first aid scious while running a race at a recent picnic. The assistant scoutmaster was present and took charge of the first-aid.

Troop 74 of the Sherman School held its first hike last Saturday to Kenwood Springs, 10 scouts attending. This hike was primarily a test hike and the scouts fulfilled expectations by passing 20 tests in tracking, fire building, compass, cooking, first-aid, knife and hatchet. The hike was sponsored by Assistant Scoutmaster Kelly and Senior Patrol Leader McCully. The troop is planning a ghost hike and treasure hunt in the near future.

Scouts Johnson and Tieman of Troop 155 gave a demonstration of first aid before the University City Kiwanis Club last Tuesday noon. The demonstration was very well received and a number of the men stated that they had learned a great deal that might be of service to them over the Fourth of July period.

Troop 143 is on its annual three-day camp at Big River. A miniature Court of Honor will be held tonight at which time the following scouts will receive their pins First Class, Scouts Bauer, Miller, Hillgaertner Jr., and Forshee; Second Class, Scout Stverak; tenderfoot, Scouts Kapper, Miller, Morris, Hall, Rivers and Kirk. The new senior patrol leader also will receive his pin and certificate. This ceremony will close the Interpatrol contest.

Troop 118 has announced that Scoutmaster Arthur Petrov is leaving for an extended trip to New York, and therefore has resigned from his position. His place will be taken by a new scoutmaster, Alvah J Phoenix, who has been active in boys' work for a number of years as a committeeman. Scoutmaster Petrov assured the new scoutmaster that Troop 118 is behind him in keeping up the work. The troop tendered thanks to Scoutmaster Petrov for the co-operation he has given them in the past.

North District.

Thirty-eight boys, the scoutmaster, and two troop committeemen of Troop 122 went on an overnight hike last week-end to Gilmore, Mo. Songs, games, and stories were featured around a council fire Saturday evening, and tests were passed Sunday morning after church services. Most of the tests were for first class work or merit badges.

Troop 3 was awarded 100 points in activities at the Lions' Den Reservation last Sunday, for building a bridge and erecting a flagpole. The hike was attended by 13 scouts and three officials. Three new scouts were recruited, and one old member, Elton Stone, returned, last meeting.

Troop 206 is planning an overnight hike to the Lions' Den for the near future. Twelve scouts, five committeemen, the scoutmaster, and one visitor were present at the last meeting.

Troop 148 is spending the Fourth of July at the Montauk State Park, 160 miles southwest of St. Louis.

West District.

Troop 94 had election of officers on Thursday night. Those elected are as follows: Chairman, Scout Cento; scribe, Scout Lynch; treasurer, Scout Muehling; quartermaster, Scout Ephorst; patrol leaders, Scouts K. Eise, Kurz, Lehmkhul, Burns; assistant patrol leaders, Hilke, Novelly, Deters and McKeane. This troop had a hike to Meramec Highlands last Sunday, 21 Scouts and the outdoor member of the Troop Committee, Dr. Willmering, attending. A large number of tests were passed. On next Friday evening this troop will hold a joint meeting with Troop 44. As a troop good turn the Scouts were ushers at the graduation exercises of the St. Barbara's School on June 19. During the absence of Scoutmaster Ullrich, who is swimming instructor at Camp Irondale this summer, Assistant Scoutmaster Wehmeyer is in charge of the troop.

At the last meeting of Troop 59 a relay race was held around the block. The third issue of the troop's paper, "The Yell," was published last Friday. Scout Hollander, former editor of the paper, will be unable to continue with the troop, so Senior Patrol Leader Hoppe will edit the paper hereafter. Scout William Jobsky became a second-class Scout at the last meeting. A demonstration of how to fold the American flag will be given by the Horse Patrol next

145 NEW LAWS PASSED BY 1927 LEGISLATURE BECAME EFFECTIVE AT MIDNIGHT

Measure Providing Death Penalty for Highway Robbery Committed With Deadly Weapon Among Those Operative.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, July 2.—Missouri's code of laws, already voluminous, will become more so tomorrow, when 145 of the 185 measures passed by the 1927 Legislature and signed by Gov. Baker will become effective. The other 40, including 16 appropriation acts, carried emergency clauses that put them into effect as soon as they were approved by the Governor.

The new laws cover a wide field of legislative effort, varying from designation of the native blue bird (Sialia Sialis) as the official State bird, and authorizing sale of goat meat if branded as "chevon," of State regulation of motor bus lines, and death sentences for highway robbers.

These measures finally reached the stage of laws from a total of 1206 bills introduced in the House and Senate. Acts finally passed and approved included 93 Senate bills and 92 House bills. The Governor vetoed three Senate bills and four House bills.

Measures vetoed provided electrocution instead of hanging, as the method of legal execution, changed the bond requirements of collectors of drainage district taxes, required only one State license tag for automobiles instead of two, placed a bounty on wild cats, required periodical advertisement of unclaimed bank deposits of less than $50, prohibited a coroner who is an embalmer from acting as funeral director in cases coming before him as coroner, and provided a township road patrol in Jackson County.

Laws Effective July 3.

The State Constitution provides that all measures passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor, that do not carry emergency clauses, shall go into effect 90 days after adjournment of the Legislature. The 1927 Legislature adjourned on April 4 and the effective date of the laws is July 3.

One of the acts establishes a Statute Revision Commission, which will begin work next week and remain in existence until the 1929 Legislature convenes to make the revision of the statutes required every 10 years by the Constitution. The Commission comprises six members of the last Legislature.

This commission will prepare and submit to the Legislature proposed bills condensing and clarifying the Revised Statutes of 1919, and laws passed by the Legislature since 1919. The commission was directed to prepare recommendations that will eliminate duplications, obsolete, conflicting and ambiguous laws and acts declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

One of the laws going into effect tomorrow established State regulation of motor bus lines through the Public Service Commission. The law gives the commission full power to license, supervise and regulate all motor carriers within the State; fix rates, fares and classifications; regulate service, routes, equipment, accounting and operating methods. The cities retain the right to control use of their streets by busses and certain other regulatory powers.

Incorporation Laws Are Liberalized

Another law that likely will bring a large volume of new business to the corporation division of the Secretary of State's Department liberalizes Missouri's incorporation laws to permit unlimited capital stock and perpetual charters. It requires only 10 per cent of the capital stock to be paid up instead of 50 per cent, as heretofore, and reduces the number of directors who must reside in Missouri from three to one.

Under the former law, Missouri corporations could not have a capital stock in excess of $50,000,000, and charters could not be issued for more than 50 years.

The small-loan act, known as the anti-loan shark bill, already has resulted in a large number of advance applications to the Secretary of State for charters, to be issued as soon as the act is effective. The department has estimated that at least 500 of the companies will incorporate in Missouri.

This law authorizes companies formed under it to make loans up to $300 at interest rates of 3½ per cent a month. This totals 42 per cent a year. Control of the companies is under the State Finance Commissioner, who is given authority to license the companies, regulate their practices, examine their books at least once a year and exercise general supervision.

Death Penalty for Highway Robbery.

Two bills by State Senator William Maffitt Bates of St. Louis and Representative Carl J. Henry of Butler carry severe penalties for persons convicted of highway robbery or other felonies, with the aid of a deadly weapon.

The Henry bill makes possible a maximum penalty of death for highway robbery with the aid of a deadly weapon, and increases the minimum sentence for this crime from five years imprisonment to 10 years.

The Bates bill carries mandatory increases in imprisonment for first and subsequent convictions of felonies, if a deadly weapon was used. It prescribes that whatever punishment is provided by the present law for a felony, shall, if the crime was committed with the aid of a deadly weapon, be increased by two years on first conviction, by 10 years on second conviction, by 15 years on third conviction, and shall be life imprisonment on a fourth conviction.

Organization of credit unions by seven or more persons, to be under the supervision of the Secretary of State, is authorized in the new laws. These credit unions may receive savings of members in payment for shares, make loans to members, and make investments in certain classes of securities. These organizations also are authorized to borrow funds, up to 25 per cent of their capital, surplus and reserve fund. Interest of one per cent a month may be charged on loans to members.

State Licenses Chiropractors.

Passing of the act creating a State Board of Chiropractic Examiners, and authorizing licensing of chiropractors, ended a long fight by the chiropractors in Missouri to gain legal recognition and end proscutions for practicing without medical licenses. Applicants for licenses are required to pass an examination and submit credentials showing attendance at a chiropractic school for not less than three terms of nine months each.

Requirements for issuance of a license by the State Board of Health to practice medicine are tightened up in the medical practices act. This act terminates a long fight by Christan Scientists for freedom from medical law requirements, as it exempts persons endeavoring to cure or prevent disease or suffering by spiritual means or prayer. The new law also permits reciprocity between Missouri and other States in licensing physicians.

Issuance or receiving of a fraudulent medical diploma or certificate of graduation made a misdemeanor under the new "diploma mill" law. It is designed to curb the sale of fraudulent medical diplomas to prospective applicants for physicians' licenses, exposed in Missouri several years ago.

Five New Banking Laws.

A series of five banking bills permits closer supervision of State banks and trust companies by the State Finance Department and clarifies some of the banking practices. These bills give the Commissioner discretionary power in chartering new banks and give banks fiduciary powers to handle trusts or estates under the same conditions as they now are handled by trust companies. They limit the amount a bank officer may borrow from his bank to 10 per cent of the capital and surplus and limit the loans to all officers of the bank to not more than 25 per cent of the capital and surplus.

These bills also require surety bonds of bank officers instead of personal bonds; increase the capital requirements in organizing new banks, graduated according to the size of the towns in which they are organized, increase the reserve requirements, and restrict the pledging of bank assets.

Boxing Is Legalized.

Ten-round no decision boxing or sparring bouts are authorized by the law creating a State Athletic Commission. Issuance of licenses to conduct bouts is restricted to patriotic, fraternal, benevolent or religious organizations. The Commission has full control over the sport and licensing of boxers, seconds, referees and others connected with the bouts.

A constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters of the State in the 1928 election fixes the pay of members of the Legislature at $500 a year, except in biennial periods, when revision sessions are held, when the pay would be $750 a year.

Among other new laws are the following:

Creating a new Bureau of Building and Loan Supervision, to take over supervision of building and loan associations, formerly under the finance Department.

Bringing towns and villages of less than 50,000 population under general law permitting zoning regulations, formerly restricted to cities of more than 50,000 population.

Providing free surgical and medical treatment and hospital care for deformed children at the hospital of the University of Missouri at Columbia, upon approval by the County Court of the County in which the child resides.

Establishing county highway commission in each county, with authority to lay out, construct and maintain a county highway system of not to exceed 100 miles, with local funds, connecting with State highways.

Limiting expense accounts of State officials and employes to amounts fixed by their department heads as "just and reasonable," and requiring department heads to issue authorizations for travel. The law requires sub-vouchers for all expenditures in excess of $1.

Authorizing erection of separate office building at Jefferson City for State highway department, and appropriating $350,000 from the road fund for site and building.

Income Tax Law Amended.

Amending State income tax law to eliminate former requirement that corporations and individuals in Missouri must pay tax on all of net income earned outside State as well as in Missouri. The new law imposes tax only on the income earned in Missouri. The law also requires all corporations to furnish the State Auditor by Feb. 1 of each year with a list of all employes receiving $1000 or more in salary during preceding year.

Fixing March 15 of each year as date for filing State income tax return, instead of March 1, to conform to date for filing Federal returns.

Authorizing construction of an intermediate reformatory by the State Penal Board for first offenders. Due to clerical errors a section of the penal appropriation bill setting aside $500,000 for construction was not enrolled and was omitted from the law. The construction is authorized under the law but no funds are available.

Consolidating the State Labor Bureau and Industrial Inspection Department into the new Department of Labor and Industrial Inspection.

Authorizing the city of St. Louis to deposit up to $2,000,000 in a bank selected as a city depository, instead of the former maximum of $1,000,000.

Requiring instruction on the State and United States Constitutions in public and private schools and State educational institutions.

Two bills authorizing county courts to set aside five per cent of the county revenue fund for purchasing and maintaining public parks, and authorizing cities of the fourth class to vote bonds for public parks.

Legalizing the deposit of State automobile license fee collections, at branch registration offices, by the Secretary of State in banks designated by him, until money can be transmitted to the State Treasurer.

Junior Colleges Authorized.

Authorizing establishment of junior colleges by boards of education, such colleges being entitled to share in apportionment of State public school funds.

Establishing State inspection of bee hives, and providing for appointment of State apiarist and deputies.

Authorizing establishment of game and fish preserves on private property, by Game and Fish Department, through agreement with owners.

Repealing law prohibiting shooting of doves and establishing open season for shooting them, from Sept. 1 to Dec. 15 of each year.

Giving Assistant Chief of Detectives in St. Louis the rank of captain. He now reecives the pay of a captain, but has the rank of a lieutenant.

Authorizing judges of courts with jurisdiction over juveniles to transfer a case to a court with criminal jurisdiction, for prosecution under the general law. This would permit prosecution of youthful bandits in criminal courts.

Repealing law passed in 1925 establishing State licensing and regulation of cosmeticians and beauty shops.

Fixing salaries of two associate prosecuting attorneys in St. Louis at $3500 a year and two assistants at $3000 a year.

Increasing salaries of five assistant Circuit Attorneys in St. Louis from $3600 a year to $4200 a year.

Changing open season for kiling squirrels from June 1-Dec. 31, to July 1-Nov. 30.

New Laws Already Effective.

Among the laws already in effect, due to emergency clauses, are the following:

Extending time for filing claims for State bonus for World War service, which had expired, to Dec. 31, 1929.

Amending State inheritance tax law to permit the State to levy tax up to 80 per cent of the Federal inheritance tax, under a Federal law which permits an estate to deduct up to 80 per cent of Federal tax for State inheritance taxes paid. This involves no increase for the estate, but gives the State part of the tax that formerly went to the Federal Government.

Re-enacting laws creating commissions for Supreme Court and St. Louis Court of Appeals, and creating new commission of two members for the Kansas City Court of Appeals.

Re-enacting St. Louis County registration law to correct a defect in the title. St. Louis County laws on appointment of Deputy Sheriffs and members of Jury Commission were re-enacted for the same reason.

Requiring promoters of subdivisions in counties such as St. Louis county engineer. The law requires streets and grades in platting subdivisions, and requiring approval of county engineer. The law requires filing of plat with Recorder of Deeds before any lots are sold.

Ralph law for organization of sewer districts in St. Louis County and issuance of bonds by districts to build sewers. A suit testing constitutionality of this law now is pending in Supreme Court.

Authorizing construction of "hard-boiled prison" within the walls of the State Penitentiary, for segregation of hardened criminals.

Giving the State Oil Inspector additional powers to enforce State gasoline tax law.

Printing of the 1927 session acts was completed last week and the volumes are being distributed by Secretary of State Becker.

By MARGARET ALLEN RUHL,
Society Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

HARBOR POINT, Mich.

THE opening dinner dance at the Harbor Point Club will be the first function of note on the slender peninsula extending into Little Traverse Bay, known as Harbor Point. It is exclusively a colony of summer homes. No business houses mar its beauty, and the exclusion of automobiles at its gateway affords protection for the children who romp on its sand beaches. Well-kept lawns and shrubs distinguish it, and its homes are unusually attractive.

A few St. Louisans have arrived. Mrs. H. Wheeler Bond and her daughters, Miss Mary Scudder Bond and Miss Isabelle Bond, are in their cottage, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex G. Cochran of Westmoreland place were among the early arrivals.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias S. Gatch have opened their home, and have with them their daughter, Mrs. Lockwood Hill; her son, Stuart Gatch Hill, and a younger child, who arrived June 25, and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson B. Gatch, with their daughter, Miss Olive Gatch, and their son.

Mrs. Harold T. Jolley, formerly Miss Elizabeth Kennard, is at her cottage with Miss Mary Lees Kennard.

Society to Celebrate Holiday With Special Programs at Clubs

THE Fourth of July will be celebrated by members of society at informal parties given by those who have country places and at a few more elaborate affairs at the various country clubs. The attention of the pleasure seekers will be turned almost entirely to out-of-door festivities and golf tournaments, tennis matches and swimming contests have been arranged as part of the programs.

The members of the St. Louis Country Club will gather for a buffet supper this evening, and there will be dancing on the terrace Monday evening from 5 to 9 o'clock. As part of the celebration of the Fourth of July holidays a dinner dance was held last evening on the terrace. The golf course, the tennis courts and the swimming pool at the St. Louis Country Club will claim the attention of many of its members.

The Algonquin Country Club will hold a general celebration that will include fireworks and a band concert on the lawn.

NORTH SHORE, Mass., July 2.

WITH commencement activities, and the Harvard-Yale boat races over, the North Shore folk have settled into the routine of summer social activities at the clubs and cottages. The Fourth coming on Monday has made a delightful week-end holiday which has brought many guests to the Shore.

Mrs. Frederick C. Lake Sr. Mrs. Nettie Jacob, with her sisters, Mrs. Frank Low and Mrs. R. C. Dobson, will occupy their cottage, as will Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Schafly.

WEQUETONSING, Mich.

The Wequetonsing Golf Association, which boasts of the finest links in Northern Michigan, forms the center of interest for those who favor this attractive semicircular strip of lake frontage as the ideal summer resort. For those who do not play, there are frequent bridge parties, for much of the St. Louis element has been coming here for several years, and the close friendships existing in this group have made informal afternoon games an interesting diversion. For the younger set there are dinner parties at Julierets, a favorite resort at Harbor Springs, nearby.

A number of St. Louisans have already opened their summer home, while others have deferred their arrival until after July 4.

Mr. Gerard B. Allen has leased a cottage and will have his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Loisel Papin, with their small son, Pierre Loisel Jr., for the month of August. CHARLEVOIX, Mich.

Built high on the grassy slopes surrounding Round Lake, with Lake Charlevoix at one side and Lake Michigan at the other, Charlevoix, known over the State as "Charlevoix the Beautiful," is making extensive plans for the coming season. Golf at the new Belvedere Club, and boat racing, presage a brilliant season. The St. Louis contingent, larger here than at any of the Michigan resorts, is assembling rapidly. Cottages, boarded up through the winter, are being opened, and the verandas present a gay appearance, with colorful flower boxes and chintz-covered furniture.

The R. Vernon Clark cottage near the Belvedere Hotel is open, and Mr. and Mrs. Clark's daughter, Miss Alma Clark, and their son, Richard, were here for several days awaiting their parents, who arrived Tuesday after a lake trip with James E. Taussig, president of the Wabash Railroad. They went to Toledo in Mr. Taussig's private car and by boat through the Great Lakes. In the party were Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Leland of Windemere place, who also are here occupying their cottage. Mr. and Mrs. Clark's daughter, Miss Elizabeth, will arrive Tuesday from Roslyn, L. I., after a visit with Miss Eleanor Hutton. GRAND HAVEN, Mich.

The vanguard of the St. Louis colony at Highland Park, the most popular Grand Haven resort for that group of summer cottagers, is slowly wending its way northward, and, although later this year than usual, the season will be in full swing within a fortnight. Just now, with but few cottages open, an army of painters is at work freshening porches and steps for the summer until an observer, looking up from a broad beach on Lake Michigan, is impressed by the sloping green hillside with its touches of color, and the names of the various homes on odd-shaped signs attached to pillars and balustrades.

"Ridgewood Cottage," the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Brenton Van Cleave of Kingsbury place, is open, and is being occupied at present by their young daughter, Betty. Mr. and Mrs. Van Cleave will join her in a few days. Their son, Wallace, is at Camp Sheboygan for the season.

They will have as their guest Mrs. Donald Livingston.

The Spring Lake Country Club near Grand Haven has opened, and its dances and fortnightly bridge parties will afford St. Louisans much entertainment, and in addition informal evening dancing parties are given at the "Barn," a popular resort in town.

FISH CREEK, Wis.

The St. Louisans at this picturesque resort, built in a cozy U-shaped harbor of Green Bay, have done much to add to its beauty. Their summer homes dot the shore line, known as Sunset Beach, with stone paths leading down terraced lawns to the water's edge. Sail boats glisten in the bay, and a wooded background is broken by a crooked turn in the road known as Hair Pin Bend.

EPHRIAM, Wis.

Peninsula State Park, jutting into Green Bay, government owned except for a few private homes, is the center of interest at Ephraim. Its Golf Club is the favorite gathering place for both Fish Creek and Ephraim. On the peninsula several St. Louisans have their summer homes. Dr. and Mrs. Vilray P. Blair are occupying their cottage, surrounded by an orchard, characteristic of this part of Michigan, known as the fruit belt.

Mr. and Mrs. Wells L. Church, of Linden avenue, Clayton, have a house of logs and with them are their children, Miss Betty, George and Buddy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Plant of Webster Groves and Dr. and Mrs. Fred W. Bailey each have homes and will spend part of the season here.

A Yacht Club in Ephraim, with its dock extending several hundred feet into the bay affords additional amusement, and a number of St. Louisans will sail craft in the races to be run as part of the season's activities.

Paris Police Must Learn to Drive

PARIS, July 2.—Traffic policemen of Paris who tell automobile drivers what they must do, must themselves know something of driving. The new Prefect of Police, Jean Chiappe, recently ordered traffic officers to learn to drive, so that they will realize that drivers also have troubles, and will treat them accordingly.

BIRTH STATISTICS IN MISSOURI SOUGHT

Cards to be Sent Out in Effort to Obtain Complete Registration.

To obtain an accurate check on all births in the State since January 1, cards will be sent by the Government to all householders within the next few days. These cards, which require no postage, are to be filled out by the recipient, stating whether or not a birth has occurred at that address during the present year. The cards will be sent out from virtually every postoffice in the State. About 300,000 will be sent to St. Louis residents.

The importance of filling out and returning the cards promptly is emphasized by Dr. James Stewart, State Health Commissioner and secretary of the State Board of Health. This move is part of a campaign to obtain complete registration of births in Missouri and thus admit the state to official national standing in the matter of birth statistics.

State's Records Not Accepted.

At present, Missouri has no such official standing, although all adjacent states, including Tennessee and Arkansas, are able to furnish statistics recognized by the Government. This State's records are not accepted, because heretofore means have not existed for making them accurate and complete. The last official Government check on births two years ago, showed Missouri's records were only 85 per cent complete, whereas a showing of 95 per cent is required for official recognition. In the check three years earlier, Missouri was able to show no better than 65 per cent. It was said that faulty records in St. Louis and Kansas City were the cause.

A section of the State law requires, under penalty of fine, that certificates of all births be filed within 10 days by the attending physician or midwife, or, in the absence of these, by the parents, householder or owner of the premises on which such births occur.

Reasons for Registration.

The importance of compliance with this law is stressed by the Division of Vital Statistics of the State Board of Health which, on a printed form issued to householders, sets down outstanding reasons why births should be registered. They are as follows:

To prove legitimacy.

To prove legal age for: Inheritance of property; claims of widows and orphans; settlement of insurance; settlement of pensions; right to serve on jury; entrance to military service; entrance to school; right to vote; right to marry; driving automobile; employment in industries.

To prove American citizenship for: Passports; exemption from military service in foreign countries; nationality in foreign countries; rights of protection in foreign countries; right to hold certain offices; right of admission to certain professions; collection of compensation, and collection of bonus.

Questions affecting any one of these points, it is explained, may be settled definitely only by reference to the birth certificate of th persons involved.

GIRL, 4, PLAYING BY EAR WINS IN PIANO CONTEST

Honolulu Child Astounds Chicago Judge With Zach and Bethoven Selections.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, July 2.—A four-year-old girl, Dorothy Johnson, whose mother, Mrs. Florence Johnson, recently brought her here from Honolulu for a musical education, has astounded the teachers of the Chicago Musical College.

While a class of mature students gathered for a scholarship competition, with the judges behind a curtain, little Dorothy began playing Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata." There followed Bach's "Prelude in C Major" without the judges being aware that any but the mature pianists was the instrument.

When the prizes were awarded one of the winners—little Dorothy—was not present. She was summoned.

Dorothy's mother is a music teacher, but had given her daughter little instruction and said the child simply picked up the compositions, about 30 in number, by hearing them.

AMERICAN TRADE WITH CHINA $104,000,000 IN 4 MONTHS

Purchases Lead Those of Japan by 50 Per Cent; British Total Shows Loss.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, July 2.—American trade with China for the first four months of 1927 led that of all nations for the first time in history, it is shown by figures compiled by Julean Arnold, American Commercial Attache. The total was $104,000,000, as compared with $101,000,000 for the corresponding period last year, a gain of 3 per cent.

While the United States made a gain of 8 per cent for the first quarter of the year, Great Britain suffered a loss of 17 per cent and Japan of 25 per cent.

America is China's best customer," Arnold said. "Purchases in the first four months were 50 per cent above the next buyer, Japan."

The estimates include the British colony of Hongkong.

Clarence Darrow, Humanitarian

An Intimate Picture of America's Famous Lawyer-Philosopher at the Age of 70

Staff Writer for the Post-Dispatch.
CHICAGO, July 2.

TO be wise, to be brave, to have compassion—whether this is called greatness, or merely humanity, will not matter. "Greatness" and "humanity" are only words, and may mean much, little, or nothing, depending on who uses them.

Clarence Darrow has the wisdom which realizes how little is known, or can be known, about existence. He has the effortless courage of one who hopes but little and fears not at all. He has the compassion which understands human frailties without despising human beings.

Controversy follows him as dust follows a cyclone, and causes him about the same concern. No eulogy would satisfy his partisans; no criticism would appease his critics. Neither eulogy nor criticism would describe him. In approaching the study of his character, the student can do no better than adopt Darrow's own rule:

"It is not for the philosopher to bestow praise or assign blame, but only to seek and recognize the truth. For every effect there was somewhere a sufficient cause. Things happen. The wise man endeavors to understand why and how."

At the age of 70, when most men are well content to rest from arduous labors long drawn out, Darrow remains one of the most pungent and vigorous forces in the intellectual life of the country and one of the most interesting men alive. Stubbornly his appearance has resisted the advance of years. Although a little bent, his ungainly frame is rugged and strong. The uncut hair which straggles over his ears and strays down his forehead is youthfully dark, and his gray eyes are keen and cynical. His voice still rises to strident heights. A thousand wrinkles proclaim wisdom and experience, not decay.

Gloomy, Blunt, Sardonic, and With a Mocking Grin

Today he is the same grim, shambling figure as of yore, clad, it might be, in the same cheap and wrinkled suit, the inevitable soft collar and the humble wash tie. Gloomy, blunt, sardonic, he ambles down the gantlet of life, with a grunt of contempt for respectability, but an eloquent plea for the outcast; perusing all religions and believing in none; scoffing at courts and winning his cases, and forever turning a mocking grin upon a world which he understands far better than it will ever understand him.

A sublime simplicity characterizes his mind. To a rare and terrible degree he has the gift of common sense. Pretense does not awe him; prestige does not impress him; clamor does not intimidate him. Through all the things which deceive and divert the average mind, he sees at once the simple, central truth. And what has been confusing suddenly becomes very clear.

This faculty, which often delights but sometimes dismays, asserts itself in many forms and under many circumstances. Frequently it assumes the shape of a quick and deadly wit, as, for example, when Darrow was cross-examining the late William J. Bryan during the historic evolution trial at Dayton, Tenn.

"Do you place a literal interpretation on that passage in Genesis which says that the snake was condemned to crawl forever on its belly as a punishment for having tempted Eve?" he inquired.

"I certainly do," was the prompt and firm response.

"Mr. Bryan," drawled Darrow, with a malevolent gleam, "just how do you suppose snakes traveled prior to that time?"

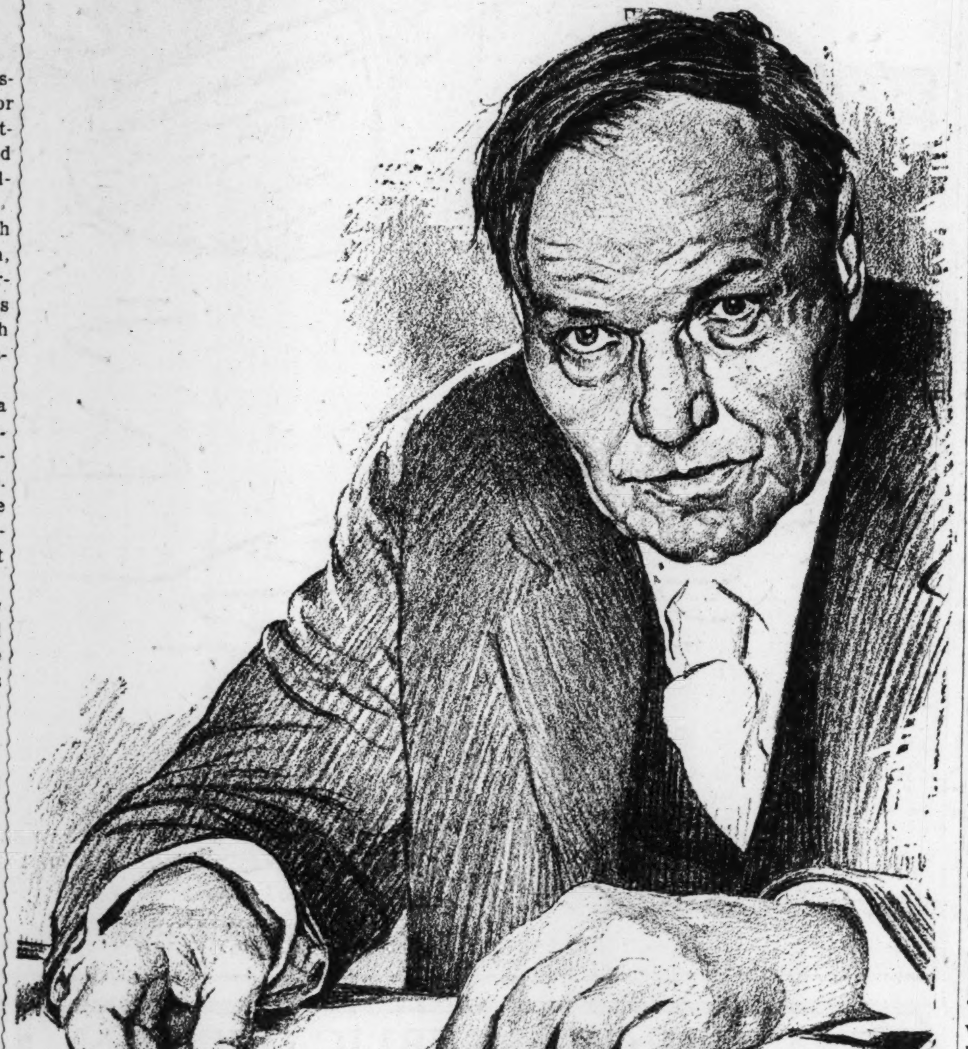
His Short, Searching Homily on Government

Or we may find him delivering a short and searching homily on government, such as the following:

"Most laws, and all good ones, grow out of the habits of the people. Through the centuries their folkways grow into customs, and finally are embodied in laws, so that most laws are simply a codification of the folkways. Hence a wise ruler studies the habits and customs of his people, and endeavors to fit laws and institutions to them. He realizes that fitting laws to men is like fitting clothes to men. I would be a poor tailor to cut off a customer's arm to make it fit the sleeve. Likewise, the attempt to make men fit laws is nearly always accompanied by oppression and violence. The man should always come first."

One of the most brilliant and amusing instances of Darrow's penetration, of his constant refusal to be buncoed, was given two years ago in an article on "The Edwardses and the Jukeses," which he contributed to The American Mercury.

For nearly 50 years believers in selective birth control as a means of eradicating crime had fortified their argument with the history of two families, one the descendants of Jonathan Edwards, the famous Puritan clergyman, and the other the descendants of Max Jukes, an uncouth mountaineer who was described as "a hunter and fisher, fond of hard drinking and carousing, and averse to steady work."



CLARENCE DARROW.

Investigations conducted in 1870 by Alfred Dugdale showed that of several hundred descendants of these two men then living, the Edwards family had produced an exceptionally large number of distinguished and useful citizens, while the Jukes descendants included an equally high percentage of criminals, misfits and paupers. The figures seem to make out such an overwhelming case for the importance of "good blood" that for several decades they were widely quoted, and the conclusion from them was seldom challenged. Then along came Darrow and his terrible common sense.

Environment Rather Than Heredity, His Conclusion

"As a rule," he said, "eugenists have treated the Edwards family as if the stock began with Jonathan. The popular idea seems to be that Jonathan was sent down from Heaven to originate a brand new line of 100 per cent pure germ plasm. I was often impressed with the story, but always there seemed something lacking. At last I discovered what it was: Jonathan Edwards had ancestors!"

Proceeding with a little investigation of his own, Darrow reported that the Rev. Jonathan was the grandson of Richard and Elizabeth Tuttle Edwards. Moreover, he found that Richard had six children by a second wife, none of whose descendants apparently ever rose above mediocrity. This, Darrow observed, seemed to prove that the real founder of the illustrious Edwards strain was Elizabeth Tuttle. Having established her title to that honor, he gave some facts concerning her.

Some time after she had given birth to Jonathan's father, Richard divorced her for infidelity "and other gross immoralities." One of her sisters was convicted of murdering her own child, and another murdered her brother.

Undoubtedly, he said, Max Jukes also had ancestors, and some place back along the line it was reasonable to assume a clergyman could be found among them.

"Not being a eugenist," Darrow dryly remarked, "I do not claim that the excellence of the Edwards strain, if it is excellent, can be attributed to the singular qualities of Elizabeth Tuttle and her family, any more than I would argue that the depravity of the Jukeses, if they were depraved, could be traced to the virtues of the 'Rev. Jukes.' I wish merely to point out how worthless such statistics are when used in this way."

If, he continued, anything was to be learned from a comparative study of the two families, it probably would be found in the

DARROW'S VIEWS OF LIFE

IN preparing the accompanying sketch, the writer submitted to Clarence Darrow a brief list of questions for the purpose of eliciting his views on certain interesting aspects of life. The questions and the thoroughly characteristic replies which Darrow made to them, follow:

1. What, in your opinion, is the worthiest idea which a man or woman can pursue in this world? Answer: "To lessen the pain and increase the happiness of the people who inhabit the world."

2. What do you consider your most important contribution to human welfare? Answer: "I do not consider that I have made any important contribution. The most important thing I am doing is to fight for tolerance and individual freedom."

3. What, in your opinion, is the most civilizing influence at work in the world today, and what is the most brutalizing influence? Answer: "Science is the most civilizing, greed and bigotry are the most brutalizing."

4. Is the democratic idea as strong in America today as it was when you came of age, and if not, why not? Answer: "It is not nearly as strong, due to the undermining influence of wealth and war."

5. How long do you estimate it will be before the human race becomes fairly civilized? Answer: "It depends so much upon what seems to be chance that I find it impossible to guess. War generally results in a reversion to barbarism. In fact, it is a reversion to barbarism. Still, no one can absolutely say that all wars are evil. Changing conditions and new ideas often lead to wars which sometimes destroy caste and result in higher civilization. Intolerance and superstition likewise come and go. There is no guarantee whatever that the world will not go back to medievalism. Human progress does not move in straight lines. It moves back and forth like the tides. All sorts of things influence civilization. With no unusual disasters, the next 500 years might produce some important results in the direction of civilization. Still, real civilization depends largely on the human structure, and this probably does not change."

6. Is life worth living? Answer: "Whether it is worth living or not depends in the case of each individual upon the balance between painful and pleasurable emotions in each individual's life. All sorts of physical and mental conditions enter into the question. Obviously it is not worth living for some individuals. It may be for others. However, I am no optimist."

Ambassador Houghton Suggests That Power to Vote War Be Placed In Hands of Plain People of Nations

American Envoy to Court of St. James, Speaking for Himself Alone at Harvard University, Broaches New Plan for Safeguarding International Peace and Checking Possibly Selfish Motives of Small-Group Governments Steeped in Politics and Traditions.

Speech Creates Sensation, Being Read With Particular Interest in England and France—Says Self-Governing Citizens Must Undertake Experiment in Democratic Rule and Extend Right of Suffrage into International Affairs.

ALANSON B. HOUGHTON, Ambassador to the Court of St. James, spoke at the 1927 commencement exercises at Harvard University, his alma mater. What he said caused a sensation. A formal address in the diplomatic tradition had been expected, but he delivered anything but that. In direct speech, he broached a new plan for the prevention of war. War should be declared, he said, only after a majority vote of all persons competent to cast a ballot. He would make the vote international among the peoples involved.

His address, Mr. Houghton said, was not official. He began by saying that he spoke "for myself alone." Delivered more than a week ago in Cambridge, the address has meanwhile gone around the world, being read with particular interest in England and in France. It follows in full:

I WANT to talk to you a little while today about peace. What I have in mind to suggest, briefly, is certain considerations which would seem to indicate, if a more durable peace between them is desired, that the great self-governing people must undertake a new experiment in democratic government and extend the right of suffrage into international affairs. You understand, of course, that I am speaking for myself alone. What I shall say must not in any way be accepted as the position of my Government. I can only hope, however, that if nowhere else, it will find some approval among those tens of millions of plain American men and women who want a durable peace and who are eager and willing to co-operate with other peoples to create a durable peace, provided always that in so doing they are not asked to violate their own instinctive and fundamental political ideals and beliefs.

The difficulty of promoting a peace by agreement among the great self-governing powers roots in the fact that those charged with political authority assume the inevitability of war. They are ready to agree that peace is desirable and that war is a frightful, expensive and irrational method of settling international disputes. In view of human experience, however, they see no other alternative. They are compelled, they say, to take human facts as they find them. And deep down in human nature they find racial and national instincts and prejudices which, when appealed to, have hitherto always resulted in a war spirit. They see no reason to believe that any other result may be expected in any future useful now to contemplate.

War Does Not Originate in a Sudden Impulse

Whatever else may be said to substantiate such a view of the ultimate relations between the self-governing nations, it plainly does not conform exactly to historical fact. War does not originate from time to time simply in a sudden and uncontrollable impulse on the part of one of these great national masses to go out and slaughter another. War is possible, no doubt, because these masses are willing, under conditions, to fight.

But these conditions are themselves an integral part of the problem. Before a war is conceivable, there must be an issue. And that issue, broadly speaking, is the outcome of a series of maneuvers by which the masses concerned are brought into positions of opposition. Obviously this maneuvering is not done by the masses themselves. Collectively and as individuals they have little, if anything to do with the subtle and gradual shifting of international relationships. Their interests are directed to the more humble and prosaic task of earning a living.

The maneuvering is done by little groups of men called governments. These little groups seek constantly and naturally to gain supposed advantages of one sort and another for their own nationals. Out of their efforts to enlarge or to strengthen or to maintain the interests entrusted to their charge, the masses they represent are gradually maneuvered into positions which, to say the least, cannot easily be surrendered.

If the process continues, sooner or later a situation arises in which an agreement between these small groups becomes impossible. Then, on the ground that their lives and families and property are somehow involved and endangered, these great masses of men and women, roused by every power of organized appeal and propaganda, are ordered under arms, and war follows.

STRIKING POINTS SOUNDED BY AMBASSADOR HOUGHTON FOR THE ENDING OF WARS

OUR governments have shown themselves unable to protect us against war. They continue to act along well-defined grooves and in accordance with the dictates of a political theory which exalts nationalism and relies frankly on the use of force.

If the danger of war is to be lessened, a sufficient measure of control, it seems to me, can be obtained only when the self-governing peoples definitely and constitutionally take the decision into their own hands.

Before a war is conceivable, there must be an issue. And that issue, broadly speaking, is the outcome of a series of maneuvers, by which the masses concerned are brought into positions of opposition. The maneuvering is done by little groups of men called "governments."

....the great self-governing peoples must undertake a new experiment in democratic government and extend the right of suffrage into international affairs....

Smaller Groups Rule and Masses Obey

The entire process is in control of the smaller groups. They make the issue. They declare the war. The masses they control simply obey. Having put this power, or left this power in the hands of their governments, they find themselves at the critical moment, substantially helpless. And so as individuals, they merely accept the decision and go out to pay the bills of war with their bodies and perhaps with their souls in the hope that, if not they, then those who come after them may reap a benefit in some measure proportionate to its cost. And even the very men, through whose instrumentality, consciously or unconsciously, this dreadful catastrophe has been brought about, explain it on the ground that human nature being what it is, any other determination was impossible—and will be, either now or hereafter.

Now war may be in fact the inevitable result of a serious clash of national interests. It is possible that no method of reaching a peaceful settlement can be devised. But certainly we have no reason to base that assumed failure upon some inherent weakness of human nature. That simply begs the question. War can be said to be inevitable only if we assume, first, that the conditions which from time to time have led to war were themselves the result of a process of necessity, and, second, that the conditions under which men have been brought to fight in times past were, in fact, those precise conditions under which they would have fought if given a choice.

Neither of these assumptions can possibly be maintained. It is conceivable, to say the least, that, considering the cost, the great masses of human beings involved might have preferred some other method of settling any particular dispute. And we know that the conditions which hitherto have led to war are the result of human volition and deliberate choice—not of the populations involved, but of their governments.

Even if we admit, as perhaps we must, that as long as governments possess the power, first to create conditions which ultimately result in a clash of national interest, and, second, by declaring war, to force those issues to a test of armed strength—even if we admit, under the circumstances, that history will merely repeat itself and war more or less inevitably follow, we have no reason to admit that a similar result would follow if the power to declare war were in the hands of the populations. That is precisely what we do not know. The experiment has never been tried. And there are considerations which, apparently, point the other way.

Self-Governing Peoples Competent Managers

First, the great self-governing peoples have shown themselves competent to manage their domestic affairs. Foreign affairs are merely an extension of domestic affairs. There is nothing mysterious about them. They are not a sort of arcana, wherein the laws of common morality are excluded and in which only cynical gentlemen of bilingual attainments are competent to play a role. They are in the main simply the natural and beneficial outcome of a desire to trade. They become potentially dangerous only when men who temporarily possess power undertake, for a supposed national advantage, to infringe either the liberties or the possession of a neighboring people. Then they become very dangerous indeed.

But insofar, at least, as the great self-governing peoples are concerned, does a sound foreign policy now necessitate either? Or is such an effort as likely to grow out of great masses of men and women, whose interests lie primarily in peace as out of small groups of men who think, perhaps, they can better the relations between them and, sometimes as history has shown us, are willing to take a chance? It is conceivable, indeed, that what men call "national destiny" might safely be left to work itself out more slowly and in its own way, and without quite so much conscious aid and direction.

Second, war has steadily increased its demand. Once it could be waged with profit. Now no gain can equal its cost. Once it could be waged by a relatively small proportion of the population involved. Now it embraces all. Men and women alike must contribute to its will to destroy. Its proportions have become so formidable and its demands and consequences so ruinous that it threatens to wreck civilization itself. For the wars of the civilized mean the breakdown of civilization.

Whatever may be said regarding war in the past, whatever advantages may have come of it, whatever good it may have accomplished, today the situation is radically changed. This new democratic era into which we are entering wherein production is becoming more and more a world process and in which the relations of each one of us is becoming more and more vitally dependent upon others cannot withstand the shock and dislocation and waste of war as easily as societies more primitively organized. Some check upon the use of this method must be found.

Race to Arm Makes Each Nation More Dangerous

Third, while the fundamental relations between peoples are based as at present, frankly and openly upon force, fear of attack becomes a natural and dominant consideration within each national group. Out of that fear springs, as a matter of course, the desire to increase armaments which, except for use against each other, are largely unnecessary. Each arms for defense, and each thus becomes potentially more able to attack and so more dangerous as a neighbor.

What we do not always realize is that fear in this sense is fear of the concentrated power in the hands of governments to make war almost overnight. Such fear could not exist if the war-making power were diffused among a whole people. The tension would necessarily lessen. Time would be required before that power could again be focused. And time is the greatest ally of peace.

But we may go even further. If this concentrated power, now in the hands of little groups of men called governments, were in fact diffused among their peoples, we may safely assert that they would be less inclined than now to develop situations out of which war might easily emerge. They could not be sure of their ability to carry such questionable plans through to completion. The mere fact that they had so managed a nation's business as to lead it to a dangerous crisis would be their condemnation. A new set of forces, not hitherto available to prevent war, would come into active operation.

Fourth, the power to declare war stands on a different plane from all other powers of government. It is all-embracing and all-consuming. It subordinates all other powers to itself. It represents the highest act of sovereignty. It is the one power which of all others a self-governing people would logically reserve to itself since it puts in jeopardy their collective lives and property. And yet, strangely enough, it is the one power they do not possess. We create Governments primarily to protect our individual lives and property. To that end, we make laws and set up legislative safeguards, and if these prove unsatisfactory, we change them.

It is only when all our lives and all our properties are suddenly involved in a great and supreme decision affecting peace or war that we cease to be self-governing. We ac-

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress or reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent: never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Our Benevolent Imperialism.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN consonance with your admirable platform of "fighting the demagogues of both parties" and, in these days of universal suffrage (may I add?) of both sexes, I desire to run over one of the familiar "Ellen Winsor" letters that appeared in your columns of June 12. The writer of that letter ran over the history of the United States from its beginning to the present day and found it "bloodstained." This accusation is indicative of a certain tendency these days in which the extremists among the women's party partisans have invented for themselves an attitude which classifies them as a sacrosanct sect. They pull the cloak of feminine privilege over their arguments and indulge in a form of diatribe which has gone quite out of fashion among the men in politics, and the outcome is that the dilution of the electorate has resulted, as is apparent from this extraordinary letter, in the development of a class of women agitators who go to their neurasthenic emotions for their facts and to perverted history and twisted statistics for their bedlamite fancies.

None of these agitators believes that a Government has a right to protect itself at home or its nationals abroad. In the present instance we are expected to have goose flesh over our incomparably wicked attitude toward "China, Cuba, Porto Rica and Guam." One asks why drag in little Guam? A slip of the pen must have left out the Philippines. Now, as a matter of real fact, all we have done to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines is to exercise a humanitarian benevolence that is involved, among other things, in the sacrificing of our most distinguished scientists in the matter of yellow fever for instance, in an effort to give these islands a freedom from the incidence of disease and a protection which has raised them to a position of prosperity and comfort unknown in their more barbarous Spanish-ridden days. Aside from all these humanitarian things, such a great institution as the Rockefeller Institute has been engaged in putting American human effort and American millions at the benefit of all Central and South America also, in preventing these places becoming the plague spots of the Western Hemisphere, and with great success. In that great welter of illiterate superstition and the worst of Oriental civilizations known as China, we have also carried, through the Rockefeller Institute, the benefits of healing and enlightened science which is gradually spreading throughout such of the provinces as are only too glad to avail themselves of our amazing Samaritanism. In the matter of politics in China, we have leaned backwards for years endeavoring to help the Chinese people and deal with them justly in a situation which the most profound students of Chinese affairs admit is indescribable confusion and the solution of which no one can anticipate or prophesy, since the Civil War, complicated by the rule of cold-blooded satraps who care nothing for human life or the simplest rights of the masses of the people, is not a war between two groups but many groups under conditions of lawlessness which it is almost impossible to describe in ordinary words.

If the Winsors had their way, the world would return to the barbarity of the Dark Ages or the Oriental despotisms of 1000 B. C., when a stranger only had to come within the bounds of any given state to be murdered per se. But it is useless to waste history or fact upon hysteria save insofar that being public, instead of being confined to institutions, it assumes the right to stampede the country for ideas which, when examined, belong to the land of illusions and delusions and asks the privilege for femininity to express itself without reason or sense as the primary basis for the vicious propaganda.

Keep Historic Street Names.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is to the old residents and property owners on Natural Bridge road—particularly in St. Louis County—the proposition should be put to change the name of the road to that of "Lindbergh Flight." And it is a matter of grave doubt if they will welcome the suggestion with any great enthusiasm.

Much as we love and honor young Col. Lindbergh for his unprecedented feat of valor, and the even more extraordinary fineness and strength of character he has since displayed on every occasion—why tear up a good old name, because it "does not mean anything" (to some people), and supplant it with a new title, which, to say the least, would be equally misleading, as Lindbergh's "Flight" (the part of it that counted!) had little in common with the Natural Bridge road?

As a resident of Normandy for quite a few years past, I can assure you that the "old-timers" here are greatly attached to the names Normandy and Natural Bridge road (which mean a great deal to them) and are viewing with a hostile and jealous eye any attempt to infringe on these historic titles, handed down from the days of the Hunts and Lucases and other equally well known pioneer settlers of this picturesque locality. So it is to be hoped we may be left in undisturbed possession of these dear reminders of the past.

BORAH AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Addressing the convention of the International Advertising Association at Denver, Senator Borah revealed the qualities that have raised him to eminence and the limitations that cloud his title to greatness.

With much of what he said thoughtful citizens will cordially agree and will rejoice that a public man of his influence can speak so straight from the shoulder.

Our own problems and obligations, he asserted, challenge our entire wealth and capacity. He sketched an inspiring program of conservation. First of all, we should put an end to the waste of our great natural resources—oil, coal, timber and water power. Along with the prevention of waste we should have a resolute policy against the exploitation of those resources by ruthless private interests. This tremendous heritage bestowed upon us by the bounty of nature should be safeguarded by the Government as the people's responsible trustee.

"Common sense and the most ordinary tenets of humanity," the speaker declared, "insist that our rivers shall no longer be a menace to millions of our countrymen." Mr. Borah detects signs indicating that the project of making our rivers safe and serviceable is again to be bungled by the "old, piecemeal, procrastinating, political method," concerning which he rightly says that "nothing could be more unfortunate or in the end more expensive."

So far so good. But when he looks beyond our frontiers the Idaho Senator is parochially minded. Europe, as he sees it, is hopeless. Conditions there during the last month are essentially the same as they were immediately preceding the outbreak of the World War. The Warsaw assassination is another Serajevo. In Rome Mussolini rattles the saber which once flashed in the hands that now toy nervelessly with empty baubles at Doorn. Poincare desecrates a Sabbath afternoon with a song of hate. The League of Nations meets in an atmosphere of strife and suspicion. All the money we have sent to Europe by way of loans and gifts and cancellation of debts has been wasted. Far better for us to keep every dollar at home and spend it here in developing markets superior in every way to the phantom trade we are seeking elsewhere.

What a counsel of despair issues from this creed of utter isolationism! What inconceivable wretchedness would befall the world if the United States should divorce itself from other nations, as Mr. Borah advises! What were Europe's plight today except for the money Americans have invested there! What of our other investments in Europe? The Dawes plan, for example? An economic device, to be sure, and vitalized and maintained by American money, but primarily an investment of American capacity, vision and good will. Would Mr. Borah erase that from the calendar? Would he erase the Washington conference which he himself in reality fathered? If he would then there had been no Locarno; no day of welcome at Geneva from the League of Nations to Germany; no Stresemann to put to shame the rantings of Poincare and to speak a courageous yet sincerely friendly reprimand to Moscow.

Mr. Borah seems unable to think internationally. He fails terribly to envisage the struggle Europe is making for self-government. Thrones have toppled, Emperors have fled and Kings have been reduced to sorry figureheads, but the purple traditions of class rule still obtain and this period of transition to democracy is bedeviled by all the forces of special privilege, by the power and strategy of Big Business, which discovered and installed Mussolini—in a word by that implacable Toryism which has always been the adversary of fundamental human progress and justice and liberty.

We should like to see America grapple with her own problems and carve out her own future in the spirit of true democracy with which Mr. Borah's program is invested. But, as a nation that has come nearer to just, competent and honorable self-government than any other, the United States has obligations to other nations on which it cannot turn its back. Those obligations are in many respects idealistic, but at bottom they are grimly practical. Should another continental war ravage Europe can Mr. Borah say that the United States will not be dragged into it? That one question alone, looked at honestly and searchingly, commands us to play the part of a great nation in the world—play it sensibly, squarely and, on the whole, magnificently.

REVIVE THE WALSH RESOLUTION.

The Walsh resolution, which was lost in the Senate filibuster, contemplated Federal inquiry into the pyramiding of public utility stocks, despite the safeguard of public utility commissions and chiefly through the reproduction cost theory of valuation. Much of the high financing is done through holding companies under different state commissions.

The Walsh resolution should be revived and passed at the next session of Congress. The country needs for its own protection to know how public utility stocks are being handled, and only such a Federal inquiry as Senator Walsh proposes can give it this information. After all, the public is buying these stocks.

The rule of valuation tentatively laid down by the United States Supreme Court is not going to save them, because the court can hardly maintain its position in the face of opposition from the states. The Interstate Commerce Commission has already doomed that rule. The street railways utility in St. Louis is a good example of what this exploitation is coming to. It is quite capable of making money. There is no trouble about that. The trouble arises wholly from the efforts of speculators, chief of whom is Jake Newman, a Wall street operator, to use the utility for the purposes of high finance. It is for this reason that the utility asks a 30-year franchise. The same thing was true of the gas utility. It made good earnings upon the investment. It does not need the high valuation, for which it is asking, to make a good profit. It wants it to exploit the utility and to take millions out of it for financiers.

These operations do not necessarily mean higher rates. They sometimes do, but not always. The great danger, and the one which Senator Walsh had in mind when he introduced his resolution, is that the public may be loaded up with stocks which cannot make good. That danger is increasing every day. The Senate can render a great service to the people by instituting the inquiry which Senator Walsh suggests.

BYRD'S DREADFUL EXPERIENCE.

Some of the French Senators, in congratulating Byrd, said his flight was the more brilliant because of the elements. For 19 hours over the sea the America's crew flew in fog so thick they sometimes could not see where their wings ended. Still they sped unfalteringly eastward at a 100-mile an hour clip. It was when they reached land, however, that what Byrd describes as their agony commenced. Within easy striking distance of Le Bourget Field under normal conditions, they were compelled to cruise aimlessly and in circles for five hours in a night of impenetrable blackness and pouring rain.

No one but Byrd and his crew can visualize this experience perfectly. The compass had gone crazy and after a time the radio failed. No light could penetrate the heavy cloudbanks that lay between them and earth. The weather was probably as dirty as aviators ever experienced; certainly it was far worse than any encountered by Chamberlin, Lindbergh or Maitland. With the gasoline running out, a landing became imperative, and only by the merest chance did the America find itself on a bit of wild coast rather than over a town where a landing probably would have had fatal results.

The cruise of the America showed that flight over the Atlantic can be made under the worst weather conditions. All three motors worked beautifully all the way, and the ship itself was taut and airworthy. Once over the sea, however, the problem of landing presented seemingly insuperable difficulties, to which was added the baffling failure of radio and compass. These difficulties no doubt will be attacked vigorously.

We will some day have a fool-proof compass. We will also have some way of guiding an airplane to a safe landing through cloud banks and in darkness. Until these things are done, however, trans-Atlantic flying will be, again to use the words of the French, a marvelous and perilous adventure. Byrd and his men were fortunate to escape with their lives after their dreadful experience. But dreadful experiences are the fate of all pioneers, and the crew of the America are pioneers in the most lustrous meaning of the word.

A CHALLENGE, GIRLS.

Woman is today a commanding thesis, and justly so. Her progress in every avenue of endeavor and attainment has been phenomenal. And she is swinging along in firmer, finer strides, educationally, artistically, professionally, economically, athletically.

But whether the mysterious charm, the baffling lure, the inexpressible wonder of her are as potent as in the romantic days when she made poets of us all—well, what about it?

We don't know. What we do know is that the Prince of Wales was 33 years old the other day and is still a bachelor. There's a challenge. Girls, do your old, immemorial stuff.

NAVAL PARITY.

The announcement at Geneva of W. C. Bridgeman, First Lord of the British Admiralty, that Great Britain has never had any intention of disputing the right of the United States to complete equality with Britain in all types of warships is described by the Associated Press as "a new and decidedly hopeful development of the conference." Such a concession is a departure from England's traditional policy of maintaining the biggest navy so that "Brittania rules the waves" shall be a colossal fact as well as an imperial legend. But that surrender, if it may so be termed, was in effect made at the Washington conference when parity in capital ships was consummated in the famous 5-5-3 ratio. Such was the understanding of public opinion in the United States of that agreement, and, we believe, that was the interpretation of public opinion everywhere.

It is true, of course, that such expectation has not been realized in actual practice. And, as has been frequently stated, the failure of the Washington conference to extend this ratio to auxiliary craft—battle cruisers, light cruisers and the still lighter cruisers known as destroyers—together with the preponderance of Great Britain in those categories, is what prompted Mr. Coolidge to suggest the present Geneva conference.

An article on "Light Cruisers" in the current Saturday Evening Post by Rear Admiral T. P. Magruder of the United States Navy explains why Congress overrode the President in the program of authorized cruiser construction and stresses the need of the effort now making at Geneva to curtail naval competition and to restore a parity which has disappeared. The article describes the functions of all auxiliary craft in non-technical language and shows the decisive superiority of the British navy over the American navy. It is written in temperate spirit, with no earmarks of propaganda, but, apparently, for the purpose of presenting the facts intelligibly to the layman. The one controversial note in the discussion is the exception taken to Great Britain's contention for a large number of cruisers in order to protect her trade lines. According to this authority, the cruiser is primarily a warship whose potency has been augmented by the numerical limitation which the Washington conference placed on battleships. This premise is convincingly established by a recital of what the cruiser did in the World War. Protection of commerce, it is implied, could be accomplished by a different type of craft.

The Post-Dispatch cannot share the optimism occasioned by the announcement of the First Lord of the British Admiralty on the matter of Anglo-American naval parity. If such parity is to be effected by a big building program on our part the Geneva parley will be a failure. If, on the contrary, Great Britain is willing to scrap her auxiliary craft to achieve parity as the United States did in the costly sacrifice of her capital ships, then there will be cause for rejoicing.

Meantime, the cheers may prudently be withheld. The spirit of peace has yet to win its victory at Geneva.

HARD TO ANCHOR.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

NOT A YAP!

From The Baltimore Evening Sun.

PRIDE of Americans in their own, their native land is, generally speaking, a hard, horny thing as difficult to dent as the crust of an armadillo. It has survived many hard knocks ranging in intensity from Tom Heflin to the Sacco-Vanzetti case. Not even time could make it stale nor the Ku Klux Klan make it wither. Americans have held their heads high and their estimates of the rest of the world low in spite of everything.

But now comes a test more severe than anything yet. If it survives this nothing can crack the armor of our self-adoration. And here it is: Our very own Immigration Bureau announces that not a single, solitary inhabitant of the Island of Yap came hither last year to make this land of the proud his happy home.

Think of it! From New England's rock-bound coast to the Golden Gate; from the northern to the southern limits of prohibition there is nothing that can induce a Yap to leave his two-by-four island. And we are they who have been accustomed to stand on our hind legs and warble "My Country 'Tis of Thee," with a deep and welling pity for the benighted inhabitants of Europe, Asia, Africa and the islands of the sea.

To be sure, no immigrants came to this glorious land from Muscat, Nauru, Ruanda or French Togoland, but let that pass. We can feel no slight originating in places that might as well not be on the map for all we know about them. But Yap! That flea-bitten place we know about. It is just big enough for diplomats to scrap over, and they did back in 1921, with fervor and enthusiasm. It is doubtful if anybody remembers what the hullabaloo was all about at this late date and yet—oh, heck! Yap!

It is just one of those annoying things that gets under the epidermis and stays there. How can we strut our stuff in the hotel lobbies of Europe when we know and we are snubbed by Yaps? They have done us dirt, no doubt about that, and we don't know why unless they think we have enough yaps over here now.

"FLYING FANNIES."

From The Los Angeles Times.

JOURNALS of various large cities all over the country report an increasing number of feminine speed law violators. As a rule women exert greater caution in driving a motor car than the average man, but when a girl driver steps on the gas she sometimes does so in a way that makes her car fly like the wind, and it is seen as a mere streak upon the landscape. In this city and vicinity there are certain young women who have been halted time and again by motor policemen and summoned into court, but some of them seem to learn no lesson of moderation from their experience with police and magistrates. These "Flying Fannies," as they have been termed, are, of course, by no means as numerous as the speeders of the sterner sex, though this may be for the reason that not so many women as men drive cars. For the most part they belong to a lively class that loves the excitement of a wild dash along street or highway, but occasionally one is found who has little idea of the rate at which she is tearing off the miles and is surprised when told of her excess speed. With a smoothly running, high-powered motor at her command an impulsive young woman can press the gas pedal with her dainty, high-heeled shoe to terrific purpose and may easily develop the same craze for high speed that has brought many a man to grief. But, like her brother motorist, who thinks to gain something by his mad haste, she will find that counting the time lost in court and in accidents, to say nothing of life, limb or property loss, there is no profit whatever in the pace which passeth all understanding.

MUSKRATS AND THE FLOOD.

From The Buffalo Courier-Express.

AT first thought it might be assumed that there can be no possible connection between the flood which has devastated the Mississippi Valley and fur coats.

If, however, one knows that 55 per cent of the fur used by the garment trade of the United States comes from Louisiana muskrats he realizes at once that the Mississippi Valley flood has a direct connection with the fur coat.

The otter, the mink, the beaver, the raccoon and the possum also have their habitat in Louisiana. In quantity production the fur crop of that State is almost twice that of Canada, nearly 15 times that of Alaska and greater by hundreds of thousands of pelts than that of any other section of the country. The annual muskrat pelt crop is worth $5,000,000 to that State. A good deal of the wild life of that section is thought to have taken care of itself, but experts fear that muskrat casualties will run as high as 50 per cent. This notwithstanding the efforts which have been made by trappers to provide the little fellows with means for saving themselves in the flooded districts. The intimate relation between the Mississippi Valley flood and the fur coat should now be apparent.

In the history of Amer- ustice no man has been such ful foe of the noose and air. He has made this fight out of a profound conviction that capital punishment is barbarous, futile and indefensible. This is what he says of it:

"Advocates of capital punishment contend that it is necessary to deter others from crime. If that is true, executions should be made as public as possible. Long ago men were hanged on a high hill for picking pockets, and people came for miles around to see them hanged. But it was noticed that on the way home more people were killed and more pockets were picked than on any other occasion, and people began to understand the power of suggestion ,and the brutalizing effect of the spectacle.

"The advocates of capital punishment do not believe their own argument. Instead of urging public executions, they make them as private as possible, and are even arguing that the newspapers should not print the facts. Nothing could be more absurd than to claim that the spectacle of the State taking a life will teach individuals to respect life."

Darrow's career as a defender of persons accused of crime, especially during the last 20 years, has been singular in one respect. Each case has been to him not so much a particular lawsuit as another battle in a continuing warfare upon a system of criminal justice which he considers stupid, brutal and entirely ineffective. Having no power to change the rules, he plays the game as he finds it. But for all his astonishing success, he firmly believes that the system is wrong.

"Real justice is the least concern of a court," he once said to the writer. "The courts are simply cockpits for lawyers to fight in. They should be research laboratories in which trained men would discover the truth and determine the cure."

Juries and Justice.

"Then you do not believe that justice is usually done in criminal cases?" he was asked.

"I don't know what justice is," was the blunt reply. "As a rule you can depend on a jury to find out whether the man did or did not do the thing he is charged with. But that is only the beginning. The important thing in real justice would be, if he did the thing, why he did it, and what should be done for his own good and the protection of society. That requires expert knowledge which no jury possesses. The ideal system would be for a jury to determine whether the accused did the thing, and to have experts on human behavior determine what should be done about it. Of course, in the present uncivilized state of human society there isn't a chance in the world of establishing such a system. Certainly the lawyers wouldn't be for it. It would put too many of them out of business."

Law Behind the Times.

Upon his own profession he heaps no empty praises. Instead, he says: "If doctors and scientists had been no wiser than lawyers, legislators and Judges, the world would still be punishing the sick and insane. We should still be treating physical ailments with incantations and magic. We should still be driving out devils from the ill and demented. Compared with medicine and machinery, the law is still living in the Middle Ages Most of this so-called crime could be eliminated in a generation if we showed half as much sense about it as we do about eradicating disease."

"The American people," Senator Hiram Johnson once observed, "are governed by catchwords. Invent a catchy line, and no matter if it is false, illogical, or even absurd, within a week 1,000,000 people will be quoting it as gospel."

In proof of that shrewd statement we have only to notice that "Coolidge economy" has become a popular catchword under an administration which has raised Government expenditures to the highest figure in the peace-time history of the nation.

Dissects Popular Phrases.

Darrow takes a satanic delight in puncturing such myths. What another man swallows at a gulp, Darrow puts under the microscope of his intelligence for careful dissection. Two phrases are often quoted in connection with prohibition, one, "The way to repeal a bad law is to enforce it," and the other, "As long as a law remains on the statute books it should be enforced."

The first of these was uttered by President Grant, and Darrow remarks: "Grant undoubtedly was a fine soldier and an excellent judge of whisky, but if anybody ever suspected him of being a historian or philosopher I never heard of it. The way to get rid of a bad law is not by trying to keep it alive, but by letting it die a natural death. Some of the laws under which the Spanish inquisition was conducted are still on the statute books. The laws against witchcraft remained on the books for a generation after public opinion had compelled the abandonment of all efforts to enforce them.

History Refutes Doctrine.

"The doctrine, so dear to the heart of antisaloon leaguers, that a law should be enforced as long as it remains on the books, is believed only by men who are ignorant of history, and is refuted by the universal experience of mankind.

"The Roman statutes outlawing Christianity remained on the books for at least half a century after all efforts to enforce them had ceased. What do the Methodist Bishops think about that policy of 'winking at violations?' When the Provincial Governor, Pliny, wrote to Trajan asking what he should do about it, that wise Emperor replied: 'Do not, my dear Pliny, go out of your way to look for them.'

"Are Wayne B. Wheeler and the Rev. Clarence True Wilson filled with indignation when they read of this example of 'official laxness?' Of course not. When you hear a man saying that a law must be enforced as long as it remains on the statute books, you can be sure that he is talking about a particular law, and one in which he has a particular interest. It's 10 to one he isn't talking about the tax laws, because nobody believes they should be enforced."

"Crimes" vs. Principles.

However, he observes, the Methodist Bishops who complain of lax enforcement of the Volstead Act are following precedent, John Wesley having complained in 1760 against the failure of the crown to enforce the statutes against witchcraft, which had been neglected for more than 50 years.

"It's a pity the public doesn't know more history," the old lawyer once remarked. "It might be less confident about what constitutes crime. In the history of mankind, more persons have been put to death for religious 'crimes' than for any other kind. Second in number is the list of those executed for political 'crimes.' Most of these, we now realize, were not 'crimes' at all, but in many cases were actions arising from the highest principles known to humanity.

"We now regard with horror the prosecutions of two or three centuries ago. I have no doubt whatever that the people of a few centuries hence will regard with even greater horror the penalties visited upon the idealists of our time. Imagine what the civilized man of the year 2500 will say when he reads that in 1918 the Government of the United States imposed long prison terms upon men and women for trying to prevent war!"

Strain of Civilization.

Speaking of war from another aspect, he has said: "Civilization imposes a constant and growing strain on men. Man is still a primitive animal, and in his effort to get back to a primitive state he will go into the woods and kill animals and birds. All violent athletic sports represent an effort by man to escape from the strain of civilization. Probably the underlying cause of the World War was the desperate need of mankind to relax from the hard and growing strain imposed by civilization."

Whether Darrow's reputation ultimately will rest upon his fight for labor's legal rights, his contributions to the study of crime, his defense of science against religious fanaticism, or his work as a humanitarian philosopher, is a question that time will answer. As one who has enjoyed exceptional opportunities to observe the workings of his mind, the writer is of the opinion that Darrow's brilliant and many-sided intellect never showed to better advantage nor performed a greater service, than in his defense of science and education and his prodigious assault upon bigotry during the Scopes trial at Dayton.

Masterpiece of Strategy.

It is true that his successful fight to save Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, murders of Robert Franks, from the scaffold in Chicago, was a masterpiece of courtroom strategy. There he was confronted not only by a "perfect hanging case," but by one of the most unanimous and bloodthirsty demonstrations of public opinion ever seen.

Darrow believed his young clients were mentally defective. The very wantonness of the crime, the absence of any rational motive commensurate with the risk, was sufficient indication that the perpetrators were abnormal. Moreover, two of the most eminent alienists in the country, after examining the defendants, were ready to testify to their mental deficiency. On the other hand, the circumstances made it almost certain that the presentation of an insanity defense would result in conviction and hanging. For that matter, Darrow did not want to acquit his clients. Neither did their relatives.

Solved Knotty Legal Problem

He desired to enter a plea of guilty. He desired also to have the alienists testify. But under the law an insane person could not be guilty, and conversely, a man admitting his guilt could not plead insanity. Darrow's problem was to enter his plea, and still make use of the alienists. He solved it by one of the most brilliant devices ever introduced in a courtroom.

Under the law, when a plea of guilty is entered, the Judge before imposing sentence can receive testimony to enlighten himself on the degree of punishment which should be imposed. Darrow entered the plea of guilty, and then offered the testimony of the alienists, not to prove "legal insanity," because the guilty plea excluded that, but to prove "medical insanity," that is, a degree of unbalance which, although not sufficient to exonerate the defendants, was sufficient to mitigate the enormity of their offense, and hence to lessen the severity of the punishment.

Two Clients Escaped Gallows.

The writer is satisfied, as a matter of fact, that this practically represented Darrow's private view of the case. He knew that his clients were not insane within the legal definition (inability to know right from wrong), but he did not believe they were entirely sane. His method of reasoning having succeeded, Loeb and Leopold went to prison for life, instead of to the gallows. Incidentally, recent developments in the case of Loeb, the actual instigator and perpetrator of the murder, have tended to confirm the opinion of Darrow and the alienists, if reports are correct.

Nevertheless, the issues in the Franks case were comparatively narrow. It was in the historic Tennessee evolution trial that the old master found his great opportunity. It might have been made to order, so well did the scope and character of the issues fit his talents. To defend science against superstition, to glorify learning and assail bigotry, to exalt intellectual freedom and make war upon fanaticism—was a task which appealed to every instinct in Darrow's nature. It was a task, moreover, for which his great knowledge and his cool courage were singularly well adapted. The appearance of Bryan as his chief adversary made the picture perfect.

Never-to-Be Forgotten Spectacle.

Those who were privileged to observe that strange spectacle will never forget it. It was an event in the intellectual history of the world, and it furnished one of the most stirring, passionate, and relentless dramas ever staged under the eyes of man. In a setting which mirrored perfectly the spirit of rural America, these two old men, champions of two ideas as old and as implacable as philosophy and fanaticism, met in a duel of minds, and when it was over one of them, beaten, crushed and humiliated, staggered from the courtroom to die.

Darrow broke Bryan's spirit. Whether the ordeal and humiliation actually hastened his death, does not need to be answered. Among the educated people of the country his reputation and his influence were dead on the fateful July afternoon when he dragged himself from the witness stand, and he knew it. The agony of the realization sat upon him like a crown of thorns. He had drunk the bitter cup to the last drop, and not the least bitter was the ingredient of surprise.

Held Opponent Helpless.

To that conflict of brains and wit Bryan had brought supreme confidence, and there was something like terror in his face as it dawned upon him, too late, that he was caught fast in the grasp of an intellect so powerful, and a purpose so grim and deadly, that he was virtually helpless. In the face of Darrow's learning, his own eloquence seemed puerile and hollow. Under Darrow's corrosive ridicule, his fervor wilted. Against the granite front of fact and logic, his emotional shafts broke in hopelessness and futility. He went out from that ordeal discredited, and from the standpoint of his ambitions, ruined. That was Tuesday. By Sunday morning he was dead.

Until Darrow went to Dayton, educational liberty in this country was on the defensive against fundamentalism. Under Darrow, it took the offensive which it has maintained ever since. Until Dayton, science claimed its rights timidly and apologetically; now it demands them. More than anyone else, Darrow helped to make bigotry ridiculous. He put heart into the fight against militant ignorance. He put a great fear into fanaticism.

Appetite for Knowledge Unsated.

And now the evening of life finds his appetite for knowledge unsated, his combativeness undiminished, his humor alive and ready. Not long ago he made a trip to Johns Hopkins University to investigate reports of a new discovery concerning heredity. Two years ago he told the writer he was ready to retire, and a month later was in the midst of the most spectacular battle of his career. The edge of his repartee was never keener. Recently a eugenist, annoyed by Darrow's criticism, asked if it wasn't true that stock breeders had produced a better hog than the razorback evolved by nature.

"Better for the purposes of man, you mean," was the lightning retort. "From the hog's standpoint, the razorback is infinitely superior."

Champion of the Outcast.

To a smug generation he has been a dash of vinegar. Upon an age satisfied with its superiority, he has played the hose of his skepticism. In an era when wealth and position are unduly exalted, he has made himself the champion of the outcast and disinherited of the earth. Among a people prone to swallow what is handed to them, he has exercised his corrosive common sense. In a time when liberty languishes, he carries on the good fight.

To have the wisdom which is never sure of itself; to have the courage of disillusionment; to have the compassion which only marvels that men are no worse than they are—this may be greatness, or merely humanity. At the age of 70, it is Clarence Darrow.

BEACH CLINICS FOR BABIES

Paris Infants Treated Under Rays of Violet Lights.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, July 1.—An artifical beach, where ailing children can play in the sand under healing rays of violet lights has recently been opened in Paris.

White sea sands are hemmed in by walls of aluminum at the clinic beach and naked children ,their eyes protected by thick goggles, take the treatment under the watchful eyes of parents or nurses. The violet ray beach is a miniature, measuring about 40 square feet. It has the advantage over sun-warmed beaches that the violet rays are constant and not subject to the fluctuation of the weather.

Soviet Oasis In Germany.

BERLIN, July 2.—The little watering place of Elgarsburg in Thuringia is a Soviet oasis in republican Germany. Since the burgomaster and the majority of the city council are Communists, they have displayed the Soviet star, with sickle and hammer, above the entrance to the city hall, and have carved it into the doors.

Suggests Power to Vote War Be Left to Plain People

cept the decision of others. The fact that self-governing peoples choose their own Governments and are therefore, presumably responsible for the actions and decisions of those Governments, does not meet the issue. Those Governments are never elected on the precise issue of peace or war. They are elected on domestic grounds and for domestic reasons. And a Government elected primarily on an issue, let us say, suhc as the tariff, may not be at all representative when suddenly confronted by the need of a decision involving peace or war.

Are Plain People Competent To Judge?

Such considerations are of course obvious enough. No sane human being would deny their compelling force if it were not for one doubt. And it is this. Are the plain men and women who make up the vast bulk of each of these self-governing nations as competent to determine if and when a war is necessary as the little groups of individuals who now form their Governments? That is the doubt. And the answer to that doubt depends, obviously, upon our belief in popular Government.

There was a time when the ability of men and women to govern themselves under any conditions was disputed—and for precisely the same reasons. History and the rise of self-governing states have demonstrated not only that they are competent, but that they are happier and safer when they take on themselves the responsibility of Government. Now we find ourselves face to face with that ancient question in a new guise—whether, although admittedly competent to control their fundamental relations with other peoples—in other words, to determine whether, at any given time, those relations shall be relations of peace or of war. That is the nub of the matter.

The great peoples are now self-governing. Each of them has set up a machinery of government which gives it effective control of its own domestic affairs. But in the region of international affairs, the existing machinery of government has never been within their control, and is not now. Theoretically, of course, each self-governing people controls its relations with other peoples. Practically, by leaving the power to declare war in the hands of their governments, they lose that control.

It is conceivable, of course, that, owing to some inherent moral instability or lack of understanding, they are unfitted to assume that control—that they would treat lightly a decision which meant so much to them and to others and squander recklessly their lives and property in vain wars against their neighbors. But the presumption, at least, is in their favor. After all, it is their lives and their properties which are involved. And it is certainly within their power, if they will, by the appropriate contributional means, either to permit the continuation of a system, autocratic by nature, which always has resulted in war, and by which, as at present, their lives and property can be taken without consultation with them and without effective means of protest, or, by agreement with other peoples, to take upon their common shoulders the power to decide whether at any particular time, war is or is not necessary.

If they choose the latter course, war is inevitable only insofar as they themselves want it to be. They will be in position to decide, for then the full power of sovereignty will finally be within their grasp. Only then will the democratic process be complete.

Time Is at Hand For New Experiment.

If what I have said has substantial basis in fact, it would seem that the time is at hand when a new experiment in democratic control must be made, and those peoples who have demonstrated their competence to govern themselves within their own national frontiers must assume direct responsibility for their relations with each other. Our governments have shown themselves unable to protect us against war. They continue to act along well defined grooves and in accordance with the dictates of a political theory which exalts nationalism and relies frankly upon the use of force, when necessary, to attain these ends.

We have no apparent reason to hope for any change in their method and in their aims. The future, if they control it, seems likely to be merely an intensified repetition of the past. Personally I believe we cannot safely continue to be democratic within our national frontiers and autocratic in our relations with the other self-governing peoples. A durable peace cannot be based upon force. It must, if it exists at all, be based upon good will. And I believe profoundly that that practical good will exists, that the great self-governing peoples can safely trust one another, and that only a method of dealing between them, inherited from an outgrown system of autocratic government prevents our recognition of that great and beneficent fact. We are caught in a process of our own making. And we must unmake it.

That, substantially, completes what I have to say. What remains is to discuss the means by which that possible extension of democratic control can be put into practical effect, and into this discussion I do not propose now to enter. Nevertheless, to make my argument complete, I must indicate very briefly two conditions which seem to me essential. First, if so great a political experiment is to be tried, it must be frankly an international experiment. It cannot be safely or expediently entered upon by one nation alone. Obviously the experiment would have a greater chance of success if confined at the beginning to those peoples who are most alike in race and ancestry, who possess roughly the same degree of economic and political and educational advancement, accept the same standards of life, respond to the same appeals and react to the same emotions—in other words, the great self-governing peoples.

Preliminary Conferences Would Be Necessary.

Obviously, too, such a proposition can only be brought before them by the consent and with the co-operation of their respective Governments. A conference at which each is represented would therefore be a necessary preliminary. Second, the object of such a conference would be, of course, to determine whether each of these Governments is prepared by proper legislative action to enable its people to accept or reject a proposition whereby a declaration of war against the other peoples in the group can be made only after the question has received the affirmative sanction of a majority of its qualified electors, and, following this, to enter into an agreement whereby in return for reciprocal pledges, each shall agree not to attack the others for a term of—say—100 years.

If, as the result of such a conference, these two propositions can be formulated and accepted, a day should be fixed on which all the peoples so pledged would be given an opportunity to vote for or against ratification, so that by the simultaneous action of the individual electors in all the great Nations involved the full responsibility for that agreement would be dramatically brought home to each and each be made aware that the issue of peace or war between them will be thereafter in their own hands and control. Into such a conference, it seems to me, the plain people of America would be eager to enter.

Certainly nothing in our past, nothing in our political traditions, nothing in our accepted principles of Government, prevents our entering into an agreement not to attack nations which agree not to attack us. In this way, and perhaps in this way only, can we join hands effectively with the other self-governing peoples in a common effort to secure a more durable peace. But the agreement I am contemplating must be something more than an agreement between Government. It must be an agreement between the peoples themselves.

I need hardly point out to you that if such an agreement could be reached, it would leave untouched the relations between each of these Powers and all the other Powers not involved. Only, as between the peoples who made this compact, there would be this additional security. For as the chances of a lasting peace are greater in the hands of parliamentary Governments than in the hands of autocrats, so I believe those chances will be greater still when in the hands of great masses of human beings whose interests lie in peace and who think in terms of peace and who know that their individual lives and property are the stake if peace is broken.

At any rate, so far as I can see, no effective alternative is open If the danger of war is to be lessened, a sufficient measure of control, it seems to me, can be obtained only when the self-governing peoples definitely and constitutionally take the decision into their own hands.

Let me thank you now for the patience with which you have listened to me. I realize better than you possibly can how inadequate is the statement I have just made. But, however inadequate, it, at least, has this excuse—that it is an effort to point out and added security against war where it is most destructive and most dangerous, that is to say, between the peoples, who are most alike, the self-governing peoples. Of course if we are content with the present relations between them, we need no added security. But in view of the war which ended only a few years ago and of the peace that is even now being worked out—are we content?

DISCUSS TUBERCULOSIS CONTROL; STUDY URGED

Health Society Directors Predict Decrease in the Next Few Years.

Salient facts concerning tuberculosis and its control were discussed yesterday at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis.

Two of the facts brought out is that there is no special cure for tuberculosis, such as an antitoxin or a specific preventitive, such as vaccination as in smallpox. Complete rest, fresh air and wholesome food are necessary for successful treatment, it was pointed out.

Partial segregation is advocated for those who have the disease, to prevent its spread. Another preventitive measure stressed was that persons in poor physical condition should receive treatment to neutralize their susceptibility.

The public, it was said, should be taught how to cope with the disease. Other points stressed were that patients should be sent to hospitals when home environment is unfavorable, and that when discharged from the hospital the patient should receive medical and economic aid.

Study of the disease was advocated in several of the points brought out, and it was predicted that tuberculosis would decrease in the next few years.

ST. LOUIS PAPER CAN CO. SOLD TO EASTERN FIRM

Business Started by 2 Brothers in Small Shop 27 Years Brings $670,000.

The St. Louis Paper Can and Tube Co., a business started here 27 years ago by two brothers, John H. and Henry W. Kuechenmeister, has been sold to a national concern for a price understood to approximate $870,000, and the brothers, retiring, are keeping a large financial interest in the new corporation, it was announced yesterday. The company is located at Big Bend boulevard and Missouri Pacific tracks, Maplewood.

The Sefton Manufacturing Corporation, owner of a number of kindred factories, with headquarters at Chicago, completed the purchase last Thursday and will take over the plant here on Tuesday. The new corporation, to conduct the Maplewood establishment, is the Sefton National Fiber Can Co. William P. Hicks is coming here from Chicago as its president.

The Kuechenmeisters started their business career in 1900, with a small shop at Second and Morgan streets. The owner of the property, skeptical about their ability to make good, forced them to borrow money from a friend of their father's to cover the first six months' rent, an acquaintance related.

Occupies Five-Acre Site.

The enterprise grew and was incorporated in 1904 for $10,000. It moved to 3100 North Broadway, later to a plant in the Union boulevard northwest industrial district and six years ago to the present five-acre site and two-and-one-half acre building in Maplewood.

There now are about 130 employes and this number may be increased to 150 or 200. The line will be extended and new machinery installed, increasing the production by 25 or 30 per cent, to a volume of 100,000,000 paper cans and boxes and 10,000,000 tubes annually.

Capital Stock $870,000.

The deal was made by purchase of the stock of the old company from the Kuechenmeisters. John Kuechenmeister, who resides on McKnight road, near Clayton road, will retire altogether, but Henry, who lives on Geyer road, will be a director of the Sefton National Fiber Can Co., as will Edward Platt of Waldheim, Platt & Co., which is arranging the financing.

Capital of the new corporation will be $870,000, including $200,000 of first preferred stock underwritten by Waldheim, Platt & Co., $420,000 of second preferred held by the Kuechenmeisters to a considerable extent and by the Sefton Manufacturing Corporation, and $250,000 in other securities retained by the Kuechenmeisters.

Begins Tuesday—Fourth Floor

Our floor samples must go immediately—two-thirds of our immense floor sample stock is either the last of a group, or have been on display the allotted time. They have been priced way below the regular sale value—in many cases below actual cost.

Many Sample Suites Are Marked One-Half or More—Others One-Third—Some One-Fourth

Although each piece will be sold as a sample the merchandise will receive the same careful attention before, and during delivery, as our regular stock. The same guarantee of satisfaction and the same opportunities of buying by Club or Morris Plan are effective. Only one of a design and pieces cannot be duplicated.

So sure are we of the values offered that we agree that any purchaser has the privilege of changing the selected article should he or she find what is considered a better value later in the sale week.

Max Risch has opened up a tract of land of 40 acres known as Point Breeze Homesites at the intersection of Lemay Ferry and Telegraph roads, which contains over 300 highly restricted building lots.

This tract of land was purchased from the Mullanphy Board, a philanthropic organization, last year and has been graded and improved with gas, electric, water and macadam streets. WEBSTER GROVES

A Beautiful Place to Live

In Webster Groves you'll see charming homes—homes which represent ideals of beauty and comfort, in a setting of fine old trees, broad lawns and gardens.

Added to the natural beauty, are the city improvements: sewers, water, gas and improved roads. Too, there are churches of all denominations, excellent public and private schools; clubs, markets and shops.

Your investment due to the high character of the community and careful restrictions, is assured. We have many interesting offerings—homes modest or pretentious. And the prices would often be considered low for inferior houses in a much less desirable location.

Let us show you the attractive homes and building sites we offer for sale here.

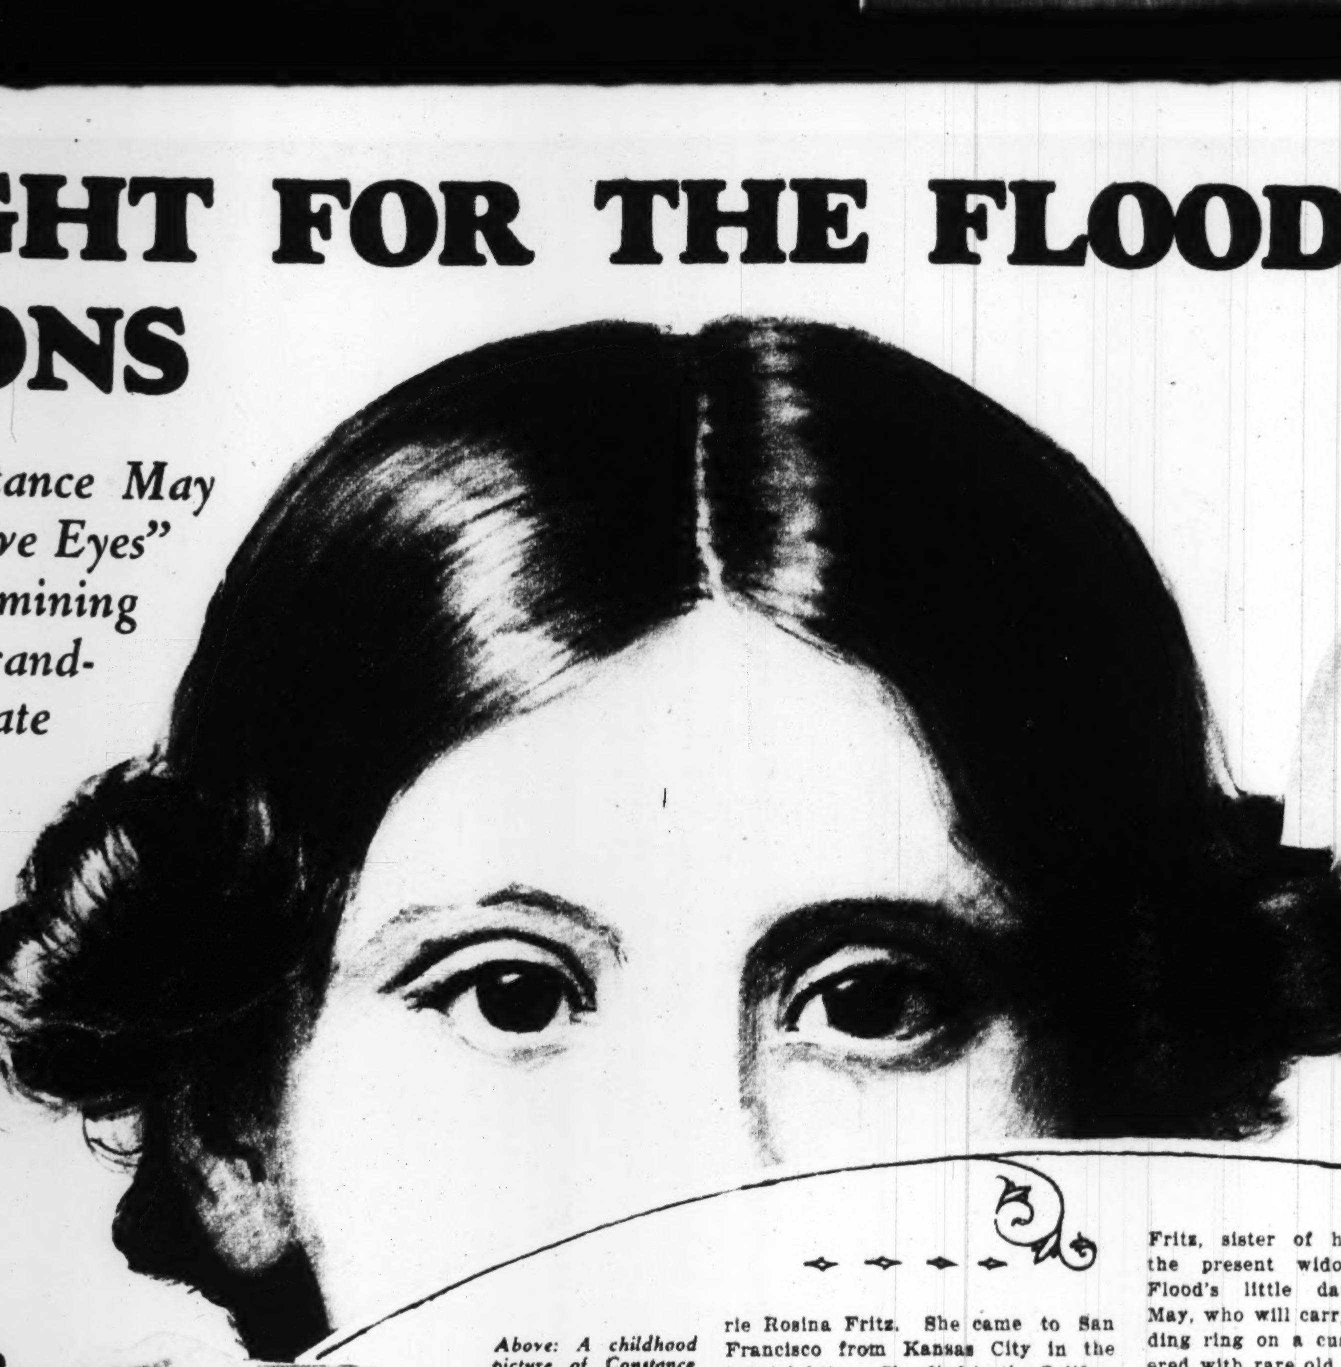
THE FIGHT FOR THE FLOOD MILLIONS

And the Part that Constance May Gavin's "Large, Expressive Eyes" May Play in Determining Whether She Is a Granddaughter of the Late Bonanza King.



Above: A childhood picture of Constance May "Flood," showing her large expressive eyes. It is claimed that she and Constance May Gavin are the same.

OAKLAND, California.

THE millions left by James L. Flood, son of the Flood of Bonanza days, are in dispute. Mrs. Constance May Gavin, wife of a Los Angeles bank teller, claims two-ninths of the $18,000,000 Flood estate. This woman with the large, dark, expressive eyes says she is James L. Flood's daughter; she has announced her claim in the courts and she asks her share.

Mystery has badly obscured the case and made it one difficult for the courts to fathom. Where was Mrs. Gavin born? And who was her mother? The young woman herself has believed she was the daughter of "Petey Mack," gay San Francisco actress of the nineties, "Petey Mack," who so charmed James Flood that he took her to be his wife.

Then into the courts came one Mrs. Eudora Stearn Willette announcing that she, and not "Petey Mack," was the mother of Constance May Gavin and that her child's father was the late James L. Flood.

So complicated has this case become that judges, attorneys, detectives, Flood's accepted heirs, his widow and son and daughter, are unaware what unexpected testimony will next appear to either twist the affair into a further knot or to clarify its present bewilderment.

LIKE most big fortunes which ultimately become bones of contention among heirs who had no part in their making, the Flood fortune can easily be traced back to the man who worked hard for it and who might now feel ill at ease in his grave if he could know of the dissension growing out of it. The fortune is now two generations removed from its builder. The builder was James C. Flood, hardy and persistent gold hunter of the days of '49, who unwittingly set the stage for this present combat when he shouldered pick and shovel and cast his lot with the other hard-working prospectors west of the Rockies.

It appears he never prospered to any conspicuous degree in California. The money he had when he left there would not have caused heirs to go to court. It wouldn't have been enough to retain an attorney. But Flood went at an opportune time to Nevada, and near Virginia City struck it rich. He operated alone there for a time and then in 1864, long after the California boom had subsided, came into contact with three other gold hunters, who, like himself, had come from California to Nevada in quest of new bonanzas. These were John Mackay, father of Clarence Mackay, who was in later years to head the Postal Telegraph Company with some of his father's wealth; William S. O'Brien and James G. Fair.

These four pooled their resources and ideas and prospecting skill. They started operations on the site of the old Hale & Norcross mine. Others had abandoned the workings on the assumption the lode had been worked out and was done for. Mackay was given credit for the hunch that it still contained riches, and Mackay's was a good hunch. In three years the four partners had made a million out of it. With their earnings they bought up other claims, some of which, like the Hale & Norcross mine, had been abandoned. Some of these proved to be worthless, and before the partners realized it they had sunk $500,000, or about all their profits.

Less resolute prospectors might have quit and gone back East while they still had coffee and sandwich money, but these knew only one line of thought and action. That was mining. Somehow, they got hold of some new properties nearby and held on. Thanks to their persistence, the output of silver began to climb. In four years their mines had yielded $75,000,000, and each partner was drawing an income of $800,000 a month. Two years more of development and their properties were worth $800,000,000. They got out silver faster than it could be hauled away. They saw times when they had piles of the metal heaped around like gravel. Four immense fortunes came out of the heap, and one of them was to come down to James L. Flood.

WHEN James L. Flood died he left $12,000,000 to his children, James and Mary Emma. No mention was made of another child. At that time Mrs. Gavin believed she was the niece of Flood's widow. Mrs. Flood was the sister of "Petey Mack," the actress, the first wife of James L. Flood. And so believing, Mrs. Gavin considered herself Flood's daughter by his first wife.

Below: Mrs. Eudora Willette, who claims she is Constance May's mother.

"Petey Mack's" true name was Marie Rosina Fritz. She came to San Francisco from Kansas City in the late 'eighties. She died in the California Womens' Hospital in San Francisco on January 15, 1898. Five years before that, Mrs. Gavin says, she was born.

Mrs. Gavin has many material claims, she says, to show she was a member of the Flood household when she was a little girl. She has exhibited newspaper clippings purporting to tell of the second marriage of James L. Flood at Kansas City on February 8, 1899. One of these clippings, said to be from a San Francisco newspaper, states:

"Preceding them (Flood and Maude Lee Fritz, sister of his dead wife, and the present widow) will walk Mr. Flood's little daughter, Constance May, who will carry a plain gold wedding ring on a cushion of satin covered with rare old lace."

AFTER this wedding, Mrs. Gavin says, she was left in Kansas City until 1901. Then an old nurse, Petra Mikelson, brought her West and she entered a convent at Alhambra, near Los Angeles. At that time the Flood mansion was on Pacific avenue. An enunciator in the old house, investigators recently found, has a brass plate in the servants' quarters on which are the words: "To the Baby Room." That plate is part of the evidence offered to prove there was a child in the Flood family.

When Constance May and her nurse reached San Francisco they did not proceed to the Pacific avenue home. Instead, they went to Flood's office in the Nevada Bank Building. There, according to Mrs. Gavin, she was told that her "daddy was not in."

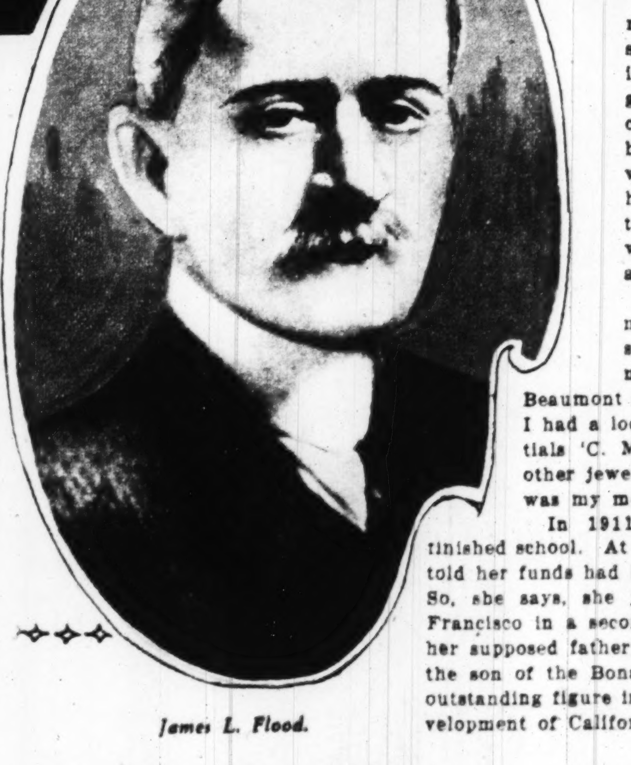
For the next 10 years Constance May lived at the Alhambra convent.

At left: Mrs. Marie Flood, James L. Flood's first wife, also said to be Constance May's mother.

"I was a sort of mystery at school," Mrs. Gavin says. "Other girls' parents came to see them, but nobody ever visited me. I never had a home, although Mrs. Flood was said to be my aunt.

"Two uncles of mine from Kansas City visited me. They were Beaumont and Walter Fritz. I had a locket with the initials 'C. M. F.' on it, and other jewelry I had thought was my mother's."

In 1911 Constance May finished school. At that time she was told her funds had become exhausted. So, she says, she journeyed to San Francisco in a second attempt to see her supposed father, James L. Flood, the son of the Bonanza king and an outstanding figure in the financial development of California.



James L. Flood.

This time, Mrs. Gavin relates, she was informed by Flood's secretary that Flood was out of town. She also, she says, was further informed that her name was Stearn, not Flood, and that her parents were dead.

The girl was deeply grieved and mystified. She returned to Los Angeles. She became a guest at the home of former State Senator Robert N. Bulla, whose two daughters had been Constance May's school friends and companions.

In 1913 Bulla asked Flood's office for information regarding Constance May and her strange case. His reply was a statement from the executors, accompanied by a copy of an affidavit. The copy of the affidavit was signed by a Mrs. A. Jacob Stearn, later Mrs. Willette. It said that she had married Jacob Stearn, a New York sportsman, in 1892 and that she had a daughter, Constance May.

Not long ago Mrs. Willette repudiated this affidavit. Confronted with it in a Redwood City courtroom, she said: "When I signed it I thought it was a receipt for $5000."

Constance May married Gavin in 1921. Five years later James L. Flood died at his estate, Linden Towers.

Mrs. Gavin then got busy. "When Mr. Flood refused to see me in San Francisco," she said, "I knew I could do nothing until he died."

Mrs. Gavin went to San Francisco to aid investigators. Abundant testimony was got from witnesses. Many of them, people of social and financial prominence in San Francisco, said they remembered Flood's little girl. And many of these old-timers claimed to recognize Mrs. Gavin. Those large, dark, expressive eyes of hers were often mentioned as a source of recognition.

Among those who remember Flood's little girl is the housekeeper at the old Pacific avenue home.

A FEW weeks ago Eugene Aureguy, an investigator, found the son of a former gardener for Flood. He is Victor Dupuis, driver of Engine Co. 35 of the San Francisco Fire Department. Mrs. Gavin and Dupuis were brought together.

"Do you remember," Mrs. Gavin asked him, "the little fire engine I gave you on Christmas, 1897?"

"Yes," Dupuis answered instantly, "and I have the card, which I have kept all these years. It is signed 'Constance May Flood.'"

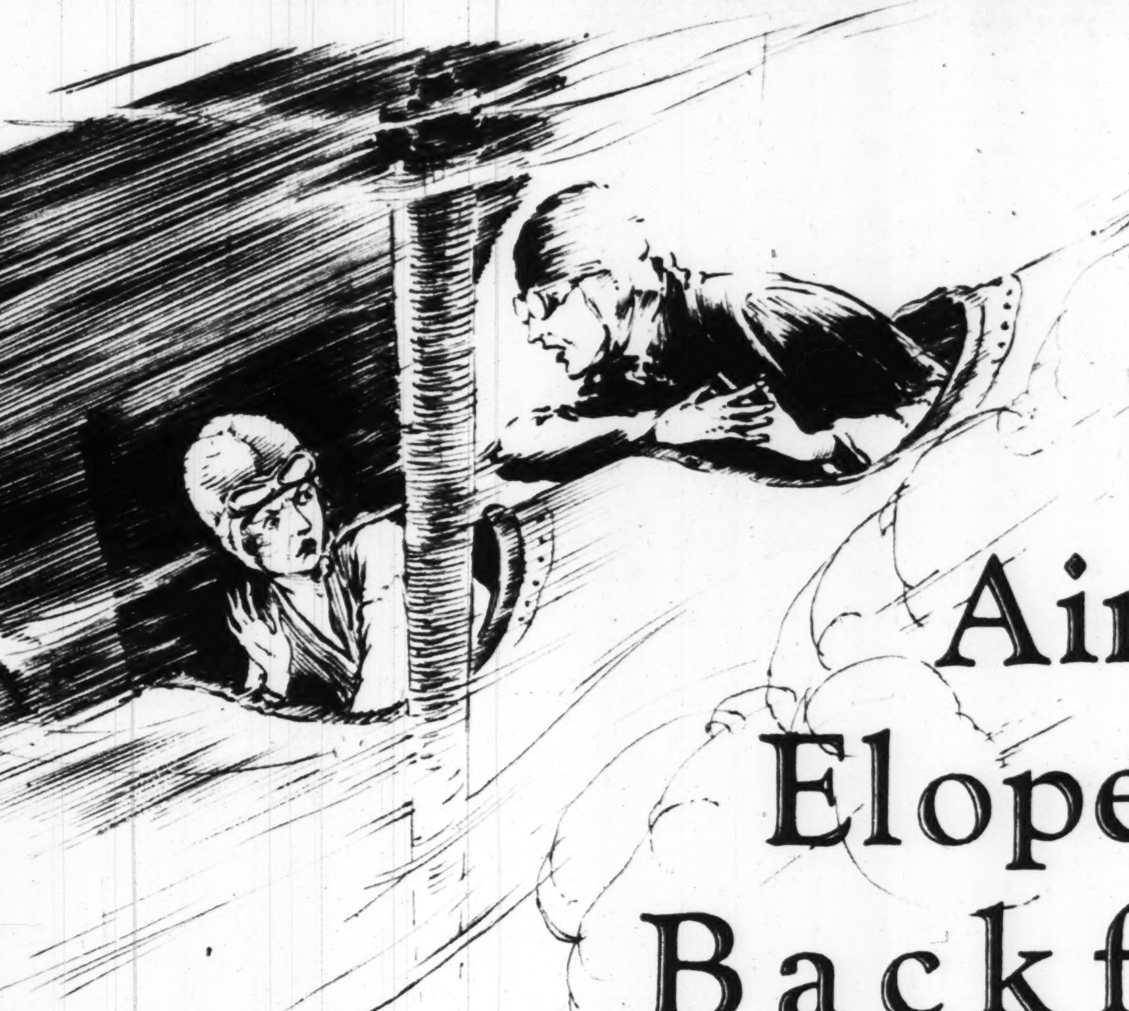
But it was as Constance May Stearn the child was known at the convent at Alhambra several years later. It was through this name of Stearn that Mrs. Willette was drawn into the case, and then came her testimony that she was Mrs. Gavin's mother, but that James L. Flood was her father.

Possibly the solution to many of the problems that have arisen around Mrs. Gavin's parentage will be revealed by the mysterious Mrs. Willette.

Already, in a stuffy country courthouse at Redwood City, this Mrs. Willette has bared several supposed chapters in the past of James L. Flood. But perhaps back of her snapping black eyes is hidden many another memory. She has told the court there is much she still has to relate. When she gets ready.

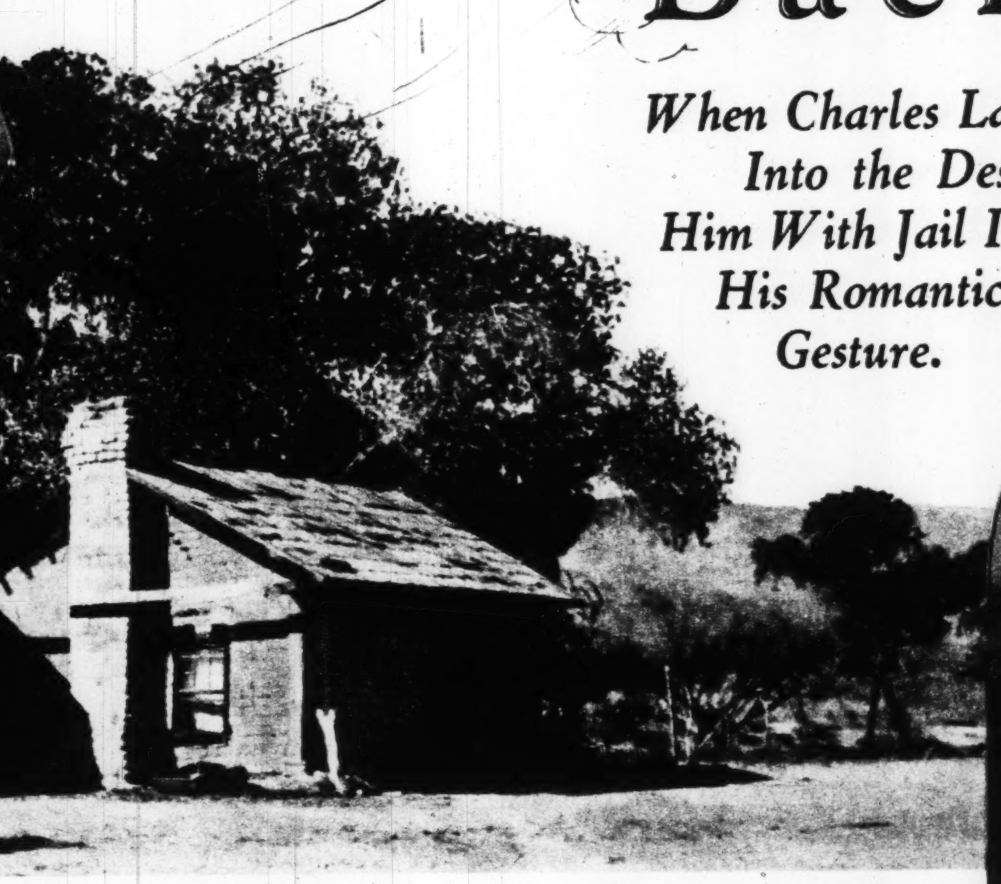
And Mrs. Gavin. "I ask only for that which is mine by right of birth," she says. "But no fortune can make up to me for the childhood I lived."

Noreen Burke.



HIS Airplane Elopement Backfired

When Charles Lajotte Bore Noreen Burke Into the Desert She Threatened Him With Jail Instead of Succumbing to His Romantic Gesture.



Adobe house, adjoining the Elwood Lloyd cabin in the desert, where Lajotte landed.

Charles Lajotte.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

SAN DIEGO, California.

WHEN Charles Lajotte, 29 - year - old aviator of San Diego, noticed a cartoon depicting a young airman making off with his sweetheart in a smart-looking plane, he had an idea. A friend of his owned a plane. Lajotte had a helmet with goggles. He possessed nice puttees and had some money besides. And he wanted Noreen Burke to marry him.

Noreen is a San Diego society girl with fine family connections, and an automobile, and she has shown a disinclination to say "Yes!" to her suitors. Every time young Lajotte asked her to become his bride, the word "No!" was her answer. She had said it so many times he was beginning to believe she meant it. This belief was somewhat strengthened by the fact that of late his ardent love notes were being returned unopened and the young lady had even written a little message politely requesting him to discontinue further literary efforts so far as she was concerned.

But here was an idea—something new: Why not be the first Lochinvar of the air? Why not swing his adored girl into his plane and fly away—some place, any place, so that in admiration of his daring and his perseverance she would fall into his arms and cry, "My darling! I'm yours forever." The more Lajotte thought about it the more feasible it looked. Possibly he had read Sir Walter Scott's verses in "Marmion:"

> O, young Lochinvar is come out of the West,
> Through all the wide border his steed was the best;
> And save his good broadsword, he weapons had none,
> He rode all unarmed and he rode all alone.
> So faithful in love, and so dauntless in war,
> There never was knight like the young Lochinvar.

SUBSTITUTION of "airplane" for "broadsword" to make the line read—"And save his good airplane, he weapon had none," would make the proposed feat quite romantic. He had met Miss Burke on a boat trip to Alaska. They became very good friends but for her the friendship had not developed into any blazing romance. On their return to San Diego he had resumed his work as instructor in aviation and Miss Burke her round of teas and afternoon bridge.

But this idea of eloping in a plane, even though he had to kidnap his prospective bride, was too good not to try. So he proceeded to put the idea into execution. It took a lot of maneuvering but even that was fun. First, he got hold of his friend's plane at the Ryan airport near San Diego. It was Sunday a few weeks ago. Noreen agreed to come with a party of friends and to take turns riding along the border of the blue Pacific. The plane could carry three and it would be a pleasant lark.

"Awfully nice of you!" Miss Burke exclaimed on her arrival at the flying field. "Take some of the others up first."

LAJOTTE, all kindness and patience, started his motor and went humming away, not flying high yet going heavenward far enough to afford a beautiful view of the quiet city, the Marine barracks, the sides of the distant mountains and the ships out at sea. The day was ideal, the rides exhilarating. Lajotte took up the visitors two at a time, made pleasant yet rather brief flights about the field and landed gently at the starting place.

Presently it was Noreen Burke's turn to ride. Dr. John Steen, one of her friends, would go up with her. And now Lajotte must act. His great moment had arrived.

"Will you get out before we start," he said to Dr. Steen, "and see if I damaged my landing gear that last time? It seems that something—"

He pulled at a stick or two. Dr. Steen stepped from the cockpit, knelt on one knee to look under the plane and heard a sudden roar from the motor. The machine taxied down the field, slowly took the air and, while the dismayed party looked on, headed toward the mountains. Up it went, up and up, to become little more than a speck—and then disappeared from sight.

Lajotte was fleeing with his fair Noreen. Past the foothills of the Sierra Madre range, past the pretty green hills and into the brown desert his aircraft went. He knew his destination. A hundred or more miles away was an oasis known as 29 Palms. There Elwood Lloyd, his friend and owner of the plane, owned a cabin and he and Mrs. Lloyd just then were occupying it. This would be the first stop in the elopement.

Now 29 Palms is a spot to be linked charmingly with romance. A lonely place in the wastes, where sometime a small grove of semi-tropical trees and cottonwoods was planted. The trees have risen tall and stately about a water hole. The spot is picturesque. For miles in every direction grows the pungent sage and there is silence. In the distance are the purple hills. A few lovers of the wild and desolate are building cabins there, for rest. And they love it. Zane Grey says that "nothing in civilized life can cast the spell of enchantment, can grip men's souls and terrify women's hearts like the desert."

Perhaps Lajotte hoped that Noreen might be enamored with this beauty spot of Nature and feel the spell which the desert casts upon men. The fact that she was a society girl whose life had been spent in the cities, and she might know nothing of the desert's lure, did not deter him. He kept on.

Back at the flying field, the other members of the party were scurrying about—getting telephone connections with the police, calling for help from other flyers, preparing to rush back to the city and from there broadcast the news of the "kidnaping."

But Lajotte was far away and his motor purring smoothly. The afternoon had not yet gone when he circled 29 Palms and came to a stop not far from the Lloyds' cabin door.

NOREEN was displeased. She told him so. She told him a lot of things. The two were warmly welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd. But there was no cordiality in Miss Burke's oration, delivered on the spot. Lajotte declared his love and asked Noreen to marry him.

"Take me home!" she cried.

By this time, Miss Burke's father and mother, her two married sisters, the San Diego police, the sheriff and his deputies, aviator friends, the newspapers, railroad stations, telegraph offices, long-distance telephone offices, neighbors and townspeople had been advised of the flight and things began to happen. First, the authorities in all the surrounding counties were notified by wire. And the authorities were instructed to arrest Lajotte if they ever again found him on earth.

"That man should be prosecuted to the fullest extent!" cried Mrs. Veronica T. Sprague, mother of Miss Burke. "It was a cowardly thing to do. Noreen refused to wed Lajotte two weeks ago but he continued his attentions, though she plainly informed him twice in my presence that she had no love whatsoever for him."

"He craftily planned all this," exclaimed Mrs. Ed Fletcher, who is Miss Burke's sister. "Noreen would not have gone to the flying field at all but for the urging of other members of the party and she carefully maneuvered so that she would at no time be alone with Lajotte."

At 29 Palms, Elwood Lloyd voiced his opinion, after hearing Miss Burke's speech, that it likely would be best to make a return trip next morning and deposit the young lady somewhere in the immediate vicinity from which they had come. Furthermore, Lloyd wanted to go to Los Angeles and he would ride with them as far as that city. Thoroughly unhappy over his failure, Lajotte agreed and the night was spent in quietude at 29 Palms.

Not long after sun-up, Lajotte got into the cockpit with Miss Burke and Lloyd, took off and headed for Los Angeles, less than 100 miles away. He was not in a chatty mood. The plane flew over miles and miles of orange groves from which the blossoms recently had fallen. It passed peaceful little valley homes where the irrigating water was running in orchards. They skirted Los Angeles toward Rogers Field. As they drew within sight of the airport, three men moved out in an automobile and waited. When the plane came to a stand-still, the men rushed to its side.

"We are officers," said Captain Bright of the Los Angeles homicide squad. "We want you!"

Deputy Sheriffs Blaisdell and Brown moved closer.

"Come with us!" they ordered.

LAJOTTE and Miss Burke were placed in an automobile and driven to the Hall of Justice. Then the young aviator's humiliating moments began. H. M. Boyle, a brother-in-law, was waiting.

"What happened?" the officers asked the 21-year-old young woman. She told the story.

"Did he propose marriage to you after you left Ryan field?"

"Yes, sir!"

"And you told him?"

"No!"

Then she added: "I'm afraid I'll never care for his friendship again. He has caused my family too much trouble. I wasn't even able to telephone them last night to relieve their anxiety. There never was much romance between us but now it's all over."

She turned to face Lajotte, sitting a few feet away. He apparently was taking no notice of the girl's remarks.

"I merely wanted to get her away to where it was quiet and I could talk to her alone," said Lajotte when his time came to speak. "Now that this has come up I don't know what I'm going to do. But I haven't given up hope that Noreen will marry me. I surely didn't think that she'd say 'No!' I suppose I made a mistake."

THE crestfallen young man said he did not know that a dozen naval and private planes were seeking them while they were at the cabin home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd. He did not know that Mrs. Sprague, the girl's mother, was prostrated when told of the runaway flight. He had not foreseen the possibility of his arrest on a kidnaping charge. He had not taken into consideration the fact that the hunt for him would be conducted by peace officers on the ground and airplanes in the sky. He did not realize how the times have changed since Lochinvar triumphed.

"I had no intention of kidnaping her," he protested. "I just thought she might marry me when she understood how I wanted her and we were away out yonder."

Edward Fletcher Jr., another brother-in-law of Miss Burke, got busy. He is a son of Col. Edward Fletcher, millionaire water supply man and representative of a great corporation's power interests in Southern California. He went into conference with District Attorney Stephen Connell at San Diego. While Lajotte waited in Los Angeles, the question of whether or not he should be prosecuted on an attempted kidnaping charge was discussed. It was a terrible plight for a Lochivar.

Said Mrs. Fletcher to her husband before he visited the District Attorney:

"Recently someone suggested that Lajotte might have flown with Lindbergh to Paris. He remarked that he had 'other and more interesting plans.' And we have learned that he fully equipped the plane Saturday evening to accommodate a woman passenger. Furthermore, he drove to Suncrest, the mountain resort 30 miles inland where Noreen was staying over the week-end to get her to take the flight next day. And in order to allay her fears, he urged the entire house party to visit Ryan field."

While all this parleying was in progress, young Lajotte waited. If ever a wooer was in an embarrassing predicament, Lajotte was that one. The only one apparently not much perturbed was Charles M. Burke, father of the girl. He said he would discuss the case with his daughter before deciding whether he would ask for a complaint against the airman.

SO LAJOTTE waited in the sheriff's office. The deputies came and went, scarcely glancing in his direction. Telephone and telegraph messages passed between the two cities—Los Angeles and San Diego. While not on trial in any court, he was on trial by members of the Burke family. His discomfiture was growing. His prospective bride had no good word to say in his defense. In fact, she had very plainly indicated that she was glad to be free of him.

Finally, Lajotte was told that he could go. The family had decided to prefer no charges against him.

"But," said Brother-in-law Boyle, "you'd better not show up around there any more!"

The young Lochinvar went out on the street—out past the Hall of Records where Los Angeles County issues its marriage licenses, out into the busy traffic of Broadway and down among the crowds. Before he departed, a newspaper reporter asked Lajotte what he intended to do. He replied that he did not know.

But he indicated that he would not return to San Diego.

STRIKE! FOR DICKIE
F

SUPERIOR, Wisconsin.

FOR 23 consecutive years, Miss Lulu J. Dickinson taught English in Central High School. She came here from the University of Michigan and began teaching when Superior was a semi-wilderness town, almost hidden by the forests at the western tip of the world's greatest lake. She quickly became what she has since remained—the most popular and best loved teacher in Superior's entire school system.

Those who know her well—and that means nearly everybody in this city of 30,000—call her "Dickie," and declare that, if ever any woman consecrated her life exclusively to the teaching and counseling of youth, "Dickie" did just that. She was never particularly active in church or social affairs, never meddled in politics or uplift movements. She gave her full time to her pupils.

SHE got to know her students better than other teachers knew them. She was their confidante and adviser. She watched their tendencies and displays of special talent. If she detected a flash of genius in a pupil she took that pupil in hand and tried to develop that special ability. She helped students find themselves. She encouraged them to pursue further studies at college or university and kept in touch with them after they had gone. If for any reason a pupil was compelled to leave school and go to work, Miss Dickinson's perpetual interest followed him. She spared no effort to see that the job was suitable. Many a time, it is said, she walked all over Superior and Duluth across the bay, helping students to find satisfactory employment.

She never married or thought seriously of marriage. She didn't have time. With her, teaching was more than a profession. It was life itself.

But what had come to be the sum total of life to her was to be summarily taken away. After she had taught 22 full terms and was rounding out the last months of her twenty-third, she suddenly was dismissed from service. After becoming a veritable educational institution of Superior, she was unequivocally fired by the Board of Education, which acted at the instance of Superintendent of Schools Paul R. Spencer. Among other charges was the basic complaint that Miss Dickinson had been guilty of "unprofessional conduct" in that she had criticized policies of the Superintendent and had "failed utterly to co-operate with the school organization."

Reduced to fit the dimensions of a nutshell, the "unprofessional conduct" was this: Compelled for months to get along without textbooks for her classes on the ground that no funds were available, she had observed what appeared to her an appalling waste of school funds in elaborate maintenance of the Superintendent's office. She had made remarks to the effect that it was a pity there was no money for books when the Superintendent was able to hire enough office help to run a department store. That remark, in one form or another, reached the ears of Superintendent Spencer. He got the board together in a closed session, and when it ended, without further investigation, Miss Dickinson's official head was in the basket.

To the students of Superior and their parents, many of whom had gone to school to "Dickie" themselves, this was an overt act comparable to the sinking of the Lusitania. The town was outraged. Discontent with Spencer — a feeling which had smoldered in some quarters for two years—burst into livid flame. More than a thousand students from Central High School and some 300 from another high school put down their books and walked out. Backed by their parents, they stayed out for a month. There were excited mass meetings and fiery speeches. Every day for 19 school days, picket lines stood before the gates of learning passing out strike literature and hand bills.

"Strike for Dickie," was the battle cry. "Strike for Dickie" and "Down with Spencer."

In a few weeks, the students were to have new and additional cause for revolt. Charged with lending a too sympathetic ear to the strikers, Clifford G. Wade, white-haired and patriarchal principal of Central, was rebuked by the Superintendent and dropped from the teaching staff, the board voting, at Spencer's behest, not to re-employ him for next year. He also had been guilty of failure to co-operate. He had not been active enough in discouraging the strike. He had not been in sympathy with Spencer and his methods. Therefore, he was an obstructionist and must be got rid of.

HARDLY less popular than Miss Dickinson was Principal Wade. He was benign and fatherly. He never drove students to do anything. He led them, and they fairly worshiped him. It was the same way with their parents. During his 12 years in Superior he had been an ardent worker for civic betterment and political reform. Not a few politicians in Superior were believed to wish that Wade would betake himself to other fields. One was said to be Mayor Fred Baxter, who appointed the present School Board. Indeed, Baxter's enmity for him was so marked that it had been whispered for a long time that Spencer had been brought to Superior by friends of Baxter for the express purpose of getting Wade out of the system.

However that may be, his dismissal—it was that in substance—following on the heels of Dickie's ousting, set the town upon an unprecedented rampage. First Dickie and then Wade! By hundreds, the citizens flocked to mass meetings. There wasn't a building in town big enough to accommodate the crowds. Oratory thundered as it had never thundered before in Superior. From a school strike the disturbance had grown into a flaming political upheaval.

While still at white heat, the citizens rushed pell mell to the polls in a special city election, the real purpose of which was a public protest against the action of the board and a vote of confidence in the ousted teachers. The question upon which the vote actually was cast was that of changing School Board membership from an office appointive by the Mayor to an elective one, but that meant much besides a new method of selecting board members.

IN PARTICULAR, it meant putting Miss Dickinson and Wade back in their jobs and getting rid of Spencer. Everybody knew that. They knew what a board elected by popular vote would be pledged to do, and they voted the change with unstinted vengeance. Even though general opinion was that Superior really preferred an appointive board, the issue carried five to one. In some wards, the vote was as one-sided as 15 to 1, and in Spencer's own ward the balloting ran 10 to 1 against him.

Meanwhile, the Superior voters are taking such short cuts as can be found to oust some of the present board members. At two members in particular is this action directed. Both are ministers—the Rev. A. T. Ekblad, Lutheran pastor and president of the School Board, and the Rev. William Hood, Episcopalian rector. Early in the fight, when Ekblad's resignation was demanded along with Spencer's, interested citizens took the case into court on the ground that Ekblad and Hood were not freeholders and therefore not eligible to hold public office. Each managed to dig up a deed to some property, Ekblad's being title to a one-foot strip bordering on the alley of a 25-foot lot, and Hood's—though it was title to a full lot—was a deed which had not been registered until the morning of his appearance in court. Both managed thus to qualify, but as their terms will expire soon anyway the question of eligibility now makes little difference.

Before the election was held the students, a little appalled at their own success, had gone back to their classes. They finished the term with the same show of orderliness and diligence they had exhibited during the strike. Three strike leaders who had been suspended were reinstated and all were graduated with the senior class of 300.

WITH credit to the 1300 students let it be said, even on the authority of their opponents, that the Superior school strike was about the most orderly walkout ever conducted in Superior. The walkout was called on April 1 and ended on May 2. In that time not one instance of disorder was reported; not a window was broken; not a striker arrested. And the students conducted their own fight from beginning to end, negotiating with the board for Miss Dickinson's reinstatement, supervising the issuance of strike literature and picketing Central High School.

There were six principal strike leaders who rounded up the students and did the speaking at mass meetings. These were Viola Wick, Mary Brown, Denis McGenty, Chadbourne Whitmore, Conrad Giesen and Ernest Newton. All were members of the senior class and all were honor students. Viola Wick was salutatorian of the class and Mary Brown and Denis McGenty were voted "best citizens" of the student body earlier in the year. Their activities were not of the sort to encourage rowdyism. Nearly all the handbills issued carried in large letters a warning against disorder. The following is typical:

"Strikers, Attention! Spencer representatives are trying to break our strike. Beware false reports! Students will not return until this mess is settled. Remember what they did to Dickie. Be orderly and you can't help but win. Goodbye, Mr. Spencer, Goodbye!"

That phrase, bidding adieu to Mr. Spencer, became famous. It formed the theme of a strike song sung to the tune of the popular air, "Bye Bye, Blackbird."

At the start the walkout affected only Central High School. Of the attendance of 1105, more than 1000 walked out and stayed out. These were joined later by about 300 from East High School who remained away from classes for a few days as a sympathetic gesture. Virtually all the strikers kept up their work by study at home, going to sympathetic teachers now and then for advance assignments and conferences. This help extended to striking pupils as individuals was one of the factors which figured in Principal Wade's dismissal.

PRINCIPAL WADE was preparing to take up his summer's work at the Superior Normal School when I visited him here a few days ago. Promptly after the board's failure to re-employ him at Central, the Normal had offered him a permanent position starting at once. He had acccepted for the summer only, preferring to remain in a position to take back his old post if a new board should offer it to him.

Elderly and of dignified, scholarly bearing, Principal Wade revealed almost at first glimpse the type of personality which might be expected to win the loyalty of students and hold it. He may be a bit old-fashioned and easy going, as Superintendent Spencer says, but he is the firm, yet kindly, type who can do about anything he wants to with a student body. Superintendent Spencer is young, rather striking in appearance, suave and business-like. He is a likable fellow and, in the general opinion of the town, "knows his onions" about efficiency and Columbia University theories of education.

While denying Spencer's charge that he encouraged the strike, Wade let it be known promptly where he stood on the matter of co-operation with the superintendent's policies.

"Mr. Spencer," he declared, "has only one idea of co-operation. That is strict obedience to his orders. I have felt compelled to take a stand flatly opposite to many of the superintendent's policies which, I was convinced, would result in detriment to the students. It is true there were frequent clashes. For one thing, the superintendent came here intent upon making everything follow his model graphs and charts. The personal element was entirely ignored. That chart system was pursued so far that children were being put in grades where they did not belong simply because the charts called for children of their age in those grades, and other children were being unjustly flunked in order to make the percentage of failures come out right. Old fashioned or not, it seems to me any conscientious educator would or should oppose such tactics."

"MY 'unprofessional conduct,' so far as I have been able to learn, was this," said Miss Dickinson. "I remarked at times that it was a pity the students had to go without books when money was being thrown away in extravagant maintenance of the superintendent's office; that the school couldn't afford to buy $300 worth of classics and yet the annual school report was printed on expensive vellum paper with half tone sepia portraits of Spencer, Ekblad and Hood. After my dismissal I went to the courthouse and got the facts about Spencer's handling of school funds. I found he had spent $160,000 more in his two years than the preceding superintendent had in a similar period. And this additional expenditure represented no appreciable addition to school property or facilities. Printing bills were enormous, as were bills for office supplies and stamps. It seemed unjust that, with all this extravagance, economy should be practiced where it hurt the students most."

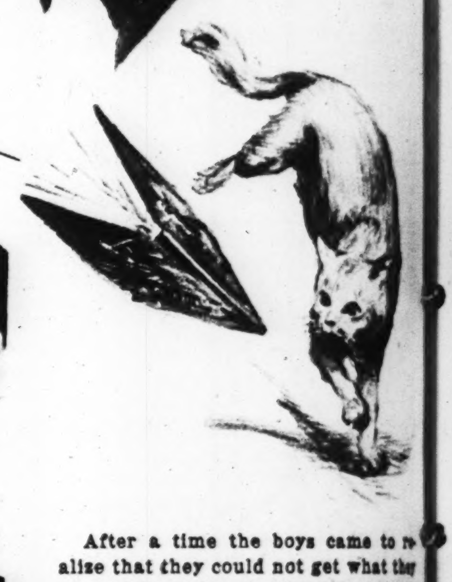
Superintendent Spencer smiles cynically at the charges against him and at references to the school strike. He argues that the town's upheaval was the outgrowth of old political feuds rather than the student strike. There was in his bearing a trace of arrogance perhaps, but it seemed to me after half an hour's conversation that each side had misunderstood the other and that Spencer's bark was worse than his bite. For Miss Dickinson's work in the classroom he had nothing but praise. "But," he declared, "she became such a persistent obstructionist that it was impossible to keep her and maintain the authority of the superintendent's office. It was either drop her and Principal Wade or get out myself."

Of jolly disposition, Miss Dickinson, who looks younger than her 47 years or so, has become reconciled to the idea of being fired. She has not tried to find a new position. Immediately after her dismissal she taught for 10 days at Brule, a little fishing town up the coast, to complete her twenty-third term. After 25 full terms of service Wisconsin teachers are paid a pension by the State. She was 10 days short of completing her twenty-third when she was dropped. Brule, however, rallied to the occasion and saved her from having to lose credit for this year. She is now waiting with a good deal of interest to see what the new school board will do about her and Wade and Spencer.

CURING the STRANGE "BAD BOY" DISEASE

Dr. Earl D. Bond.

A Juvenile Crime Wave in Philadelphia That Was Finally Traced to the After Effects of Influenza and How Its Victims Are Now Being Treated.



A classroom full of "incorrigibles."

Dr. Bond's patients working and playing in the fields.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine.

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA had an epidemic of bad boys and girls about eight years ago. Social workers, the directors of homes for incorrigible boys, school principals and superintendents, teachers and truant officers were forced to the conclusion that some new curse was upon them.

Boys and girls who had always been models of conduct suddenly, and for no apparent reason, began to behave terribly.

The reports came from all over the city—from the slums to fashionable Rittenhouse Square. One youngster of 9 who had been his mother's pride was found to be responsible for the mysterious deflation of an amazing number of automobile tires, a little problem that had absorbed the police for several weeks. When confronted with the evidence, he laughed and then he cried and then he ran away from home.

Many schoolrooms were disrupted. Students whose behavior had been exemplary stood up in class and fired a book at the teacher's head. Others laughed, sang and talked, utterly ignoring their lessons.

Children who had led the class in Sunday school began to use the most surprising profanity, language new and shocking to their mothers. These bad children lied like accomplished adults. When sent to the store on an errand, they usually spent the money that had been given them for candy and came home two or three hours later without explanations. They didn't seem to feel there was any need for explanation.

THEY set fires, too, and in at least one instance a youngster of 12 was directly responsible for the death of an aged woman, seriously burned while trying to put out the flames.

Homes in which there were several children were completely demoralized. The bad child abused and maltreated his younger brothers and sisters and teased and nagged the older children. When remonstrated with, these bad boys and girls were just as liable as not to pick up a plate and hurl it at the nearest grownup.

Naturally, in the majority of homes, the old parental methods of correction were resorted to—spankings and serious moral lectures, pleading and fears. These remedies seemed to have an effect just opposite to the one desired. Many parents put their children in sanitariums and reform schools. But they couldn't stay there very long, for their behavior soon disrupted discipline and order.

The records of many of these children had been studied by physicians and psychologists. When the alarming malady—for it was just that—had seemed to reach an epidemic stage, they began to compare notes. Although a comparatively small number of families were affected, certain similarities were seen at once.

It was observed that there were certain common symptoms. Many of these children, before they had gone on the rampage, had shown signs of extreme sleepiness, many of them had been unable to stay awake during the daytime, many of them were afflicted with double vision and their eyes crossed. Many of them had had colds, accompanied by slight fever.

And, most significant, all of them—virtually without exception—had had influenza at the time of the war epidemic, or shortly afterwards. This was the most tangible clew on which Dr. Earl D. Bond and Dr. Edward A. Strecker of the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and other physicians and psychologists set to work.

Dr. Bond had been one of the first to recognize one of the most serious after effects of influenza in grown-ups. One of Doctor Bond's associates during the war had been a physician who had had charge of influenza patients and who had himself contracted the disease. On his return, at the close of the war, he began to show peculiar nervous symptoms, twitching and lack of control of certain muscles, paralysis of certain nerve centers. Others who had suffered from influenza during the war began to show the same symptoms. It was soon discovered that a portion of the brain had been affected. It was recognized as encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain.

Those who were studying the records of the bad boys and girls were not long in determining that they had all—before their unaccountable behavior—suffered from encephalitis.

Their next conclusion was that this unaccountable behavior, this strange and uncontrollable wilfulness, was a direct outgrowth of the brain disease which in turn was an after effect of influenza, making children bad because they had not established those normal habits which would carry them through life as had their elders. They were strengthened in this view by reports which came from other cities and even other countries. While in Chicago, St. Louis, New York and elsewhere the unaccountable increase in the number of bad boys and girls had not seemed to reach epidemic proportions, perhaps because the majority of cities are not so well equipped with social workers to record such phenomena as Philadelphia, from the juvenile courts and other agencies came innumerable reports of bad children and baffled, frustrated parents. England and Japan had noted the same thing. So had Sweden, Denmark, Spain and other European countries. In England there were thousands of these children and so abnormal was their misconduct that it was given the name "Apache behavior," after the brigands who are reputed, in fiction at least, to dominate the underworld of Paris.

AFTER mature consideration of all the information available on the outbreak, it was given the name of "post encephalitic behavior." But giving it a long name was far from solving the problem.

The regular institutions couldn't take the children. Parents were soon unnerved and exhausted. It began to seem as though there was no place for these bad children in an age which doesn't look with a very tolerant eye on the old type of Peck's bad boy.

In many respects they were like other boys and girls. Various tests revealed that their intelligence was unimpaired. Chiefly it was the moral sense that was absent. Mentally they were the equals of other children of their own age. Morally they were babies. They ranged in age from 2 to 16 and even 17 years.

These children and their problem appealed to Doctor Bond. Beneath the casual, matter-of-fact exterior of the psychologist there is in this man a very warm feeling for the humans who come to him with some mental quirk that bars the way to happiness. Moreover, there was his scientific interest in this new problem.

Doctor Bond took 10 boys—10 of the worst cases that had been reported. He established an experimental school in the Pennsylvania Hospital, a private institution.

For two years, with a staff of three assistants, Doctor Bond has directed this school to reclaim Philadelphia's worst bad boys.

He began on the assumption that they must be kept occupied all the time, occupied with work which would interest them. That and the realization that a sympathetic appreciation of their difficulties was necessary. The staff of the school consisted of a specially trained teacher, a psychiatric nurse and a physician.

At first all the old difficulties recurred. The boys romped through the wards, tore up their beds and created general havoc. After a few weeks they began to quiet down a little bit.

It was soon found that their attention could not be held to any one task for more than 20 minutes at a time. For that reason their days consisted of a constant shifting, passing from one thing to another.

A swimming pool and a large outdoor playground and an indoor gymnasium were popular. Each boy had his own garden, and in it he raised vegetables and flowers. In the winter months they spent considerable time in the workshop, making various things in wood. A part of the morning was spent in the schoolroom in regular school work, which they did, for the most part, fully as well as other boys of their own age.

TOGETHER they built on some vacant and wooded ground a clubhouse, a shacklike structure of brick, stone and timber, with a fireplace and chimney. This, according to Doctor Bond, was one of the most important experiments in bringing the boys back to normal. It gave them a sense of the group spirit.

No physical punishment was employed, as this had been proved futile before the boys came to the hospital. Such penalties as being put to bed, an hour or two in the bathtub, meals alone, deprivation of some liberty or special privilege, such as the swimming pool, were found to be sufficient.

They frequently went to a farm near the city to camp out for a week end or sometimes for an entire week.

Each day's conduct was marked by the heads of departments. Conduct in school, conduct in the workshop, at the gymnasium, at meals and during recreational periods received a daily rating. These different marks were averaged for each day. At the end of a week those who had attained a given average were rewarded with an automobile ride, a visit to the farm, to the zoo or the movies or with some special privilege at the hospital.

After a time the boys came to realize that they could not get what they wanted by crying, teasing or going into a tantrum. This was an important step. After a few months in the hospital most of their difficulties about sleeping had cleared up. They were able to sleep at night, and they didn't fall asleep at unexpected times during the day.

Signs of improvement were encouraging. Two mothers removed their sons from the hospital and took them home. They reverted almost at once to their old misbehavior. The other boys continued toward the ways of normal boyhood.

In contrast, little or no success was had in training individual cases in hospitals and institutions through the country. Both boys and girls under these conditions continued to behave as if possessed unless forcible measures were taken to restrain them. In only a few isolated instances where mother or father, and sometimes both, gave virtually their entire time to the bad child was there any beginning of a return to normal.

Speaking before a convention of American psychiatrists in Cincinnati not long ago, Doctor Bond gave a report on the success of his experiment. All the boys had been sent back to their homes and, with one exception, they were behaving after the fashion of the average boy, neither very bad nor very good. Apparently the experimental school had had little effect on the one exception. On returning to his home he went to the room of a boarder in the house, stole some whisky, called a taxicab and drove off to the public school which he had once attended.

Some of these boys, Doctor Bond reported, have been in their own homes for a month or more, and their parents report that they are very nearly as they were before they suffered from the encephalitis attack.

MANY of them liked the school so well that they are anxious to return, according to Doctor Bond. Their places have been taken, however, by 10 other bad boys, the most urgent cases on the waiting list.

On the records of the Pennsylvania Hospital there are nearly a hundred such unmanageable children. There are numerous others in Pennsylvania, many of them unreported, according to Doctor Bond. And new cases are developing from time to time even now.

"It makes one wonder," Doctor Bond said, "about other children who go wrong when we see how insidious in its onset encephalitis can be. We wonder how many unknown or unrecognized inflammations have swept over the brains of our habitual criminals in their youth. Fewer criminals may be born bad and more may be made bad by disease and bad management after."

Dr. Earl D. Bond.

After a time the boys came to reze that they could not get what they nted by crying, teasing or going into antrum. This was an important
p. After a few months in the hosal most of their difficulties about eping had cleared up. They were e to sleep at night, and they didn't l asleep at unexpected times during day.

Signs of improvement were encourng. Two mothers removed their s from the hospital and took them me. They reverted almost at once their old misbehavior. The other s continued toward the ways of mal boyhood.

n contrast, little or no success was d in training individual cases in hosls and institutions through the ntry. Both boys and girls under e conditions continued to behave as possessed unless forcible measures e taken to restrain them. In only ew isolated instances where mother father, and sometimes both, gave ually their entire time to the bad ld was there any beginning of a re-to normal.

Speaking before a convention of erican psychiatrists in Cincinnati, long ago, Doctor Bond gave eport on the success of his experi-
nt. All the boys had been sent back heir homes and, with one exception, y were behaving after the fashion the average boy, neither very bad very good. Apparently the experi-ntal school had had little effect on one exception. On returning to his me he went to the room of a board-in the house, stole some whisky, led a taxicab and drove off to the lic school which he had once atded.

Some of these boys, Doctor Bond re-ted, have been in their own homes a month or more, and their pars report that they are very nearly as y were before they suffered from encephalitis attack.

MANY of them liked the school so well that they are anxious to return, according to Doctor
nd. Their places have been taken, wever, by 10 other bad boys, the st urgent cases on the waiting list.
On the records of the Pennsylvania spital there are nearly a hundred h unmanageable children. There numerous others in Pennsylvania, ny of them unreported, according to ctor Bond. And new cases are deoping from time to time even now.
"It makes one wonder," Doctor nd said, "about other children who wrong when we see how insidious in onset encephalitis can be. We won-how many unknown or unrecog-ed inflammations have swept over brains of our habitual criminals in ir youth. Fewer criminals may be rn bad and more may be made bad disease and bad management

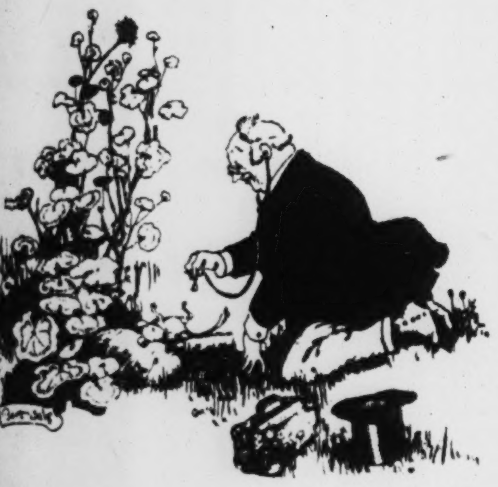
The DORMOUSE and the DOCTOR

Illustrated by Bert N. Salg



There once was a Dormouse who lived in a bed
Of delphiniums (blue) and geraniums (red),
And all the day long he'd a wonderful view
Of geraniums (red) and delphiniums (blue).

A Doctor came hurrying round, and he said:
"Tut-tut, I am sorry to find you in bed.
Just say 'Ninety-nine', while I look at your chest. . . .
Don't you find that chrysanthemums answer the best?"

The Dormouse looked round at the view and replied
(When he'd said "Ninety-nine") that he'd tried and he'd tried,
And much the most answering things that he knew
Were geraniums (red) and delphiniums (blue).

The Doctor stood frowning and shaking his head,
And he took up his shiny silk hat as he said:
"What the patient requires is a change," and he went To see some chrysanthemum people in Kent.

The Dormouse lay there, and he gazed at the view
Of geraniums (red) and delphiniums (blue),
And he knew there was nothing he wanted instead
Of delphiniums (blue) and geraniums (red).

The Doctor came back and,
to show what he meant,
He had brought some chrysanthemum cuttings from Kent.
"Now these," he remarked,
"give a much better view
Than geraniums (red) and delphiniums (blue)."

They took out their spades and they dug up the bed
Of delphiniums (blue)
and geraniums (red),

And they planted chrysanthemums (yellow and white).
"And now," said the Doctor, "we'll soon have you right."

The Dormouse looked out, and he said with a sigh:
"I suppose all these people know better than I.
It was silly, perhaps, but I did like the view
Of geraniums (red) and delphiniums (blue)."

The Doctor came round and examined his chest,
And ordered him Nourishment, Tonics, and Rest.
"How very effective," he said, as he shook
The thermometer, "all these chrysanthemums look!"

The Dormouse turned over to shut out the sight
Of the endless chrysanthemums (yellow and white).
"How lovely," he thought,
"to be back in a bed
Of delphiniums (blue) and geraniums (red)."

The Doctor said,
"Tut! It's another attack!"
And ordered him Milk and Massage-of-the-back,
And Freedom-from-worry and Drives-in-a-car,
And murmured, "How sweet your chrysanthemums are!"

The Dormouse lay there with his paws to his eyes,
And imagined himself such a pleasant surprise:
"I'll pretend the chrysanthemums turn to a bed
Of delphiniums (blue) and geraniums (red)!"

The Doctor next morning was rubbing his hands,
And saying, "There's nobody quite understands
These cases as I do! The cure has begun!
How fresh the chrysanthemums look in the sun!"

The Dormouse lay happy, his eyes were so tight
He could see no chrysanthemums, yellow or white,
And all that he felt at the back of his head
Were delphiniums (blue) and geraniums (red).

And this is the reason (Aunt Emily said)
If a Dormouse gets in a chrysanthemum bed,
You will find (so Aunt Emily says) that he lies
Fast asleep on his front with his paws to his eyes.

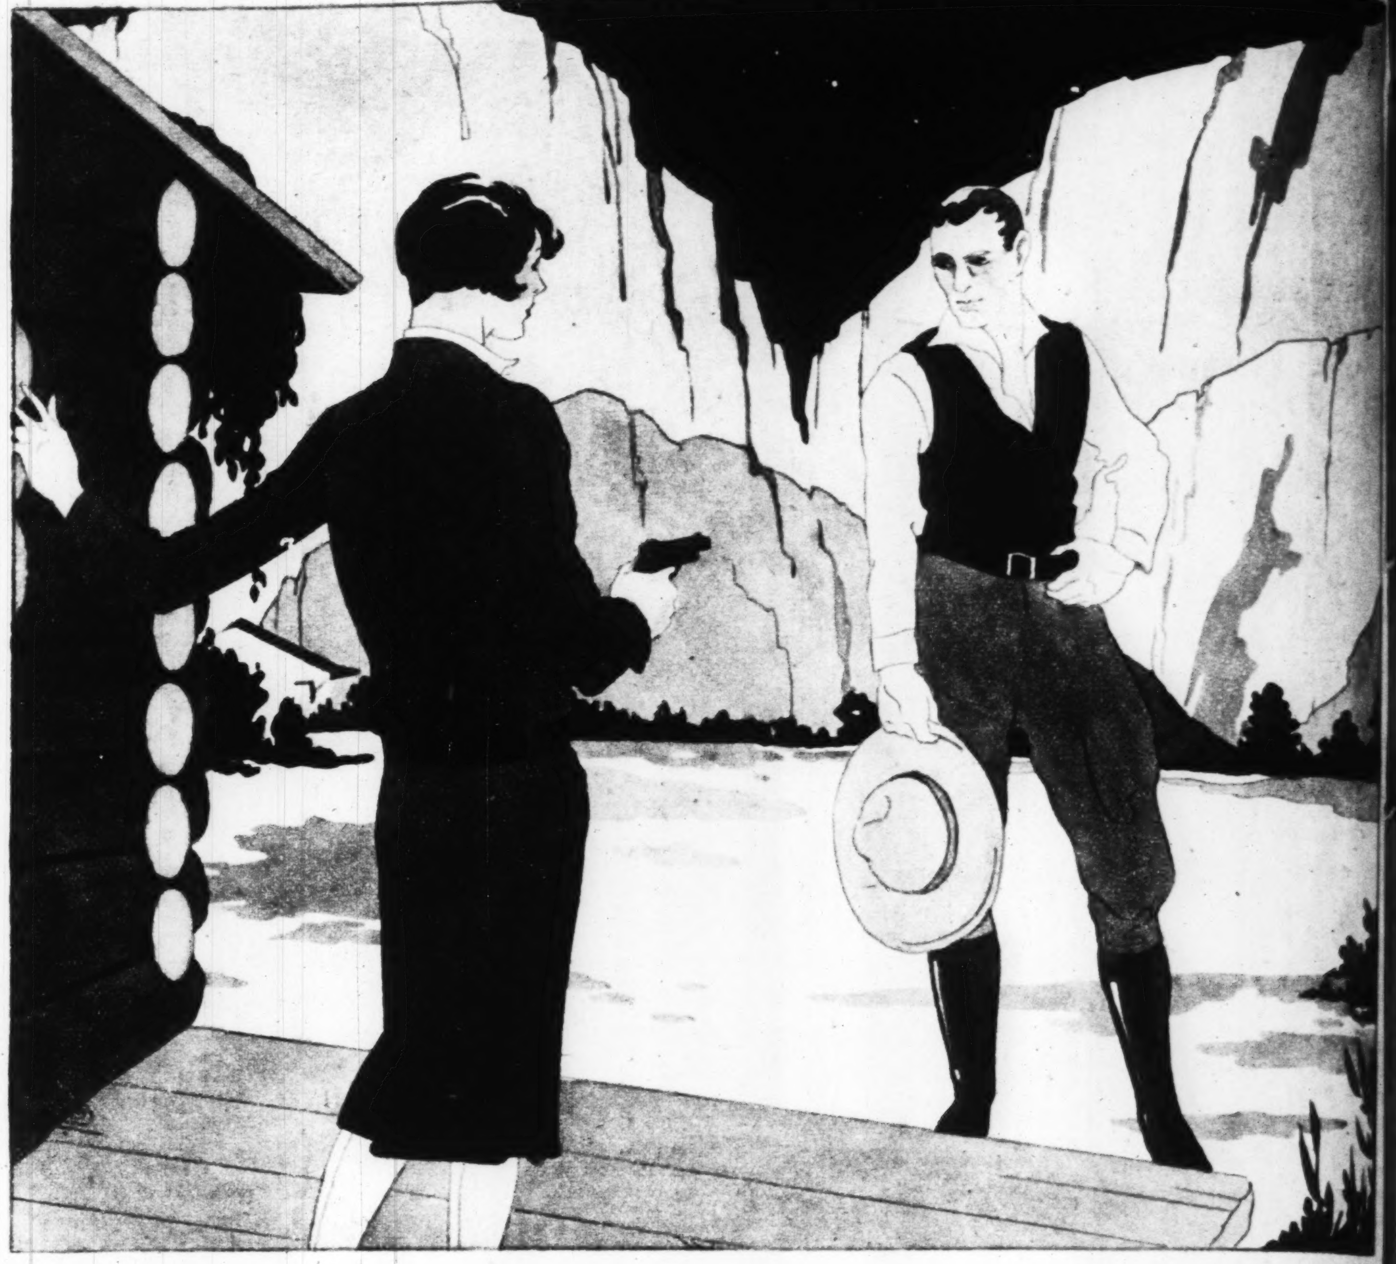
THREE BURROS

By WILL IRWIN

An Adventure in Mining and Love



In her right hand she was pointing a small automatic pistol.

THE full moon of July had drawn Grant Hollister into the open. The chance by which he saw three burros sprang from no coincidence more remarkable than that. They had reached the passage of the trail below the shelf of rock on which he lay, and were going on. The first one disappeared into the shadows before he could identify it. He had better luck with the second. It was a burro—loaded. It disappeared; another popped into the field of vision. This one seemed actually to stagger. Bringing up the rear was a tall man on a small horse.

The train had halted; there were irregular hoofbeats; there were oaths. It seemed a foreign language, with an odd staccato beat. An electric torch brought out, for a moment, the branches above the corner of the trail, but revealed nothing of the group at their foot. Branches rustled, hoofs beat; the train went on.

The staccato rhythm seemed to stir a memory. As he scrambled back to camp, he was reaching for something which eluded him. His subconscious mind must have worked on the subject all night long; for, next morning, he said to himself:

"Why, of course."

The watchman at the Ravenal tunnel, who had run him off the property last week, spoke with a foreign accent. Tall, too. Other details of that adventure came into his head. On the plateau before the tunnel, he had seen hobbled burros and a sorrel bronco. The watchman of the Ravenal, without question. But why was he driving a pack train by night up that route? This trail, once the only approach to Ravenal, had been abandoned 20 years ago, when the owners got their road built from Silver Moon. The Ravenal, tied up in litigation, had been inactive; but the road was passable.

"WELL, it's none of my business!" said Grant Hollister to himself. Having said this, he proceeded to make it his business. He slipped a geologist's hammer into his belt and turned, not down into the valley, as he had intended, but up the trail. The hoofprints in the earth were plain. He followed to that turn below his shelf, where the train had halted. There the tracks lay confused. To one side lay a quart or so of fresh yellow dirt, wholly extraneous to the loam underfoot. It had been pawed over, apparently; Grant could even trace the finger tracks. He pawed it himself; picked up something, examined it, and whistled.

It was a twist of virgin gold.

He made another examination. There were more twists; there was dust. He pieced together his memories of the night before. Doubtless a sack had burst, or come untied. That was the meaning of the halt on the trail. The horseman, when he flashed his torch, had picked over the spillings for nuggets. Grant scooped up a handful, tied it up in his handkerchief.

A discovery, a secret mine—or what? Grant stood for a moment, hesitant, then he went up the trail. The hoofprints persisted. He came to the top of the high mountain shoulder. There the old trail divided. The main fork led to the right, toward Ravenal tunnel; the side fork, now almost eliminated, he had never been able to trace to its source. The tracks, here very clear, came from the right.

From behind a tangle of mountain laurel, he came out suddenly onto the little plateau. Here, the mountain fell away in a long slope which was almost a cliff. So narrow was that shelf from which the owners of the Ravenal had driven their tunnel that the old dump of its active days, now overgrown with weeds, spilled down the hillside like slag down the heap of a smelter. A dilapidated toolhouse and a log cabin hung over the landscape like eagles' nests. Except for a rough clearing about the cabin, the plateau was a riot of weeds and wild flowers. At its further end gaped the mouth of the road. Beyond was a glimpse of another dump. The prism at its tunnel door was overgrown; and the single cabin stood partially unroofed.

Grant stood reconnoitering—a long-legged, slim-waisted six-footer, with a lean face and tousled brown hair.

HE WALKED to the central cabin and knocked. There was a pause. His finer senses registered movement within.

Suddenly the door burst open. He was aware of a slim figure, of a smart, brown tailor-made, of a fresh, untanned complexion, of hazel eyes, of bobbed, sloe-black hair, before he perceived one of the few phenomena potent to draw the eyes of any young man from those of any girl.

In her right hand she was pointing a small automatic pistol. The hand was wobbling nervously, dangerously. He awaited the instant when it pointed past his left arm and pounced upon it with both hands. He gave a wrench at her wrist; she released her hold. Only then did she emit a scream, jump backward, and, as though her legs had given out, sink down on the edge of a bunk, her eyes wide with terror.

He slipped the pistol into his pocket. When he looked up from that operation her expression had changed. The terror had gone from her eyes.

"I'm sorry," he said. "But, when you expect to be shot—you're a little abrupt."

She said nothing.

"To reassure you, in case you've mistaken me for someone else," he went on—talking fast, to hide embarrassment—"I'm an innocent bystander. My name is Grant Hollister. I'm a mining engineer, by profession"——

"Do you—are you employed by Rossiter Flint?"

"No, I've nothing to do with this property. Nor with any other property hereabouts—now. I came up here for my firm to make an examination. The proposition fell through. They wired me to take my vacation before I returned. I've been camping out and adding to my education by looking over the formations of this region. I dropped in this morning to ask if I might inspect this tunnel."

"If that's the case," she said—and, for the first time, her voice came out clear and natural, "please excuse me!"

"Excuse me for burdening you with so much of my life story," he retorted. "But, when a young lady has just tried to shoot a young gentleman, it warrants confidences."

"I didn't go to shoot you," she said; "only scare you away."

"I was safe as a church," he replied. "My abruptness was unpardonable, in the circumstances. It wouldn't shoot. You see, you hadn't released the safety catch!"

Grant laid down the gun on the table.

"You're from the East, aren't you?" he asked.

"I am."

"So am I. I was thinking that when a New Yorker comes to the effete West, he ought to give up gun-toting. Follow the custom of the country."

"Well, it's pretty near New York," she said. "Yonkers."

"I was brought up a commuter, too—Montclair. You seem to be alone here. I suppose there's no one around who can give me permission to look over the grounds?"

"I can give you permission—and will," she replied. "You see—I'm the owner now—or one of them. The other is my mother."

"Oh, you've bought"——

"No, I've—we've won the suit. This property has been in litigation for years"——

"I've heard that. Family affair, wasn't it?"

"YES. Between us and my cousin, Rossiter. Well, we got a final decision last week. Mother can't travel. So I came out to see what could be done about starting up. Mother says I always take hold of things by the wrong handle. And I suppose I do. Try to shoot a young man, for example, and don't remember to fix the gun. I should have hired an engineer at Denver. I expected Petersen—he's the watchman—to be here; I telegraphed I was coming this very morning. And he isn't here. Do you know Petersen?"

"I've seen him."

"Do you know where he is?"

Grant was glad the question came in that form. He could answer truthfully in the negative.

"Do you know my cousin, Rossiter?"

"No."

"Have you seen him about here? Medium-sized man, slim, straight, about 35, black hair with a little white lick in front, and acts as though he'd just bought the Rocky Mountains."

"No."

"Well, I have," she said. And her eyes looked as they had when she stared at him from the edge of the bunk. "Last night, when I left the train at Ardendale to take the stage for Silver Moon. He has no business around here, especially now. He's supposed to be in New York. When I saw him, and when Petersen wasn't here—well, it was spooky! I've been here an hour"——

"How did you come from Silver Moon?"

"Hired a flivver—it's parked down below—there was as good as no road at all, the last stretch."

THEY were both silent. He stood looking at her, his senses recording a firm, straight nose, a generous mouth, a tilt of the head that just escaped being coquettish. She, on her part, regarded him hesitantly, as though wishing something and fearing to ask.

"If you don't mind, I think it's just as well not to leave you alone here," he said, finally.

"Oh, if it isn't too much trouble"—

"I'm on my vacation. I'll stay until Petersen comes back, at any rate."

"I was just thinking of something else," she said. "You see, we really need a mining engineer. That is, unless it costs too much. After all these years of lawyers' fees—there isn't a great deal left"——

"No charge for inspection," he said. "The rest can be determined later. May I ask, by the way"—here his eyes smiled as they met hers—"how am I to address my employer?"

"I'm Sally Flint. Of Yonkers, as aforesaid. My father was Marcus Flint. He owned this mine. He found it in the beginning. He and his brother, Cato. Father bought Cato out. They died, and mother went East to live. And then Rossiter—he's Uncle Cato's son—brought suit—but heavens"—her voice took on a note of mock despair—"if I go on with that suit, I'll bore you as much as I've been bored, ever since I can remember."

Grant heard all this; but his eyes were searching the cabin. A bunk, furnished with blankets, clean and folded. A cookstove; pots, pans, skillets, all shined and polished, ranged on nails behind the stove; a row of nondescript clothes, including two oil-skin slickers; a chest.

Grant stepped over to the chest, opened it.

"I'm starting my investigation of the claim," he said. "You might help. Poke round the place and see if you can find any papers." And he went on pawing over the chest. Work shirts. Two white shirts and collars. But no cravat. Red flannel underwear. A few spilled .44-caliber cartridges, but no gun. No papers, unless you could call a ruled writing pad that. He ran his eye over the clothes hanging against the wall. No store clothes among them. Two old hats, one furnished with a miner's lamp; two pairs of heavy boots, yellow with clay. But no walking shoes.

Grant spoke so suddenly that Sally started and turned full round to face him.

"Wherever he went, Petersen wore his best bib and tucker. Sleuth-hound Hollister, the engineer-detective, deduces that from the following circumstance, namely: There are white shirts, indicating that he owned store clothes. There are no store clothes. Any papers?"

"Not a scrap, so far."

GRANT glanced again round the cabin; and his eye stopped on the stove. He raised the front set of lids.

"He burned the papers," he said. "And he didn't get supper here last night. If he ate at all, he ate cold."

Sally looked into the stove. On a bed of ashes lay the black foam of burned paper.

Grant dipped into the mess. "How did you sign your telegram to Petersen?"

"Sarah Flint."

"Here it is, I suppose." He held out a yellow corner, burned at two edges; it bore only the letters "—ah Flint."

"He got your telegram. And he went away. In his good clothes. But he didn't pack up his things. He left in a hurry. The question is—will he come back?"

The girl's eyes grew grave.

"Did he wear a beard or was he smooth-shaven?" she asked.

"Bright idea!" exclaimed Grant. "He wore a mustache. Look for razors, shaving things in general."

No razor, no toilet articles, though they searched the whole place.

"He went in a hurry. And he isn't coming back," Sally Flint summarized.

"Things never turn out as you expect," he reassured her. But, had she known him better, she would have caught in his voice its first note of insincerity. The handful of ore seemed to burn in his pocket like stolen goods; and he wondered if he should tell her what he had seen last night. But the look in her eyes restrained him. Why hurt her—unless he was sure?

AFTER a pause, Grant flicked his cigarette over the ledge. And: "I'm going to inspect the tunnel—if it's in shape to be entered. Coming along?" he asked casually.

"Why, of course, I'm coming along!" she said.

"Then you must dress the part. While you're putting on Petersen's cleanest slicker and boots and hat, I'll look over the papers—if you brought any"——

"Papers about the mine?"

"Yes. All I want is the report to the court on the state of things when they closed it."

She ran into the cabin, returned and: "Is this it?" she asked.

"Yes," said Grant, after one swift inspection.

When she again emerged from the cabin, he looked up with a grave, absorbed face, which broke into a smile at the figure she cut in Petersen's long slicker, his most shocking hat, his rubber boots.

He donned Petersen's other slicker, the hat with the lamp and Petersen's leather boots.

"Take my electric torch," he said, at the mouth of the tunnel, "but don't use it until I tell you. We must economize on light."

She followed him into twilight, into darkness.

"Don't stumble over the ties," he warned suddenly. "It's the remains of the railway—where they ran mule cars when the mine was working."

For a time he was silent. Suddenly he took the torch from her.

"Was Petersen instructed to keep up the mine—replace the timbering?" he asked, as he handed back the torch.

"Why?"

"New timbering here—where there's been a cave-in," he replied.

Now, the light caught on a ladder, running upward at an angle.

"I'll go up first," he said, "and see if it's all safe." His lamp became only a reflected glow from the hole in the roof.

"All right—you can't fall—I'll keep the light on the rungs."

He lifted her up the last stages.

To their right there were no timbers; only an irregular rock wall, from which points like diamonds flickered.

Hollister pounded off a fragment of rock.

"Do you know the history of this mine?" he asked.

"It was a silver mine at first," she said. "Wire silver—or something. Then—when the silver was gone, they found they'd been working beside a vein of gold and hadn't known it. Father just happened to pick up a rich piece of ore on the dump. Not long after, he died—and the suit started."

"It's never really been worked for the gold, then?"

"No, I don't think it has," she answered.

ON THEY crept. There were more ladders. The tunnel weaved and turned. The further reaches of light were drowned in mysterious openings. It was no longer a square shaft, but an enormous chamber. Grant Hollister worked along the right-hand wall, where the light glittered on quartz crystals. She was aware that he was following a fissure in the rock. Its surfaces, mostly, lay bare to the light. But here and there it seemed stuffed with yellow dirt.

"Oh, that's the seam I've heard of," she said. "Show me my gold. I'm greedy!" He gathered a handful of the dirt in the fissure, extracted a pebble, cut it with his knife.

"Gee!" he exclaimed suddenly. "Give me the torch!"

He flashed the light into a round cavity. The crystals glittered as with dew.

He had lowered the torch to extinguish it, when its circle fell on a pile of dirt further along. He stopped. She was aware of a definite footprint in the yellow surface. Suddenly, he put his own foot down beside the print. She stood beside him.

"Why—why—it's the same," she said. "Have you"——

"I'm wearing Petersen's boots," he said, and snapped out the torch.

His eyes lay now in the shadow of the lamp on his hat.

"Oh, is anything wrong?" she asked.

"No, I suppose not. Let me finish, please." They were crawling on again. He had taken out a pocket rule now; was making measurements. Once more the torch flashed into a cavity. Once more the seam widened, narrow Suddenly the tunnel stopped, cut off b a sheer, smooth rock wall.

"The porphyry dike," he announce "end of the vein."

"Is anything wrong?" she repeat "You promised to tell me!"

"I'm afraid your mine's been looted!"

He waited, alert to catch her, if sh swayed. He watched her face, thro into full illumination by the lamp o his hat. It did not pale; but it fro She looked as though all emotion h sunk a fathom deep within her.

They said no more in the long pa sage homeward. Now the outer a blew on them; they stepped into th light. Only half-light, though, for th sun had set.

"Tell me everything now," she sa "See—I've made no trouble. How why—is there anything left?"

"Won't you wait until I see that re port again?"

A FAMOUS Parisian artist named Kees van Dongen, formerly a longshoreman in Rotterdam, has just caused a great sensation. He was talking about beauty in one of the Paris salons the other day when he remarked that he had found a woman more beautiful and more graceful than the Venus de Milo.

"Who is she?" all the jealous women cried.

He promised to present her at the next reception at his studio, and he kept his word.

"I want you to meet Madame Maureen Forrester-Agar, an Irish girl from the Argentine," he told his guests, presenting a charming young blonde with blue eyes, and he took some of the favored gentlemen aside to illustrate his ideas.

"A girl nowadays must be lithe and graceful to be beautiful," the great painter carefully explained over a cocktail.

"If she cannot ride, hunt, dance, enter an automobile or climb into an airplane lightly and gracefully she looks stupid even if she has a good face and figure.

"The Irish girl has grace in every movement, but imagine Venus de Milo ON A HORSE OR A DANCE FLOOR.

"Her body is too thick, and she looks as if she had never taken any exercise in all her life.

"She would simply look like a buxom milkmaid."

Madame Forrester-Agar was born in Dublin, married an Irishman living in Buenos Aires and, on Van Dongen's sworn word, is the best-looking and best-formed woman in Europe. She is spending the winter in Paris and the painter, who only accepts handsome women, has made several portraits of her.

SHE is about 26 years old, with perfect teeth, natural coloring and long, tapering hands and fingers that are extremely fine.

"I have seen the hands of thousands of women, but none that compare with hers," Van Dongen says.

She is five feet five inches tall, weighs 130 pounds, has a bust of thirty-four inches and a waist of twenty-four.

A plumb line dropped from the tip of her nose falls one inch in front of her large toe, in accordance with the beauty rule, and her shoulders and hips are in a straight line vertically.

"I have seen Annette Kellerman, and I don't consider that she compares with Mrs. Agar," Van Dongen adds.

Her skin is pure white and she modestly admits that there is not a blemish on her entire body.

She dances three hours every night, as she believes it is the best exercise.

"Then I'll stay," she announced.

He turned to her.

"Ra-ther not."

"It isn't your choice. Even if you leave, I stay."

Nearby, a rock rose from the ledge. There was earth at its foot, soft but dry. Against that he established her. He folded one blanket under her, enshrouded her with the other; laid a slicker over all.

Van Dongen Presents a New Venus

Famous Artist, Who Is Credited With Making Over the Frenchwoman's Figure, Introduces an Irish Girl as His New Ideal.

PARIS.

A FAMOUS Parisian artist named Kees van Dongen, formerly a longshoreman in Rotterdam, has just caused a great sensation. He was talking about beauty in one of the Paris salons the other day when he remarked that he had found a woman more beautiful and more graceful than the Venus de Milo.

"Who is she?" all the jealous women cried.

He promised to present her at the next reception at his studio, and he kept his word.

"I want you to meet Madame Maureen Forrester-Agar, an Irish girl from the Argentine," he told his guests, presenting a charming young blonde with blue eyes, and he took some of the favored gentlemen aside to illustrate his ideas.

"A girl nowadays must be lithe and graceful to be beautiful," the great painter carefully explained over a cocktail.

"If she cannot ride, hunt, dance, enter an automobile or climb into an airplane lightly and gracefully she looks stupid even if she has a good face and figure.

"The Irish girl has grace in every movement, but imagine Venus de Milo ON A HORSE OR A DANCE FLOOR.

"Her body is too thick, and she looks as if she had never taken any exercise in all her life.

"She would simply look like a buxom milkmaid."

Madame Forrester-Agar was born in Dublin, married an Irishman living in Buenos Aires and, on Van Dongen's sworn word, is the best-looking and best-formed woman in Europe. She is spending the winter in Paris and the painter, who only accepts handsome women, has made several portraits of her.

SHE is about 26 years old, with perfect teeth, natural coloring and long, tapering hands and fingers that are extremely fine.

"I have seen the hands of thousands of women, but none that compare with hers," Van Dongen says.

She is five feet five inches tall, weighs 130 pounds, has a bust of thirty-four inches and a waist of twenty-four.

A plumb line dropped from the tip of her nose falls one inch in front of her large toe, in accordance with the beauty rule, and her shoulders and hips are in a straight line vertically.

"I have seen Annette Kellerman, and I don't consider that she compares with Mrs. Agar," Van Dongen adds.

Her skin is pure white and she modestly admits that there is not a blemish on her entire body.

She dances three hours every night, as she believes it is the best exercise.

Mrs. Forrester-Agar's hand.

Van Dongen, incidentally, is the man generally credited as being responsible for the remarkable change that has taken place in the figure of the smart French woman.

A little while before the World War he commenced to paint racy, svelte, sports types of women and nearly everyone, particularly the plump ladies, laughed him to scorn.

"Men don't like skinny women," the plump ladies chortled in derision.

"But they all prefer race horses to Percherons," the artist politely retorted.

IN SPITE of all the ridicule poked at him, Van Dongen continued to paint his racy, snaky women—like Leonardo da Vinci, he always paints to the accompaniment of music — and show them in the Paris salon every year, and the Parisiennes suddenly discovered about seven years ago that he had hit on a wonderful new idea.

The artist had idealized the feminine type who can fly, ride, hunt, swim, dance and kick up her heels without looking heavy and awkward.

He mocked the Venus de Milo and glorified Diana the Huntress and her slim, beautiful limbs and her lithe movements.

He worshiped beautiful ankles, graceful arches, small feet and a charming carriage.

He was ravished by sparkling jewels, painted cheeks and encarmined lips.

In reality, he led a crusade against the fat women who never dieted or exercised, reforming some and driving others to the woods of oblivion.

"The Venus de Milo is not a modern type of beauty," Van Dongen preached to his big circle of devotees.

"The human race is still in evolution. Women no longer lead sedentary lives. They practice numerous forms of activity that were not in vogue among their sex in ancient Greece, and their outlines and general aspect have altered accordingly. Woman is not less beautiful than she was; she has simply changed. If the Venus de Milo came back to the flesh today we would find that she was only a buxom milkmaid.

"We live in a kind of cocktail age today, as a charming woman is simply a kind of strong cocktail to exhilarate us.

"I suggest the following recipe for the cock tail Mademoiselle:

"A pair of bad eyes.

"Two red lips.

"A pair of neat ankles.

"A bit of mystery.

"Lingerie.

"Paint.

"Jewels.

"Silk.

"Furs.

"Add a dash of lilac or amber.

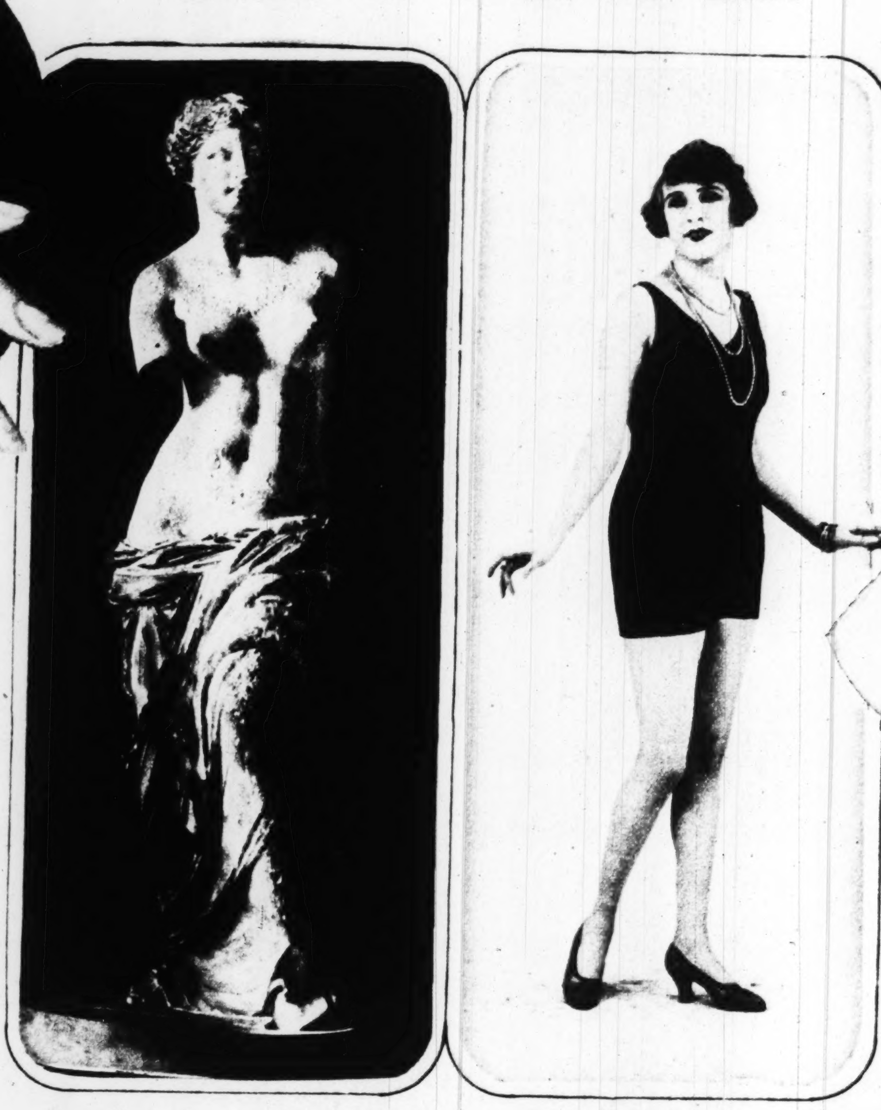
"Shake well."

The Parisienne always wants to look young and girlish, even if she is sixty, and the Dutch artist had caught exactly the elusive spirit of youth they were all seeking.

THE minute she realized that he had set a new fashion, madame or mademoiselle hurried and cut her hair, started to exercise, ordered short skirts and not only changed her outward appearance, but through sport and diet changed the shape of her body as well.

At the same time, the Parisian dressmakers, whose primary objective is always to make women look younger, hurried to adopt the new idea and they made girlish frocks for girls of all ages up to eighty.

A few of the plump ladies died in trying to reduce, but most of them lived, grew slim and became young again.



The Venus de Milo and Mrs. Forrester-Agar.

Maureen Forrester-Agar.

"A beautiful woman today must have the slender limbs of Diana the Huntress," Van Dongen said in an interview not long ago.

"To decide nowadays if a woman is really beautiful one looks at her feet and her line. And then one looks to see if she is graceful in an auto, an airplane, on horseback, and in dancing. Finally one looks at her face, but by looking at her feet one has already seen if she is intelligent or stupid, handsome or ugly, faithful in love or a trifler.

"The women are so lovely now, they know so well how to show their charms and hide their defects, and they powder and paint themselves so cleverly that I always dream of painting portraits with a make-up kit.

"It is an art for a woman to make up, and although I am a professional painter I envy them. The new woman must have the skill of a Rubens to put just the right red on her cheeks, the mastery of a Rembrandt to color her eyelids blue—the blue that gives the sweetness and melancholy of a love-sick doe. And it would take a Murillo or a Velasquez to equal her in painting her eyelashes, blackening her eyebrows and coloring her lips. It seems that even in Paradise Eve bit her lips to make them red and ensnare Adam more easily.

"AS A PAINTER I try to improve the feminine race by the images I create—the long and supple line of the women who participate in all the sports, the big eyes, the long eyelashes, the white, rose or ochre satin skin, the flashing pearls and diamonds — and why shouldn't they glitter in a painting?—the fine silks, satins and velours and the luxurious furs.

"A painting of a woman must be rich and exciting. It must stir all the senses for the foundation of life is sad and dark and so we must have intense joys to lighten us.

"We must use life as a dark background and paint on it in bright colors the beauty that is the light of our lives."

Van Dongen admits that all painters, including himself, put some of their ideal in every picture they paint, and he tells a story about a Parisienne who was at Cairo last year.

"She had nothing to do for several weeks and so she ordered an Egyptian painter to do her portrait," he explains.

"The lady, who was rather stout, tried to counterbalance this tendency by wearing a hat with a long aigrette, to make her thinner still.

"My Egyptian confrere, unhappily, had his own ideal—he liked the plump Oriental type, of course—and after several sittings he modestly asked a question she has never pardoned to this day.

"The interpreter hesitated for several minutes and then he blurted out, 'He wants to know if madame wishes a more pronounced double-chin?'

"I scarcely need to say that this portrait has never been finished, unless the painter cynically finished it after she marched out.

"If he did I should dearly love to see it, and I should love the lady to see it too."

It is Van Dongen who has blazed the trail in France in favor of women cutting their hair.

HE HAS insisted on all his subjects since the war having short hair, as most of them look so much better and younger with it.

"I would even prefer women to have their heads shaved than to have long hair," he has repeated many times.

"I have never seen a woman with her head shaved, but I was passing a barber shop one night and saw a girl in the window putting paper covers over the coifs of all the models in the window. I studied the faces of the figures that had their hair covered with sacks and I found them much more charming than the ones with their hair curled in a dozen different ways.

"When a woman has her hair trimmed short you can clearly see the shape of the head, but when her hair is long or bushy you never know what defects she is hiding.

"I would be horrified to fall in love with a woman with bushy hair, and then discover that her head was covered with lumps."

VAN DONGEN says that when a young man is a neurasthenic he paints in black or gray, and if his malady is curable he adds a little green, which is the color of hope, but he paints poor little things.

"When a man is healthy and full of hope he paints in red. He paints his ideal. He paints the life red, the burning red of passion and lucre. Finally, if this red passion of life does not kill him, he paints in blue and if he still keeps enough of the black and red in his life he can paint as he wishes and what he wishes, for he has become an artist and for him there is beauty everywhere and in everything."

He himself has found beauty everywhere, but sometimes it has been a tragic kind of beauty.

"I have seen beauty around the baccarat table at Deauville, and it has been a sad sight.

"The women who play baccarat know how to dress, how to fix their hair, how to wear jewels, but when they get around the green table they forget everything—they forget even their husbands and sweethearts and, worse still, to powder their nose."

Her eyes closed against the moonlight. He went back to the ledge. Once, when their world stood in blackness, he tiptoed over to the rock and bent over her. For a long time he gazed down upon her, then returned to his ledge.

"Breakfast's ready!"

HE SAT up. The sun was streaming over the plateau and over Sally Flint.

"Of course, Petersen didn't show up?" she asked, as they breakfasted.

"Not a sound all night—except the raucous noises of nature. Well, I didn't think he would. It was just a chance that he'd left a cache."

"Yes. But I took a stroll this morning and found something—not important, I suppose—but interesting."

"What?"

"It's just this," she said. "You see that old tunnel down there?"

"Yes. That's the Grey Ghost"—

"Well, there's a trail to its entrance."

"Naturally."

"But it's a fresh trail!"

"That was why Petersen was so choosy about my looking into it! Why didn't I think of that? Of course, it was his cache—it's empty. But I want the evidence while his tracks are fresh."

It was only two minutes before they were running down to the trail. Burro tracks laced the trail, became a web at the prism before the tunnel door.

Grant knocked the hasp from the door and threw it open. They entered and came upon a big, shapeless hole, running a dozen feet into the tunnel wall. It was timbered with fir trunks. And on its bottom lay a shovel and pick—unrusted.

"Keep the flash going," commanded Grant.

He seemed to be jamming himself into the further wall of that hole—digging with his hands.

"The torch, please!" he called. He took a long look, handed it back, picked up the shovel, made dirt fly. He scooped up a double handful. As he turned toward her his blue eyes blazed.

"The cache?" she asked.

"The cache—no!" he exclaimed. "It's—it's a bonanza! We mustn't take any chances with this air. But everything's all right. More than all right! Come running now!"

When the outer air freshened their nostrils, Grant said:

"THE dunderhead! Cousin Rossiter told Petersen to loot the property. Petersen knew gold when he saw it, but he never thought to find the boundaries of the Ravenal. And the Grey Ghost—the old boy who ran that tunnel and gave up in 1893 just missed the vein he was after by six feet! Then it caved in—right to the face of the vein. And Petersen found it and thought it was part of the Ravenal. And after he'd cleaned out the Ravenal, he started to clean out the Grey Ghost. He hadn't finished that one pocket. There's a fortune left in it. Where there's a pocket there's a vein. Where there's a vein, in this district, there's more pockets. It's a second Ravenal—and it isn't scratched."

"What's to be done next?" she asked.

"Locate. It's anybody's ground, until that's done. Did you see any ink at the cabin?"

"I've a fountain pen in my bag."

"Come on!" He raced up to the plateau. When she entered the cabin he shoved toward her two written sheets and the pen.

"Sign here!" he said.

"I was waiting for you to say that," she said.

"What?"

"Offer me the Grey Ghost—signing these papers does that, doesn't it?"

"Of course!"

"You found that vein. I'd never have known. Of course, the claim is yours"——

"Who saw the trail to the Grey Ghost? And"—here he clutched at an idea—"I'm your employe. You've hired me. Whatever I discover belongs to my employer."

"It wasn't on my property."

"Now look here—while we debate, there's gold in the Grey Ghost, and it belongs to whoever sticks up three lines of writing. I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll sign with you—partnership—and we can thresh out our differences later."

Without further word, they scratched their signatures.

Then they raced again to the Grey Ghost. He affixed one notice to the door. He scooped a hole at the foot of one dilapidated lintel-post, nailed there the other notice, scratched the dirt back.

"Cowdray next—the county seat—Register of Mining Claims. We can make it in an hour. When we're registered, that cinches the matter."

THEIR flivver shot through Silver Moon, bringing gaping heads from windows.

"About that partnership," he announced.

"Yes?" This sounded impersonal.

"Suppose you give the whole claim to me, or I give it to you"—he was sparring for time, and realized it; whereat he floundered ahead—"and we get married."

"Whatever I say to that," she replied, "don't take your eyes off the road and don't you let that dial go below 40. I've been thinking about that, too. Let's."

The flivver checked speed.

"No!" she exclaimed, "go on! I know your intention. But there's a lifetime for that. Let's talk about why we love each other. I assume that you do love me, seeing that you can't possibly be marrying me for my money. Only say it—keep this flivver going!"

"Of course I love you."

"And I love you," she said.

"And you began to feel that way"—— he prompted.

"OH, ABOUT when I tried to shoot you, I suppose. At any rate, by the time we got into that tunnel, it was raging something violent. Even the awful disappointment didn't kill it. Grant, dearest—if I may presume to get so familiar on short acquaintance—that's how I know it's real. And when did you?"

"From the beginning, I suppose. But I didn't know it until I stood looking at you last night—when you were asleep"——

"Who woke you this morning?" she interrupted.

"You."

"Didn't you know I kissed your eyelids? Look out—that's a curve ahead—steady her—now let her go!"

A long, level stretch across the floor of the valley. The dial crawled back to 40—to 42.

"Are you strong and determined enough," asked Sally, "to keep her to 40 and not to jump the road, whatever happens?"

"I promise."

"All right. Hold steady. I'm going to kiss you again—dirt and all—beloved, beloved!"

What American Housewife Did for Hawaiian Pineapple Industry

Now the Second Most Important in the Islands, It May Yet Surpass Sugar Cane—And It's Whole Activity Dates Back Only Twenty-Five Years.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BECAUSE the demand of the American housewife for canned Hawaiian pineapple has increased so noticeably during the last few years, having actually approached a point where preference for the Hawaiian smooth Cayenne variety is so marked that other varieties are practically unknown in local markets, Hawaiian Government officials, bankers and planters are looking forward to the day when, within the next few years, the Hawaiian pineapple, latest of canned fruits, will have reached first place in the production activities of America's nearest Pacific territory.

James Drummond Dole.

The American housewife 25 years ago, it is pointed out, could buy Hawaiian pineapple for neither love nor money. Practically speaking, there was no such thing. Today, due to the enterprise of American planters, notably James Drummond Dole, celebrated Hawaiian pineapple king who has but recently placed with the National Aeronautical Association $35,000 as prize money for the aviator who first succeeds in crossing the Pacific from the American coast to Hawaii, she need go no further than her corner grocery store to obtain this luscious fruit in cans.

The pineapple is not yet Hawaii's first product in point of value or tonnage. Sugar planting still surpasses the cultivation of pineapple as a means of livelihood and employment for thousands of America's Hawaiian charges. But, according to Hawaiian pineapple planters, the continued progressive exploitation of Hawaiian fields and the almost certain increase bound to result in net production during the next five or ten years are not unlikely to result in added importance for the industry as ranked with other occupations.

WHILE the United States, according to recent figures, obtains a sixth or seventh as much sugar cane from Hawaii as it does from Cuba, the influx of pineapple into the United States is practically limited to the fruit raised for the American housewife by Hawaiian planters. With the possible exception of the canned peaches which the average American housekeeper uses as dessert to round out her meal, no canned fruit is as popular as Hawaiian pineapple, a recent survey indicates. Nearly half a billion pounds of this fruit were shipped to the United States during a single year, the latest available figures indicate. This is at the rate of four pounds, or two two-pound cans, for each person in the country.

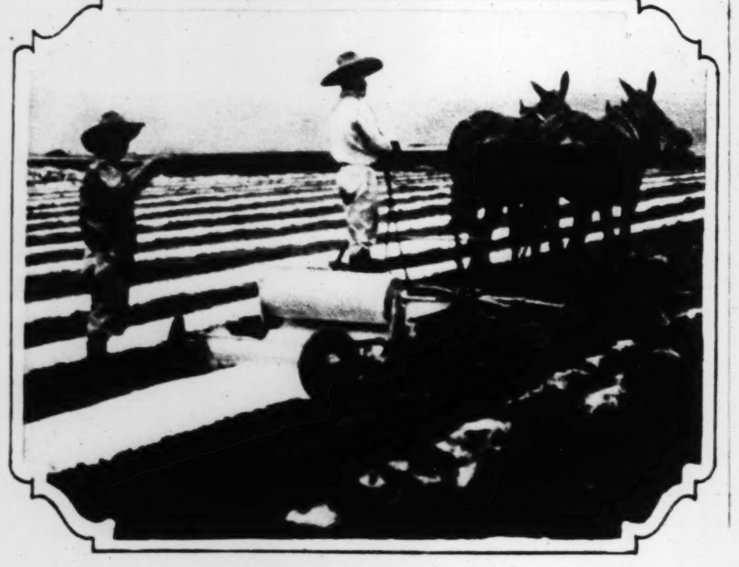
To fulfill the demand occasioned by this increased interest on the part of the American housewife in this newest of fruits, great forward strides are being made, even to the cultivation of a whole island which has hitherto been a barren waste. This project was undertaken by Mr. Dole, who, 25 years earlier, had come to the islands with no great financial resources. This apparently has acted as no great handicap, since, in the meantime, the celebrated pineapple king has succeeded in building up the Hawaiian Pineapple Company, a business originally capitalized at $20,000, to a point where its annual sales total $12,000,000 and where it produces a third of all the pineapples raised in Hawaii.

Considering the fact that five years ago the island of Lanai, sixth largest of the Hawaiian group, was utterly unproductive desert, with no harbor, no roads, no towns, no labor, and much of its good soil covered with enormous cactus, the changes that had taken place in the interim were all the more amazing to Hawaiian legislators when Mr. Dole invited the membership of both houses recently on an inspection tour that revealed to most of them a transformation they little thought possible.

LANAI was no longer a desert isle when the Hawaiian legislators visited it. Far from it, as Mr. Dole told his guests, and as they themselves saw! In place of the scrawny vegetation which formerly covered the island, there were now sufficient pineapple plants to produce 50,000,000 pounds this year. Nor, according to Mr. Dole, is that the limit. In a few years, he expects, Lanai, with all its improvements, will be able to produce a fourth of all the pineapples grown commercially in the South Seas. In point of dollars, this means that Hawaii as a territory will be increasing its annual exports by $10,000,000 from this one source, aside from the civic improvements that accrue to the natives, the value of which is hard to estimate in terms of dollars and cents.

The legislative party arrived at Kaumalapau harbor, one of the first wonders that awaits visitors to Lanai. Kaumalapau harbor was literally blasted out of the sea at a cost of $750,000, one of the greatest engineering feats of modern times. The long wharf was constructed and a breakwater 300 feet long was made with 116,000 tons of rock to guard against the waves. Because of this spectacular feat, however, the big five-ton trucks that are indicative of the modern methods employed in pineapple growing are able to bring load after load of pineapples, ready to be shipped to all parts of the world.

Leaving the harbor, the visitors from the Legislature were further amazed by the sights they saw along a seven-and-a-half-mile concrete road that leads to Lanai City, formerly a cattle ranch. Today it is a spotless town of pink roofs and flower gardens, laid out in squares. The population, composed largely of pineapple workers, is made up of Filipinos, Portuguese, Porto Ricans, Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Koreans, Anglo-Saxons and a Russian—all living together under ideal conditions. Schools and playgrounds, churches and clubs, a city hall and public parks mark Lanai as a progressive American town.



Putting down the paper mulch.

Hawaiian pineapple plantation. —Gilliams Service.

A TRIP to the pineapple fields themselves reveals the further wonders which have been achieved in four short years. Orderly rows of pineapple stretch in all directions in patterns that are so geometrically perfect that visitors wonder how it has been possible to convert straggling cactus into such perfect pineapple cultivation. Guides explain, however, that the fields were dragged clean of the giant cactus growths by means of tractors and chains. Fields in every stage of cultivation, from plants newly set out to plants approaching maturity, reveal on closer inspection a soil that is deep and fertile. Windbreaks of eucalyptus protect the tender young plants. And the dustbreaks of elephant grass are grown along the roadways.

The peculiar appearance of pineapple plantations, with their neatly spaced ranks, row on row, is due largely to the special method which attends their planting and cultivation. For miles upon miles, pineapple plants are grown through a protective coating known as paper mulch. This paper mulch was first contrived on the island of Oahu for use in growing sugar cane, but, upon application, it was found even more adaptable to the growing of pineapples.

Briefly, it consists of a strip of heavy paper, much like that used in roofing, which is laid down in the field for each row of pineapples. The suckers from which the fruit grows are then planted through the paper, which serves to smother weeds, retain the mois and preserve the softness temperature of the soil. The amount of labor necessary to cultivation of this fruit is dered more apparent when it known that Dole's company al

ILLICH PLEADS SELF DEFENSE ON WITNESS STAND

lled Ward Jones Who Attacked Him With Machine Gun, He Tells Marion, Ill., Jury.

OWAN DENIES ANY PART IN MURDER

efense Completes Its Testimony and the Case Is Expected to Go to the Jury Tonight.

MARION, Ill., July 5. — Rado lich, convict and Eural Gowan, ger gangsters, charged jointly h the murder of Ward Jones, a ow gang member in a fight last ober 24, took the witness stand e today in their own defense. Millich admitted shooting Jones death but insisted that he had so only after Jones ... him with a machine gun. Gow- said he was near the scene of shooting but did not ... the ts fired and had no hand in it. Testimony ended at 2:45 o'clock afternoon and, after arguments, the case is expected to go the jury this evening. The State rested its case last Saturday, er presenting testimony of three er Birgerites—Harry Thomas-, Clarence Rone and Ray Hyd, to substantiate the murder rge.

n his statement from the stand ay, Gowan explained his contion with the killing as follows: "I was working at Shady Rest Charlie Birger at $15 a week. the day of the killing I was rying a case of home brew near barbecue. I heard a number shot fired, but they came so ck I didn't see who killed Jones. aw Rado Millich standing near es. Then I got excited. I was aid to tell Sheriff Coleman who shot Jones."

Millich Tells Story on Stand.

Millich related the following ry from the witness stand to-y:

"I had a telephone call from rd Jones to come down to the bin. He said the Parole Agent ted to see me. When I got re I said: 'Where's the agent?' heard some one say 'Rado!' and ked around and saw Jones. He a machine gun. He fired. I a rifle in my hands. I turned fired four times. He kept on ing with the machine gun. 26 25 shots, but missed me. I went ck to Harrisburg. I didn't want get in any more trouble."

The stories of Millich and Gowan d some corroboration among witnesses Saturday. Harry Dungy, a defense witness, o testified against the Shelton others at Quincy and then adtted he had perjured himself, ated that he had been at "Shady st" with Jones and that Jones reatened to kill Millich.

Ray Hyland, a State's witness o used by the defense, told how had driven Jones to "Shady st" the day of the killing. He d Jones held a pistol between knees and kept insisting he was ing to kill someone.

ys Thomasson Admitted Lying

Today, when the trial opened the fense attorneys concentrated eir testimony on Harry Thomas-n, whose story, presented by the ate had been most damaging to illich and Gowan. Dungy reurned to the witness stand and ... d conversation he had with omasson in jail yesterday.

"Thomasson was swearing a ... illing around," Dungy declared, because he said he had sworn t of damn lies for the State."

John H. Crews, another Bir-ngster, was the second witday. He was in jail with Thom- yesterday and related his rience as follows:

"Thomasson was sore bec- State's officials wouldn't go home to see his fo-" was testified. "He said he a dirty deal after swearing of lies for the State."

Thomasson, who is relied an important witness ag- harles Birger in his trial fo urder of Mayor Joe Adam- City, told a straightfo- ry of the Jones murder ., in which there were no ... ions for Millich and Gow-

"I heard shots as I was st- r the barbecue stand," Thomas related. "I went on to ... in and saw Jones lying ... n. Millich was standing ... with a high-powered rifle ... wan had Jones' machine gun ... hands."

The Last Witnesses

The Bradley, former jailer, was the last defense witness, ... the effort to show that Thom- was in jail and not at ... at the time of the killing.
